MISCELLANY.

MISTAKEN SYMPATHY.

"We only know what we have lived." Many years ago we were struck by this remark, made by a writer of close observation. At the time, we but partially understood its meaning. It seemed to us, that we knew a great deal which had not been acquired by actual experience; that by virtue of the imaginative faculty of the mind, we could fully realize the states through which many had passed, notwithstanding we had not felt in our own hearts the actual suffering. In proof of this, we appealed to poetry, and the appeal seemed, at first, triumphant. But we learned, as time went on, that there was often in poetical representations, more of the artist's skill than of exact truth to nature; that it was one thing to imagine a certain set of circumstances, and feel in them, and quite another thing to encounter the circumstances themselves.

A preacher named W., of rather a quiet and reserved turn of mind, had the misfortune to lose his wife, with whom he had lived for the space of twenty-five years. No one but himself knew the greatness of the loss, for no one knew so well the heart that had grown cold in death. She had been to him a second self; and there was a short period, after the freed spirit had gone home, during which it seemed to him as if the cords that bound them together would not unloose themselves. But W. knew in whom he had trusted; and even with the tears upon his cheeks, blessed the hand by which he had been chastened.

It happened, a few days after the dust of the dear departed one had been confined to its kindred dust, that a young preacher named B., who knew W. very well, came into the town where he was stationed.

How is brother W.? he asked of the sister at whose house he was sojourning, soon after his arrival.

As well as could be expected, was replied. You have heard of his loss?

No!
Sister W.—is dead.
Sister W.—exclaimed the young preacher.

Yes. She was buried only three days ago. Ah me! It is a sad loss to poor brother W.—I cannot tell you how my heart aches for him.
Sister W.—dead! And as the preacher said this, in a tone of deep commiseration, he arose, adding as he did so, I must go, immediately, and see brother W.

Yes, do see him, returned the lady, and say what you can in the way of comfort. You may be sure he needs it. I am glad you have come. No one can talk to him as you can.

The preacher full of kind intentions, called upon his afflicted brother. He found him engaged in writing. As he looked up and recognized him, brother D.—saw that over his usually grave face was thrown a deeper shade of sobriety, and that his thoughtful eye had a dreamy aspect.

Brother W.—! he said, in a tone of sympathy, grasping his hand with more than his wonted earnestness.

I am glad to see you brother D.—, returned the other in a slightly quivering voice; and he squeezed firmly and steadily the hands of his spiritual brother.

And I am both glad and sorry, said D.— Glad to meet you but grieved at heart for the deep affliction you have suffered.

The eyes of W.—fell to the floor. There was a pause, in which he said, Sit down, brother D.—

Both seated themselves. As they did so, D.—went on:

But I need not tell you that these light afflictions, which are but for a moment, work out for us a far more exceeding and eternal weight of glory. I need not tell you that in this deep darkness God will bring a light; and in the silence of the unutterable grief, his voice will be heard in words of comfort.

The eyes of W.—remained cast down. He did not speak, nor even show a sign.

Ah! my brother! continued D.—, I know the bitterness of this cup you have been called to drink. I know that you have been called to pass through the darkest place in the valley of affliction. I know that the floods have arisen on your soul, and threatened to overwhelm you. But fear not, the bitter portion shall be sweet; light will break in upon you; the water will be staid. God is purifying you, my brother. He sits as the refiner of silver. He is proving you in the furnace of affliction.

W.—seemed to listen attentively, and the young preacher, warming with his theme, continued:

I know my dear brother, how dreadfully your heart has been riven. To lose her, who has been your pleasant companion for so many years, is, indeed, a terrible affliction. But I know that your heart will find consolation in the sweet reflection that she has gone home first—that she has passed the stormy Jordan, and is safe on the other side—

"Her languishing head is at rest,
Her aching and thinking are over;
Her quiet, immovable breast
Is heaved by affliction no more."

Consoling thought! Oh! let it sink deep, like a healing balm, into your heart. A few years more of labor and toil in your Master's vineyard, and you too, will be called home. What a blessed meeting is in store for you!

Still there was no response. W.—sat, as at first, with his eyes upon the floor, his brow knit, and his lips compressed. D.—paused to reflect a moment, and then began again.

I know—

You don't know any thing about it! replied W.—in a quick, sharp voice, and rising as he spoke, he strode from the room. Shutting the door after him he left the young preacher fairly aghast with astonishment.

For full fifteen minutes was heard the heavy, measured tread of W.—on the floor above, and for the whole time D.—sat below, feeling deeply hurt, and wondering at the strange spirit displayed by his brother. He was about rising to retire when he heard W.—descending the stairs. In a moment after he opened the door and re-entered. As he did so, he extended his hand, and said in a humble voice:

Forgive me my brother! Poor human nature is weak sometimes, too deep for even sympathy. The day may come when you will understand me; though I pray Heaven in mercy, to spare you the knowledge.

D.—went away still wondering. He could not comprehend, fully, the strange scene he had witnessed. Nature had spoken so strongly in brother W.—, that the voice rather stunned his ears than came to him with an intelligible sound. But he said nothing to any one of what had occurred, for he did not wish to expose his brother's weakness and partly in consequence of a certain light flowing into his mind, which gave him to see that he had been, perhaps, too forward and wordy in his efforts to bring consolation to an afflicted heart.

Years passed. But D.—never lost a vivid recollection of the scene between him and brother W.—. As he grew older, and some of the ardor and presumptuousness of youth and early manhood receded, he saw more and more clearly the mistake he had made in brother W.—'s case, and he comprehended more and more clearly the state of mind he had produced, and which manifested itself in such an abrupt and startling manner. But "we only know what we have lived;" and this truth D.—fully realized in the end.

Not long after W.—'s painful bereavement, D.—took to himself a wife, with whom he lived in the tenderest conjugal relation for many years. Children were born to them—goodly sons and daughters—they grew up and gathered around like pleasant olive branches. Then as they attained, one after another, the estate of men and women, they passed forth into the world, and left the watchful guardians and supporters of their youth to stand alone. As if conscious of weakness, the old couple shrunk closer together, and leaned more heavily against each other for mutual support.

A few years more and the wife of D.—began to decline. For a time she drooped; but scarcely had her husband awakened with a trembling fear to the danger that was hovering over his head, ere the summons for her departure came. Dying in the sweet hope of a blessed immortality, Mrs. D.—tenderly conjured her husband to take up his cross and bear it in patient hope a little longer. Pointing upward, she said, almost with her latest breath—

"To patient faith, the prize is sure,
And all that to the end endure
The cross, shall wear the crown."

Though nearly sixty years had laid their burdens upon him, D.—was still actively engaged in the duties of his ministerial office, when this heaviest blow he had yet received fell upon him. For a while he staggered under the concussion. But he trusted not in human strength; he looked to the Strong for aid; and when his weak heart gave way, he felt that the arms of Divine love were thrown around to sustain him.

None but he who has himself passed through the trial, knows what is suffered by one who looks for the last time upon the face of her who has lain for years in his bosom. None but he can have any real sense of that hopeless chill which goes electrically to the heart, when the lips are pressed for the last time upon the marble forehead of the beloved departed. With forced composure, and with something of Christian stoicism, so to speak, D.—gave to the death-veiled face of her he had so loved in life, a last look, and touched her forehead with his lips, feeling as he did so, as if an icy finger were laid upon his heart. A moment his eyes lingered, but the tears blinded them, and hid the face forever. Those who were looking at him saw his knees tremble. But there escaped no moan from his suffering spirit—no sob from his oppressed bosom. Slowly he moved in the little company that followed a beloved sister to the spot where her earthly remains were given to repose; and slowly he returned to the place from whence they had borne her, after the clouds of the valley had been thrown upon her sounding coffin. And in all this time, not one ventured to speak to him of his loss, or to offer a word of consolation; for all felt that words would be but mockery of his woe.

The first night that D.—passed alone after the grave had received its tenant—ah! who has ever passed such a night can ever forget it!—was spent in humble, fearful prayer for strength to bear his affliction. Morning found him sleeping calmly, and with a smile upon his face. He was dreaming of Heaven. He saw the departed one in the midst of an angelic company and she beckoned him away. But when the vision faded and he awoke to the sad consciousness of his bereavement, his stricken heart sank trembling and faint in his bosom. But D.—knew in whom he had trusted, and he looked up and received strength.

The day following was the Sabbath. He had an appointment to preach, and he kept it. In the faithful discharge of his duty, he knew would come sustaining power; and he walked on in the path that was before him, without pausing or turning to the right or the left. But ah! how lonely and desolate he felt at all times. Everywhere he missed the old, familiar, loving face—everywhere he listened for the voice that had grown silent—everywhere he waited for the ministering hand that had been so quick to anticipate his wants. None but himself knew the loss he had sustained, for none knew or could know what the absent one had been to him.

Weeks and months went by, and the old minister, though he never missed an appointment, nor lingered when duty called, was evidently failing. His head whitened more rapidly; his form drooped, and there was an absent, abstracted look about him that was noticed particularly by his old friends.

One day a young preacher, who had heard of his bereavement, but who had not met him since the painful event, happened to be passing through the town where D.—was stationed. He called on him as a thing of course, and, on meeting him, deemed it a part of his duty to refer to the afflictive dispensation, and improve it to the spiritual edification and comfort of his aged brother. His reference to the subject was very much after the style that had been adopted by D.—himself on the occasion we have noticed; and it brought to the latter a most vivid recollection of that circumstance.

The words of the well-meaning preacher, that flowed from no accurate appreciation of his state of mind, jarred harshly on the feelings of D.—. Instead of bringing comfort they fretted him. Nothing was said that his own mind had not over and over again suggested; yet much of it was conveyed in a manner, and by language, that made what was uttered painful rather than consoling.

At last D.—could bear it no longer.—Laying his hand upon the arm of the young man, and interrupting him in the midst of a sentence, he said:

Do you remember old brother W.—?
Very well, replied the young preacher. He often stayed at my father's house when I was a boy.

I was but little older than you are now, added D.—, when brother W.—lost his wife. They had lived together for twenty-five years, and during all that time, there had been no discord between them. I felt deeply for brother W.—in his loss, and I thought I could do no less than offer him some words of consolation. So I went and talked to him, and he seemed to listen with much attention. This encouraged me to go on. But all at once he started up, with the words, "You don't know anything about it!" and left the room. And my young brother he was right. I didn't know anything about it.

D.—said no more. There was an embarrassing pause and the young preacher changed the subject.

"We only know what we have lived."

WOMEN LOOK OUT.—A new and comical writer from San Francisco, says, in a recent letter, which we recommend to the special attention of the ladies:—"The rush to the diggings continues, and the provisions are getting scarce, so much so that fat men begin to be regarded with aversion as they pass. Infants, if plump, would not be safe, as some of the fellows look at the two or three young wimmin we have in the settlement just as if they wanted to eat 'em. Appetite is no respecter of persons, as a young man from St. Joseph's who met his grandmother on the plains, remarked to me the other day. 'The old woman, sez he, 'was dry, very dry, but there's no sakes like hunger, and without intending to make game of old age, I must say, she tasted like venison.'"

FRESH AIR.

Man acts strangely. Although a current of fresh air is the very life of his lungs, he seems indefatigable in the exercise of his inventing powers to deprive himself of this heavenly blessing. Thus he carefully closes every cranny of his bed-chamber against its entrance, and he prefers that his lungs should receive the mixed effluvia from his cellar and larder, and from a patent little modern aquarium, in lieu of it. Why should man be so terrified at the admission of the night air into any of his apartments? It is nature's overflowing current, and never carries the destroying angel with it. See how soundly the delicate little wren and tender robin sleep under its full and immediate influence, and how fresh and vigorous they rise amid the surrounding dew drops of the morning. Although exposed all night long to the air of heaven, their lungs are never out of order, and this we know by the daily repetition of their song. Look at the newly born babe, without any nest to go to. It lives and thrives, and becomes strong and playful, under the unmitigated clemency of the falling dews of the night. I have here a fine male turkey, full eight years old, and he has not passed a single night in shelter. He roosts in a cherry tree, and is always in the prime of health the year throughout. Three dung-hill fowls, preferring this cherry tree to the warm perches in the hen-house, took up their airy quarters with him early in October, and have never since gone to any other roosting-place. The cow and the horse sleep safely on the cold damp ground, and the roe-hack lies down to rest in the heather, on the dewy mountain top. I myself can sleep all night long, bare-headed, under the full moon's watery beams, without any fear of danger, and pass the day in wet shoes without catching cold. Coughs and colds are generally caught in the transition from an overheated room to a cold apartment; but there would be no danger in this movement if ventilation were attended to—a precaution little thought of nowadays.—Waterson's Essays on Natural History.

YOU WILL BE WANTED.

Take courage young man. What if you are but an humble and obscure apprentice—a poor, neglected orphan—a scold and a by-word to the thoughtless and gay, who despise virtue in rags, because of its tatters. Have you an intelligent mind, all untutored though it be? Have you a virtuous aim, a pure desire and an honest heart? Depend upon it, one of these days you will be wanted!

The time may be long deferred. You may grow to manhood, and you may even reach your prime, ere the call is made, but virtuous aims, pure desires and honest hearts are too few and sacred not to be wanted.

Your virtues shall not always be hidden—your poverty shall not always wrap you about as with a mantle—obscurity shall not always veil you from the multitude. Be chivalric in your combat with circumstances. Be ever active, however small your sphere of action. It will surely enlarge with every movement, and your influence will have constant increment.

In the world's broad field of battle,
Be not like dumb driven cattle—
Be a hero in the strife.

Work on, for surely you will be wanted, and then comes your reward. Lean upon the sacred verity, "I have never seen the righteous forsaken, nor his seed begging bread." Never despair, for the lives of good men abundantly show that often when clouds are blackest, and the tempest is fiercest, and hope is faintest, a still small voice will be heard saying, "come hither—you are wanted," and all your powers will find employment. Therefore, take heart, young man, for ere long, "you will be wanted."

TAKING TOLL.

The St. Louis Reveille, gives the following adventure in the life of a young physician.

A snow having fallen, the young folks of the village got up a grand sleighing party to a country tavern at some distance; and the interesting Widow Lambkin sat in the same sleigh, under the same buffalo robe with myself.

"Oh, oh—don't!" she exclaimed, as we came to the first bridge, catching me by the arm, and turning her veiled face towards me, while her little eyes twinkled through the gauze, in the moonlight.

"Don't what?" I asked; "I'm not doing anything."

"Well, but I thought you were going to take toll," replied Mrs. Lambkin.

"Toll?" I rejoined. "What's that?"

"Now, do tell!" exclaimed the widow, her clear laugh ringing above the music of the bells. "Dr. Mellows pretends that he don't know what toll is!"

"Indeed, I don't then," I said, laughing in turn.

"Don't know that the gentlemen, when they go a-sleighing, claim a kiss, as toll, when they cross a bridge! Well I never!"

But shall I tell it all? The struggles of the widow to hold the veil were not sufficient to tear it, and somehow, when the veil was removed her face was turned directly towards my own, and the snow, glistening in the moonlight, and the horse trotting on of himself, the toll was taken for the first time in the life of Dr. Mellows.

Soon we came to a long bridge, but the widow said it was "no use to resist," and she paid up as we reached it.

"But you won't take toll for every span will you, doctor?" she asked. To which the only reply was a practical negative to the question. Did you ever, reader, sleigh-ride with a widow, and take toll at the bridges?

DEACON LONGFACE.

Deacon Longface was a very sedate, precise sort of a personage, a warm admirer of the old Connecticut custom of flogging beer-barrels when they worked Sundays, and a great stickler for the rigid observance of the Sabbath laws; albeit the Deacon, after seeing one fairly seated in the meeting-house, and noting what brothers or sisters of the church were absent, that he might, by a timely remonstrance, convince them of the wrong they had thus committed, would invariably walk, with all becoming gravity, up the broad aisle, quietly enounce himself in the corner of the old fashioned pew, and very devoutly nod assent to the sentiments proclaimed by his parson, until the closing "Amen" awoke him from his quiet repose.

Now it so happened that just opposite the meeting house there lived a respectable snob, named Jack Shoethread, who, for some unaccountable cause, was not a very regular attendant at church. His frequent absence at length aroused the suspicion of good Deacon Longface, who thought it quite likely the secular occupation of pegging souls might have something to do with his disregard of the labors of the good parson for saving souls, and he resolved to ferret out the truth of the matter.

One pleasant Sunday morning, after the congregation had all taken their seats in the church, the Deacon, when taking his final look up the street, to see if all were in, noticed the window of Jack's shop. "Ah!" said he to himself, "he's there at work, now, I'll warrant. I'll just look in and catch him at it." Hastily walking across the street, he stepped upon a block of wood which lay just under the window, which barely enabled him to reach the inside of the window casing with his hands. This he grasped, thinking thereby to draw himself up so that he might look within the room. As all-luck would have it, however, the window just then slid down, catching his hands in such a manner that, after the most violent efforts, he found it impossible to disengage himself.

It may well be imagined that, with the good Deacon, the forenoon seemed none of the shortest or most pleasant, while suspended thus, Ab-salom like, in the air. In the church, too, his unaccountable absence caused no small degree of wonder. So serious were the apprehensions of the parson that something dreadful had happened, that, breaking off in the midst of "Thy," he closed the services, determined to fathom the mystery at once.

The astonishment of the parson and his people may be better imagined than described when on issuing from the church, they beheld the honest Deacon in his unfortunate dilemma.

"Why, Deacon," said the parson, who was first to approach him, "how in the name of wonder came you here?"

"Help me to get loose from this confounded window, and I'll tell you," answered the excited Deacon.

The parson climbed up the block and released the poor Deacon from his unpleasant captivity, when he stepped down and related the whole affair to the congregation, who had clustered around to hear the facts. A loud burst of laughter, from the "wicked" portion of the assembly, was all the condolence he received, and finding that his presence there would not be apt to mend matters much, he picked up his go-to-meeting bag, which he had let fall in trying to disengage himself from the window, placing it on his head wrong side before, started for home at a very un-deacon-like speed. Deacon Longface never afterwards attempted to look into shop windows on Sunday.

Moral—"Mind your own business."

WHAT'LL YOU TAKE ME TO BOSTON FOR?—Who don't know John Barrett, that popular conductor and wag, of the Boston and Lowell Railroad? Just before the starting of his train one day, as he was taking a cup of coffee at the refectory in the station in this city, a young swell stepped up to him, and familiarly slapping him on the shoulder, pompously exclaimed:

"How are you, sir? Do you drive this train?"

"Well—yes," he responded, quietly sipping his coffee, without looking up.

"Ah! you do, eh? What'll you take me to Boston for, then?"

John gave him a single glance, and quickly replied:

"I'll take you there for a monkey, sir; do you wish to go?"

Amid roars of laughter from the bystanders, the young man went away sorrowing.—Lowell Vox Populi.

MANNERS.—I make it a point of morality never to find fault with another for his manners; they may be awkward or graceful, blunt or polite, polished or rustic. I care not what they are, if the man means well and act from honest intentions without eccentricity or affectation. All men have not the advantage of "good society" as it is called, to school themselves in all its fantastic rules and ceremonies, and if there is any standard of manners, it is one founded in reason and good sense, and not upon these artificial regulations. Manners, like conversation, should be extemporaneous and not studied.

THE COURSE OF LECTURES.

We are happy in being able to announce the following course of lectures, which are provided for the Quincy Lyceum for the season.

The introductory lecture will be given on Thursday evening next, by Hon. Horace Mann. The society have also secured the services of the following distinguished gentlemen as lecturers, viz:—Richard H. Dana, Jr., Thomas G. Cary, Robert Rantoul, Jr., Dr. J. V. C. Smith, Hon. Charles F. Adams, Gov. George N. Briggs.

Many of our townsmen, among whom are included the clergy, have been consulted by the Board of Directors, and have consented to lecture.

The tickets for admission are one dollar for the entire course. This furnishes three tickets: one for the admission of a member, one for the admission of a lady, and one for the admission of a child under sixteen years of age. The tickets can be procured at George Newcomb's store, at Quincy Point; at Daniel Baxter & Co's, South District, at C. Lary's, West District; at Josiah Brigham & Co's, and C. Gill & Co's, Centre District; and at the office of the Secretary.

From the above announcement the public may see that the Quincy Lyceum is again in successful operation and seems to have arisen "Phoenix-like" from her own ashes. Her star of glory which once beamed so effulgent in the intellectual firmament, but of late years seemed to have gone down in forgetfulness, is again arisen in splendor and rides ascendant in the heavens. In this age of improvement, so valuable an institution cannot slumber in oblivion. The mists of ignorance are fast fleeing before the blazing sun of intelligence, men are searching for knowledge as for lost treasure, and institutions for learning are now more than at any previous period, the pride and bulwark of our Republic.

The importance of a good Lyceum in a community, who can overrate? What a school for the cultivation of talents, what a source of social enjoyment, what a fountain of morality and decorum, does such an institution furnish! None are so poor that cannot gain admission to its privileges, none so rich but what they can procure more wealth to the mind from its intellectual storehouse. It offers the same benefits to all, and encourages alike in all, that spirit of social equality and freedom of thought and speech, which constitute in a great measure the characteristics of an independent people. In an institution of the kind, Henry Clay, the great statesman of the West, first plumed his intellectual pinions, on which he has for so long a period soared with immortal flight to the very zenith of the political firmament, and upon which he now sits a brilliant orb, may the Venus, whose morning and evening splendor are alike the pride and glory of our Republic.

ENGINE VISIT.—The members of Warren Engine Company, No. 4, of Charlestown, Capt. Poore, accompanied by Bond's Cornet Band of Boston, visited this town, yesterday. They were received at the Depot by the Tiger Company, accompanied by Kendall's Brigade Band of Boston, and after marching through several streets, repaired to Franklin Hall, and partook of a Clam Chowder, and other luxuries beautifully spread before them. Afterwards the Tiger Engine was played by both companies, when they paraded through several streets until the hour of dinner arrived, and then went to the Hancock House. Here they found loaded tables of the best and choicest articles the market affords, cooked in most excellent manner, and served up with taste and comfort. The rival of the landlord of the "Hancock" is hard to be found. Universal praise attends him as a caterer and gentleman. Before leaving the table, songs and sentiments added to the conviviality of the occasion, after which both companies march to the Tiger house, and then adjourned to Franklin Hall, where they joined in a social dance. This continued for some time, when the Warren's took leave by railroad, doubtless highly delighted with their entertainment and reception. That the Tigers dot up things in right shape, none will deny who have had experience—their being proverbial in this particular on all previous occasions. It was indeed a good, quiet, social and pleasant time.

GREAT YIELD.—We have been shown four crooked neck squashes, raised the present season by Thomas M. Marsh, of this town, the gross weight of which was one hundred and eight pounds and three quarters. Separately they weighed—thirty-two and a half pounds—thirty and a half pounds—twenty-five pounds—and twenty pounds and three quarters. Can this be beat?

CALIFORNIANS, HO!—Gentlemen wishing to carve their way through to the Gold region, would find it to their advantage to call on DEXTER, to get their outfit, as he has every thing they can wish for in the Clothing line, and as cheap as can be bought elsewhere, and warranted to be faithfully made. A suit of clothes made to order in twelve hours notice, by the very best of workmen.

VISITORS. The Ancient and Honorable Artillery Company of Boston, will visit this town on Monday next, and the National Lancers on Thursday ensuing, both of which will dine with that admirable provider, George H. French of the Hancock House.

APPOINTMENT.—Hon. Solomon Lincoln, of Hingham, has been appointed by the Governor, Chairman of the Board of Bank Commissioners in place of Charles H. Warren, who declines.

CONVICTION AND SENTENCES FOR ARSON.—At Dedham, on Saturday last, Thacher White, tried for the second time for burning a barn in Randolph, was convicted, the jury being out eight hours, and recommending the convict to mercy. He was sentenced by Judge Bigelow to four years in the State Prison. George W. Clark, for burning a barn in Wrentham, was sentenced to six years in the State Prison. Henry Farnsworth, and his wife Lucina, accomplices in the deed, were sentenced, the husband to three years in the State Prison, and the wife to two years in the House of Correction.

APPOINTMENT.—Elijah F. Hall, Esq., of Weymouth, has been duly appointed a Justice of the Peace for this County. Also, a Commissioner for the States of Maine and New Hampshire, to take Depositions, acknowledgement of Deeds, etc. to be used in those States.

SILKS, SHAWLS, &c.—Ladies and others visiting Boston, and about to purchase Silks, Shawls, and other fashionable and rich goods, will do well to call on F. A. Jones & Co., No. 1 Tremont Row. Their stock is large, and selected with the utmost care for retail trade exclusively. Their motto is, "we will not be undersold." See their advertisement in this paper.

PREMIUM BOOTS.—Messrs. Adam Curtis & Co., of this town, received the first premium for the manufacture of Boots at the late Agricultural Fair at Dedham. They were, indeed, the most excellent specimen in beauty of form—and in perfection of workmanship they were unrivalled. We understand that they were made by Mr. John Wells, (in the employ of Messrs. Curtis & Co.) whose superior skill was made manifest in the production of such an exhibition of his art.

THANKSGIVING.—The Governor of this State, with the advice of Council, has appointed Thursday, the 20th of November next, to be observed in this Commonwealth as a day of Public Thanksgiving and Praise.

MR. CLIFFORD, late minister to Mexico, arrived in Washington on Saturday evening.

Workmen at the various arsenals of construction of the United States are now busily engaged in the alteration of the flint muskets into percussion.

The house of George L. Blaney, in Dorchester, was entered recently, and robbed of twenty-three dollars in bills, a gold piece, and other articles.

Alonso Chapin, Esq., has been appointed Postmaster at East Abington, (Mass.) in place of Franklin Smith, resigned.

An Alabama paper hoists the flag of Henry Clay for President in 1852.

A beautiful case of books has been sent as a present from the Ladies' Dorchester Seamen's Friend Society to the revenue cutter Hamilton.

At a recent meeting of the Directors of the Massachusetts Teachers' Association, William Wells, of Newburyport, William D. Swan, of Boston, and Charles Northend, of Salem, were appointed delegates to the National Convention of Teachers, which meets at Philadelphia, October 17th.

J. A. Holden, Tailor,
HAS just received, and will be constantly receiving,
New and Suitable Goods,
for the coming season, his intention being to have at all times on hand, NEW and FASHIONABLE GOODS, and not let accumulate at his store a quantity of old and unfashionable merchandise, such as will be found with the majority of country tailors.
He DOES HIS OWN CUTTING, which he flatters himself he has no need to boast of, inasmuch as it is now too well known to need any man's praise,
and least of all his own.
He invites the attention of such as expect Punctuality and Good Workmanship,
FOR CASH,
such being his rule of business,—the REDUCED RATES at which he sells rendering any other mode impracticable. All who thus employ him, he is con-

For San Francisco, California,
October 10th.
THE fast sailing, coppered and copper-
fastened Schooner, LAMARTINE,
—Charles H. Brown, Master,—will sail
as above and will take twelve to fifteen passengers at very low rates.
The vessel is staunch, strong and well furnished in every particular, built at Portsmouth, (N. H.) of the best White Oak, in July, 1848; will furnish the best of provisions and water, and accommodate the above number comfortably. It being the most favorable season of the year, and having secured the services of Capt. UNDERWOOD, who has had much experience on the Pacific Coast and doubled the Cape sixteen times, it is expected she will make a speedy and safe passage. Each passenger will be allowed the bulk of three barrels, and can remain on board after arrival,
ten days free of charge.
The above offers a fine chance for a Company of twelve persons,—as a room will be fitted for their expression,—to form for mutual protection and take with them such articles as are needed for mining or other purposes, provisions, etc., thereby making the passage pleasant and agreeable, and save one half the expense they would incur as the Indians.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.
INTEMPERANCE.

To lay the fiend intemperance bare,
And wing the caution on the gale,
To guard against the tempter's snare.

To all who boast a father's heart,
We show the monster up to you;
And warn you that his venom'd dart
May pierce your cherish'd offspring through.

Ye mothers! hear our warning cry!
Regard the objects of your care;
The plotting fiend is ever nigh,
Beware his subtle arts! beware!

Unthinking youth! he aims at you,
And courts your love in friendship's guise;
We hold the traitor up to view,
And show you where your danger lies.

Ye fathers, mothers, children dear,
Will you become the spoiler's prey?
Let your proud answer banish fear,
"We spurn the fiend! Away! away!"

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

TIRADE OF THE TINLESS.

'Tis strange to see, where'er you be,
How much importance clings,
Not to one's self, but dirty pelf,
The transitory things.
To have it is the greatest good,
To be without, a sin;
'Tis to be homely, base and rude,
And all for want of tin.

My neighbor A., just o'er the way,
Is quite a pattern man;
'Tis needless I should ever try
His virtues here to scan.

But people whisper that in deal
He'll shave beneath the skin;
That for the poor he cannot feel—
But then, he's got the tin.

Now as for me, though all can see
I'm clever all day long,
And good enough at stories tough,
And better at a song;
Yet still, for friends, with neighbor A.,
I hardly can begin;
I see them flocking o'er the way—
Alas! I need the tin.

Quite young in life I sought a wife
To keep my elbows whole;
Celibacy I thought for me
Was getting rather dull.

I tried all arts to please the girls,
I was resolved to win;
I viewed their feet, their waists, their curls,
But sharper looked for tin.

Miss Lucy made a great parade,
Eliza played and sang;
Kate had a way, smart thing to say,
Peg's tongue had quite a tang,
But oh, amid the virgin throng,
Wherever I had been,
None charmed like Miss Almira Strong;
For she had lots of tin.

When I proposed, my love disclosed,
Said she, "you can't come in!"
I found the boot on 't'other foot,
'Twas I that lacked the tin.
I didn't faint, I didn't swear,
But vow'd through thick and thin,
I'd sail for California, where I'd dig up lots of tin.

ANECDOTES.

Old Deacon Havens, last harvest time, had a mowing bee, and among the party were two sons of Debal, who were more inclined to cut ciphers than clover. One trick consisted in filling the tin horn with soft soap, and then slightly stepping the orifice with cotton. When noon came the deacon seized the instrument, and gave a blast which scattered the contents far and near. "To say that he was displeased, would but slightly describe his feelings. He was enraged; for the first time in his life he swore! Says he: 'Gentlemen, I am an old man—I am the head of the Sunday School, and have preached the gospel for five and thirty long years—but curse me, if I can't lick any man who soft-soaped that trumpet!'

During the President's stay at Pittsburgh the ladies paid their respect to him. A gentleman introduced a pretty girl, but added playfully, "She is a democrat, General." The old veteran kissed her on both cheeks, adding with great glee, "I always kiss the democratic ladies twice—there are so few of them. Why, had it not been for the ladies, I should not have been where I am. I owe my success to them." "General," said a gentleman standing by, "I wish you would appoint me chairman of the kissing convention." "Colonel," replied he, "don't you know the old saying—if we want a thing done we send our man to do it; but if we want it well done we do it ourselves."

A gentleman, during the extreme hot weather of the past summer, stepped into a fashionable dining saloon and called for a "pair of fresh fish," and on demanding his bill, suggested that he would pay for three. "Quite a mistake, I assure you," said the attentive proprietor. "You had but two."

"Allow me to correct you, if you please," replied the customer, placing a bill on the counter, "I had two porgies, and one snail."

We have heard of an old lady who was so very particularly neat, that she always nicely washed her eggs before she broke them into the pan to fry; and was always particularly careful, moreover, to spit in the pan to see if the fat was just exactly hot enough to fry them.

A New York editor, noticing the marriage of Mr. Hawks and Miss Thomas, expressed a hope that they will raise a young brood of Tommy-Hawks.

D. BAXTER & Co.
Quincy, March 24.P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR
Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE, it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and Durability, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.

A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the

Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory

of the Agent in this town.
E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIST'S, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

Cold Weather is Coming !!
GET A STOVE !!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE!" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish, on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook—as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

New England Air-Tight Cooking Stove, both by myself and many of my friends, for the past two years, I can with the greatest confidence recommend it to my numerous customers, with the full assurance that they will find in its use every thing they could desire, and I agree that if any use this and do not find full satisfaction, I will take them back and refund the purchase money. I would invite all who are about purchasing this desirable article to call on the subscriber, (who is sole agent for this town,) and examine the above mentioned Stoves; where will also be found a GREAT VARIETY of other Stoves, both

among which is a new and elegant

Parlor Stove, for Wood or Coal, with or without Ovens.
Also—FURNACES, BAKERS, BRITANIA & JAPANNED WARE; TIN AND SHEET IRON WORK Made to Order,

As good as the Best.

MISCELLAN

THE MOTHER'S LAST

Thirty years ago there was a city of London, a lad about four years of age. He was dressed in a dark coat that hid all his under apparel, appeared to have been made for a gentleman rather than a wester. His boots were worn with dust from the high road on an old hat, with a black band, strapped strangely with the color of his head. A small bundle, end of a stick, and thrown over was the whole of his equipment. He looked at the building, and seeing steps of one of the doors, he went in; but the coming in, and half a dozen persons, before he had unyoking his bundle, made spot for the next open space, where he was in closed.

Having taken from the bundle a bit of bread and cheese, which eat with a ravenous appetite, he sat self by looking at the building, but all the eager curiosity of one who sees similar objects.

The appearance of the youth my curiosity, and gently opened stood behind him without his being conscious of my presence. I rummaging his pockets, and finding trouble, brought out a roll of paper. He opened. After satisfying himself copper coin was safe, he came again, saying to himself in a low voice, I will remember your last was saved in two pence earned. He with me before I part with you.

Pleased with this remark, he laid the lad on the shoulder. He was about to move away, when I said, "My good lad, you seem tired, stranger in the city."

"Yes sir," he answered, putting his hat. He was again about to move, when I said, "You need not hurry away."

Served. "Indeed, if you are willing to work, I can perhaps what you require."

The boy stood mute with astonishment, coloring to such an extent as freckles of a sunburnt face stain.

"Yes, sir!"

"I wish to know," I added with a more of manner, I could assume are anxious to find work, for I am young to assist my coachman."

The poor lad twisted and twined about, and after having dully plied his head, managed to utter an of an answer, that he would be mentioned not a word in the hearing him with regard to the putting him into the house, I sent man, to whose care I entrusted.

Nearly a month had passed, and conversation occurred, to make same inquiries of the garding the conduct of the lad.

"A better boy never came in,

MISCELLANY.

THE MOTHER'S LAST GIFT.

Thirty years ago there was seen to enter the city of London, a lad about fourteen years of age. He was dressed in a dark smock frock, that hid all his under apparel, and which appeared to have been made for a person evidently taller than the wearer. His boots were smothered with dust from the high road. He had on an old hat, with a black band, which contrasted strangely with the color of the covering of his head. A small bundle, fastened to the end of a stick, and thrown over the shoulder, was the whole of his equipment. As he approached the Mansion House, he paused to look at the building, and seating himself on the steps of one of the doors, he was about to rest awhile; but the coming in, and going out of half a dozen persons, before he had time to finish untying his bundle, made him leave that spot for the next open space, where the doors were in part closed.

Having taken from the bundle a large quantity of bread and cheese, which he seemed to eat with a ravenous appetite, he amused himself by looking at the building before him, with all the eager curiosity of one unaccustomed to see similar objects.

The appearance of the youth soon attracted my curiosity, and gently opening the door, I stood behind him without his being in the least conscious of my presence. He now began rummaging his pockets, and after a deal of trouble, brought out a roll of paper, which he opened. After satisfying himself that a large copper coin was safe, he carefully put it back again, saying to himself in a low voice, "Mother, I will remember your last word: 'A penny saved is two pence earned.' It shall go hard with me before I part with you, old friend."

Pleased with this remark, I gently touched the lad on the shoulder. He started, and was about to move away, when I said:

"My good lad, you seem tired, and likewise a stranger in the city."

"Yes sir," he answered, putting his hand to his hat. He was again about to move forward.

"You need not hurry away, my boy," I observed. "Indeed, if you are a stranger, and willing to work, I can perhaps, help to find what you require."

The boy stood mute with astonishment; and coloring to such an extent as to show all the freckles of a sunburnt face stammered out,

"Yes, sir."

"I wish to know," I added with all the kindness of manner, I could assume, whether you are anxious to find work, for I am in want of a youth to assist my coachman."

The poor lad twisted and twirled his bundle about, and after having duly placed his hand to his head, managed to utter an awkward kind of an answer, that he would be very thankful.

I mentioned not a word about what I had overheard with regard to the penny, but inviting him into the house, I sent for the coachman, to whose care I entrusted the new comer.

Nearly a month had passed after this meeting and conversation occurred, when I resolved to make some inquiries of the coachman, regarding the conduct of the lad.

"A better boy never came into the house, sir; and as for wasting anything, bless me, sir, I know not where he has been brought up, but I really believe he would consider it a sin if he did not give the crumbs of bread to the poor birds every morning."

Determined to see Joseph myself, I requested the coachman to send him to the parlor.

"I understand, Joseph, that you can read and write."

"Yes, sir; thanks to my poor, dear mother. 'You have lately lost your mother, then.'"

"A month that very day when you were kind enough to take me into your house, an unprotected orphan!" answered Joseph.

"Where did you go to school?"

"Sir, my mother has been a widow ever since I can remember. She was a daughter of the village school-master, and having to maintain me and herself, with her needle, she took the opportunity of her leisure moments to teach me not only how to read and write, but to cast up accounts."

"And did she give you that penny, which was in the paper that I saw you unroll so carefully at the door?"

Joseph stood amazed, but at length replied with emotion, and a tear started from his eye—

"Yes, sir, it was the very last penny she gave me."

"Well, Joseph, so satisfied am I with your conduct, that not only do I pay you a month's wages willingly for the time you have been here, but I must beg of you to fulfil the duties of collecting clerk to our firm, which situation has become vacant by the death of a very old and faithful assistant."

Joseph thanked me in the most unassuming manner, and I was asked to take care of his money, since I had promised to provide him with suitable clothing for his new occupation.

It will be unnecessary to relate how, step by step, this poor country lad proceeded to win the confidence of myself and partner. The accounts were always correct to a penny; and whenever his salary became due, he drew out of my hands no more than he absolutely wanted, even to a penny. At length he had saved a sufficient sum of money to be deposited in the bank.

It so happened that one of our chief customers who carried on a successful business, required an active partner. This person was of eccentric habits, and considerably advanced in years. Scrupulously just, he looked to every penny, and invariably discharged his workmen, if they were not equally scrupulous in their dealings with him.

Aware of this peculiarity of temper, there was no person I could recommend but Joseph; and after overcoming the repugnance of my partner who was unwilling to be deprived of so valuable an assistant, Joseph was duly received into the firm of Richard Fairbrothers & Co. Prosperity attended Joseph in this new undertaking, and never suffering a penny difference to appear in his transactions, he so completely won the confidence of his senior partner, that he left him the whole of his business, as he expressed it in his will, "even to the very last penny."

DOMESTIC ECONOMY.

The following article, from a New York journal, presents most fully the system which many ladies seem to act upon in domestic arrangements. The rule upon "bargains," particularly, is carried out on all occasions by more than one of our acquaintances, who consider it a sufficient plea, in every case, "that it was such a bargain."

There may be some satire—but there is a deal of truth in the remarks of the writer, who probably has been a sufferer from short allowances and cheap purchases himself, if we may judge from the feeling manner in which he speaks:—

"Domestic economy, as practiced by the feminine moderns, consists in saving at the spittoon and disburthing through the burg. It is not inconsistent with domestic economy to give a ball or soiree to a hundred people, for whom you care not a button, and who care not a button for you, provided you can save the amount in driftnets within six months, by putting your servants on short allowance, dining the children on soup maigre, cutting off your parlor fire by living in the basement, selling the kitchen stuff, empty bottles, old clothes and rags of the establishment, and screwing down every tradesman with whom you deal one notch below a living profit. If a cashmere shawl can be had at a bargain—say an article as good as Mrs. A's five hundred dollar one, for four hundred dollars—it would be a solecism in domestic economy not to purchase it. Envy and pride are the sources of household and personal magnificence; and to gratify these fashionable virtues, at the lowest possible figure, is one of the great ends of domestic economy. The omission of meat for dinner twice a week, the substitution of salt butter for fresh; and abstinence from eggs, with a few other mortifications of the family flesh for a year or so, will go near to pay for the sumptuary luxury. If necessary, toll may be taken at the tea-pot and the sugar-bowl. Should the maids complain of the severe regimen, dismiss them. Plenty of drudges may always be found who will starve cheerfully on very moderate wages."

"It is a rule in domestic economy to buy all 'bargains' in dry goods. The lady who neglects to purchase any fabric convertible into raiment that can be had one-half per cent. under the market price, is ignorant of the first principles of domestic economy. Even if she be a bride, and the article is cheap, it may come in use some time. May—must; it would be flying in the face of Providence to doubt it."

"If the laudable practice of buying every thing that is cheap threatens to produce a vacuum in the domestic treasury, it may be as well to persuade the husband that smoking leads to consumption, and gin-cocktails to an early grave. A word thrown in about the danger of playing billiards and rolling ten-pins in cases of aneurism, and other diseases of the heart, generally takes effect. The lady's next step should be to induce her spouse to fee her daily to the amount he is accustomed to spend in these extravagances. This is the finesse, the Talleyrand touch of domestic economy."

"It is really incredible to those who do not understand the science, what a great show may be made with moderate income, by a judicious curtailment of family comforts, and a cheapside surveillance of the odds and ends."

"A 'love of a bonnet' may be screwed out of a family of half a dozen children in less than a month, by a due regard for their health in sending them to bed early without their suppers."

"To sum up, the grand axioms of domestic economy are these: Make the greatest possible 'splash' at the least possible cost—pinch and screw at home in order to shine abroad—sacrifice every comfort for the sake of exciting neighborly envy—live on half rations for six months in order to give one extravagant banquet at the conclusion of the penance—and finally, after a life of concealed privations and public peacockism, leave enough behind you when you die to pay for a silver plate on your mahogany coffin, and for the privilege of decomposing in an aristocratic sepulchre."

A MAN OVERBOARD.

It was one of those thunder and lightning gales at night, when for a moment all would be as light as day, and for a moment after so dark that you could not see an oar's length from the vessel. The Captain was forward and all hands except the cook and myself were aloft.

The ship was pitching madly, and the waves were topping up sometimes as high as the yard arm, and then dipping away with a whirl, under our keel, that made every timber in the vessel quiver. The thunder was rolling like ten thousand cannons, and every now and then as I said, half the sky would light up in a stream of fire that glared over the tops of the waves, and glistened on the wet deck, and the spars—lighting up every thing so plain that I could see the men's faces at the main top, and catch glimpses of the reefers on the yard arm—clinging like death—then all would be the most horrible darkness."

You could hear the spray spitting against the canvass, and the great waves breaking on the weather bow, and the howl of the wind through the rigging, and now and then when a gasket gave way, and the sail belied to leeward, you could hear the canvass splitting like the crack of a musket.

You could hear, too, the Captain, forward, screaming out orders, and the mate in the cross-trees, screaming them over till the lightning came, and the thunder—and deadened their voices, as if they'd been a pair of little chirping sparrows.

It was in one of those flashes that I saw a hand on the yard-arm lose his foot hold, as the ship gave a plunge, but his arms were clinched around the spar. Before I could see more, the blackness came over, and the thunder broke with a crash that had deafened me. I thought I heard something like a tiny howl, as it died off; and sure enough, at the next flash of lightning that came in a moment, what should I see on the top of one of the waves alongside but Tom Meeks; the lightning glared on his face, so that I could see the look in the poor fellow's eye.

As good luck would have it, he had caught hold of the studding sail sheet, as he fell, and as we pitched I could see it slipping off the coil upon the deck.

I shouted like mad—"a man overboard!" and just had time to catch the rope, when we could see nothing again. I was a boy then and couldn't hold by the rope; the sea was too high and the man was too heavy for me.

I shouted, and shouted, and shouted, and felt the sweat starting over my body, as the rope slipped out through my hands. Poor Tom had been my messmate for a year and we all loved him.

Presently the Captain felt his way aft, and took hold with me, just as the coil was nearly spent, and we pulled upon him; and the cook came and we three hauled together on him. Poor fellow! it must have been a desperate work for him; for the ship was drifting at a prodigious rate, and we pulling him at the same time; but he clung like a man.

By and bye, at a flash, we saw him on a crest three oars' length away from the vessel.

"Hold on, my man!" shouted the Captain.

"For God's sake be quick," said the man, and he went down in a trough of the sea. And we pulled the harder; and the Captain kept all the while calling him to keep up courage and hold on strong. But in the hush, we could hear Tom say—"I can't hold on much longer; I'm most gone."

We called out the more to him to hold on; and presently we got him to where we could most lay hold of him, and were only waiting for a good lift of the sea to bring him up, when the poor fellow groaned out—"It's no use; I can't; good bye!" and a wave tossed the end of the rope clear up upon the bulwarks.

At the next flash we saw him go down under the water.

I shall never forget how he looked—for we saw him plain when he said "Good bye!" and let go his hold.

ALEXANDER SELKIRK.

The original Robinson Crusoe, was born at Leghorn at the north of Scotland in 1677. Having gone to sea in his youth, and in the year 1703 being sailing master of the ship Cinque Ports, Captain Stradling, bound for the South Seas, he was put on shore on the Island of Juan Fernandez, as a punishment for mutiny. In that solitude he remained four years and four months, from which he was at last relieved and brought to England, by Captain Woods Rogers. He had with him on the island, his clothes and bedding, with a fire-lock, some powder, bullets, and tobacco—a hatchet, knife, kettle, his mathematical instruments, and a Bible. He built two huts of pimento trees, and covered them with grass, and in a short time lined them with skins of goats which he killed with his musket, so long as his powder lasted, (which at first was but a pound) when that was spent he caught them by speed of foot. Having learned to produce fire by rubbing two pieces of wood together, he dressed his victuals in one of his huts, and slept in the other, which was at some distance from his kitchen. A multitude of rats disturbed his repose, by gnawing his feet and various parts of his body; which induced him to feed a number of cats for his protection. In a short time these became so tame that they would lie about him in hundreds, and soon delivered him from his enemies the rats. Upon his return, he declared to his friends that nothing gave him so much uneasiness as the thought that when he died, his body would be devoured by those very cats he had with so much care tamed and fed. To divert himself, he would sometimes dance and sing among his kids and goats; at other times retire to devotion. His clothes and shoes soon wore out by running through the woods; in the want of shoes he found little inconvenience, as the soles of his feet became so hard that he could run every where without difficulty—as to clothes, he made himself a coat and cap out of goat skins; sewed them with thongs of the same, cut into proper form with a knife; his only needle was a nail. When his knife was worn to the back, he made others as well as he could, of some iron hoops that had been left on the shore, by beating them thin and grunting them on stones. By his long seclusion from intercourse with men, he had so far forgot the use of speech, that the people on board of Captain Rogers' ship could scarcely understand him, for he seemed to speak his words by halves. The chest and musket which Selkirk had with him on the island are now in possession of his grand nephew, John Selkirk, weaver at large.—Scotlar's Account of Scotland.

AMSTERDAM—Like a toad, the city sits squat upon the marshes; and her people push out the waters, and pile up the earth against them, and sit quietly down to smoke. Ships come from India and ride at anchor before their doors, coming in from sea through the pathways they have opened in the sand, and unloading their goods on quays that quiver on the bogs. Amsterdam is not the most pleasant place in the world when a June sun is shining hot upon the dead water of its canals, and their green surface is only disturbed by the sluggish barges or sloops of the tidy housemaids. I went through the streets of the merchant princes of Amsterdam. A broad canal sweeps through the centre, full of every kind of craft, and the dairy women land their milk from their barges on the quay in front of the very proudest doors. The houses and half of the canals are shaded with deep leaved lindens, and the carriages rattle under them, with the tall houses on one side and the waters on the other. Nowhere are girls' faces prettier than in Holland; complexions pearly white, with just enough red to give to them a healthier bloom, and their hands are as fair, soft, and tapering as their eyes are full of mirth, witchery, and fire.—Beatty's Miscellany.

THE ROYAL GOATS.—In 1813, a pair of beautiful white male and female goats were presented to Her Majesty by the Shah of Persia. They were immediately placed under the care of Mr. Myers, riding master to the Prince Consort, to be trained to run in double harness: a tastefully and lightly constructed petite carriage having shortly before been built for their Royal Highnesses the Prince of Wales and the infant Princesses. The animals, however, were restive and unmanageable. All the pains and care which were bestowed upon them by Her Majesty's command, had no effect; and the result was, that they were given up as incorrigible, and turned out in the great park. Although less than five years have now elapsed since that period, there is now a flock of between 200 and 300 splendid milk white goats in the Royal domain, originating from the parent stock—the couple which were presented to Her Majesty in the autumn of 1813.

A CURIOUS FACT.—The whole population of the United States could be compressed into a space of one square mile, and each individual be allowed sufficient room to breathe in. Fifteen inches square would suffice for this—There are 1700 yards in a mile, which being multiplied, gives 63 360 inches; and this product divided by 15, the number of inches of space occupied by each individual, would place 4224 of them in a row to extend the length of a mile; and the same number of rows to complete a square mile would consequently number 17,842,576.

RESPECT FOR ART.—A nobleman having called on Holbein while he was engaged in drawing a figure from life, was told that he could not see him, but must call another day.—Foolishly taking this answer as an affront, he very rudely rushed up stairs to the painter's studio. Hearing a noise, Holbein opened his door; feeling enraged at his lordship's assumption and intrusion, he pushed him backwards from the top of the stairs to the bottom. However, reflecting immediately on what he had done, he repented to the king. The nobleman, who pretended to be very much hurt, was there soon after him, and having stated his complaint, would be satisfied with nothing less than the artist's life; upon which the king firmly replied, "My lord, you have not now to do with Holbein, but with me; whatever punishment you may contrive by way of revenge against him shall surely be inflicted upon yourself.—Remember, pray, my lord, that I can whenever I please, make seven lords of seven ploughmen, but I cannot make one Holbein of even seven lords."

TREES FOR ORNAMENT.—Set out as many trees for ornament this fall as you can. Every healthy tree properly transplanted will be worth a dollar to you, and will increase to that amount the value of your property in the estimation of every person of good taste. Elms, maples, willows, firs, and other forest trees should be intermixed about your premises—the proper time for transplanting which, with the exception of the fir, is now near at hand. You can dig your holes, and get ready your compost for filling in, during leisure hours and the soil removed from the holes, by being exposed for some months to the ameliorating action of the atmosphere, will be highly increased in value by the fructifying agents it imbibes, and ensure a more healthy action of the roots with which it is brought in contact, the ensuing spring. The fall of the leaf is a proper time to perform the business of transplanting.

AN APOLOGY.—When John Scott (Lord Eldon) was at the bar, he was remarkable for the sang froid with which he treated the Judges. On one occasion, a junior counsel, on hearing their Lordships give judgment against his client, exclaimed that "he was surprised at such a decision." This was construed into contempt of court, and he was ordered to attend at the bar next morning. Fearful of the consequences, he consulted his friend John Scott, who told him to be perfectly at ease, for he would apologize for him in a way that would avert any unpleasant result. Accordingly, when the name of the delinquent was called, John rose and coolly addressed the assembled tribunal: "I am very sorry, my Lords, that my young friend has so far forgot himself as to treat your honorable bench with disrespect; he is extremely penitent, and you will kindly ascribe his unintentional insult to his ignorance. You must see at once that it did originate in that. He said he was surprised at the decision of your Lordships! Now, if he had not been very ignorant of what takes place in this court every day—had he known you but half as long as I have done, he would not be surprised at anything you did!"

ENEMIES.—Have you enemies? Go straight on, and mind them not. If they block up your path, walk around them, and do your duty regardless of their spite. A man who has no enemies is seldom good for anything; he is made of that kind of material which is so easily worked, that every one has a hand in it. A sterling character—one who thinks for himself, and speaks what he thinks—is always sure to have enemies. They are necessary to him as fresh air; they keep him alive and active. A celebrated character, who was surrounded with enemies, used to remark—"They are sparks which if you do not blow, will go out of themselves. Let this be your feeling while endeavoring to live down the scandal of those who are bitter against you. If you stop to dispute, you do but as they desire, and open the way for more abuse. Let the poor fellows talk; there will be a reaction if you perform but your duty, and hundreds who were once alienated from you will flock to you and acknowledge their error."—Alexander's Messenger.

NIGHT.—Night is beautiful itself, but still more beautiful in associations. It is not linked, as day is, with our cares and our toils—the business and bitterness of life. The sunshine brings with it action; we rise in the morning, and our task is before us; and night comes, and with it rest. If we leave sleep, and ask not for dreams of forgetfulness, our waking is in solitude, and our employment is thought. Imagination has thrown her glories around the midnight—the orb of heaven, the silence, the shadows, are steeped in poetry. Even in the heart of a crowded city, where the moon-light falls but upon the pavement and roof, the heart would be softened, and mind elevated, amid the loveliness of night's deepest and stillest hours.

EXPORTS OF ICE AND COTTON GOODS.—The exports of ice from Boston for the month of September has been 4471 tons, and the total so far this year 56,452 tons, an increase of 8734 tons over same time last year. The value of exports of cotton goods for the month of September last was $165,069 59, and the total value since January last, $1,225,445 57, against $1,590,270 66 in the same period last year. Of the exports last month, $35,404 78 worth was to the East Indies; $36,564 62 to Rio Janeiro, $28,000 66 to Central America, $21,692 to Smyrna, and $14,899 88 to River Plate.

FREE SOIL MEETING.

Notwithstanding the foul weather last Saturday evening, a large number of citizens met in the Town Hall to listen to the Hon. C. F. Adams.

At the outset he deprecated the idea that he was about to make a "formal" speech. He proposed simply to remark on a few leading points of public interest. He spoke for an hour and a half. He spoke with great felicity, at times, emitting flashes of burning eloquence.

He dissected the address of the Whigs, put forth by their late convention at Worcester. He laid bare its marvellous bones. He exposed its numerous misstatements. He held up to our derision the idea it contains that the Whig party was the party of freedom. Look at their present situation—Massachusetts in the arms of the slave power!

He alluded to the significant silence of the address on the great question of the extension of slavery, and its professions of regard to the Union. He said he gave no heed to the cry "the Union is in danger." Whenever a stupendous outrage upon the rights of man was about to be perpetrated there were to be heard protestations of love and devotion to the Union. Thus it was that under the error and protection of a grand and patriotic sentiment, the slave power has made its insidious advances—has extended its lines and entrenched itself so securely that it now mocks at its enemies and defies their power.

He denounced the language and spirit of the address as unmanly and undignified. Yet from the beginning to the end of his remarks, he spoke of the Whigs as one more in sorrow than in anger—as one who had many endearing associations with them. But it was their wanton abandonment of their professed principles—their repeated declarations of opposition and enmity to the slave power kept to the ear but broken to the hope that had driven him with thousands of others from their ranks.

A. SOUTHERN.

HUNT'S MERCHANTS MAGAZINE AND COMMERCIAL REVIEW.—The only fault we find with this popular periodical, is that its title or name fails to express fully its scope. The range of topics it embraces is much wider than one who had not become familiar with the contents of past numbers and volumes, would naturally infer. The field of the merchant, it is true, is a wide one, and commerce in its broad significance, has much to do with a great variety of interests. We think, however, if the projector had called it the Merchant's and Statesman's Magazine, he would have more comprehensively expressed the real character of the work.

But notwithstanding this, it has found its way into the hands of the leading statesmen, in our own and other countries, and is appreciated by them as much perhaps as though it bore the cognomen we have indicated, as the most appropriate. This circumstance is not to be wondered at, when we consider how large a portion of the legislation of States and Nations is connected with the commercial and industrial interests of the world. The tariff, the currency, manufactures, railroad corporations, and the intercourse between one country and another, are all subjects of legislation and have all been ably treated in this magazine; so that the statesman who speaks intelligently on any of these points, as a matter of course has found it an indispensable book of reference, and thus come to appreciate and value it as an important adjunct in his political life. Take for instance the October number of the Merchant's Magazine, now before us, and we find every article almost equally as important to the statesman as to the merchant;—it is only necessary for us to quote the titles of the papers in that number to illustrate our position.

The first in the number is on "the Causes of Commercial Crisis," which is followed by another on "the debts and finances of the States of the Union," another on "the finance of Cheap Postage," another touching "Whitney's Railroad project," and another on the "Consular, or Commercial cities of China," and so on, to the end, furnishing information as important and available to the statesman and diplomatist, (perhaps more) as to the merchant and business man.—Brooklyn (N. Y.) Freeman.

The Newfoundland fishery has turned out more successful than for many years past. The number of passengers who have arrived at the port of New York since the 1st of April has averaged $26 a day, making an aggregate of 163,493.

Warren Infantry, is the name adopted by the new company just organized in Roxbury, under the command of Captain William Raymond Lee.

It is said that tomato vines, taken up before frost, put in pots, treated as house plants, and set out in the spring, will bear earlier and richer fruit for several successive years.

From the commencement of the dog law last summer, in New York City, three thousand five hundred and twenty of the poor creatures have been sacrificed. For the same period of time last year only two hundred sixty-nine were destroyed.

Rev. Joy H. Fairchild, of South Boston, has commenced an action in the Supreme Judicial Court against the Rev. Nehemiah Adams, D. D., of the Essex street Church in Boston, for libel and slander, and suing for damages in $10,000.

The mechanics and working men of the State of New York propose holding a convention at Albany, in October, for the purpose of considering matters relating to their own welfare.

Hon. R. C. Winthrop has received the degree of LL.D. from Bowdoin College, Maine.

It is stated that nearly all the porter, ale and brown stout, shipped from the United States to California, during the past year, has been lost on the passage by the bursting of the bottles.

The receipts at the Boston Custom House for September, were $304,553, against $284,194 in September 1848. The receipts for the quarter ending Sept. 30th this year, were $1,797,167, against $1,444,971 a year ago, showing an increase from last year of $352,196.

On the 2d inst., Leonard Haynes, of Roxbury, while suffering with the delirium tremens, went into the back-yard of his dwelling-house, and deliberately blew his brains out with a pistol.

The government has refunded the money, with interest, which was raised by the ladies of Newburyport, for the relief of the volunteers under Gen. Cushing. The ladies intend to create a fund out of the money for the relief of the poor and destitute of their town.

A notice of the lecture of Hor. Horace Mann before the Lyceum, is deferred till next week.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, OCT. 13. 1849.

MAP OF QUINCY. A plan of the town of Quincy with a portion of Milton, showing all the streets, sites of houses with the names of owners, etc., etc., in short, a complete map of our town and village, has been for some time in preparation by Mr. Henry M. Fosdick, Civil Engineer, of Milton. It is upon a large plan,—three feet by two and a half,—and when engraved and printed, will make a very handsome and valuable picture. Mr. Fosdick is desirous of having it published and it will be done as soon as sufficient encouragement is given to warrant the expense. Persons wishing for a copy are requested to leave their names at this office, or at the store of Messrs. Josiah Brigham & Co. The price will be only one dollar, and it is hoped our citizens will liberally patronize the work.

LADIES' EXCHANGE. The celebrated establishment of George W. Warren & Co., 192 Washington Street, Boston, offer a very large and select assortment of Autumn Goods, selected with great care. They are noted for having splendid goods and for very low prices. See advertisement for particulars.

NORFOLK COUNTY NOMINATIONS. The three political parties held their Conventions in Dedham on Wednesday last, and made the following nominations for State Senators:

Democratic.—Edgar K. Whitaker, of Needham, Ezra Wilkinson, of Dedham, and Samuel Warner, Jr., of Wrentham.

Whigs.—Lewis Harding, of Franklin, Marshal P. Wilder, of Dorchester, and Lyssander Richards, of Quincy.

Free Soil.—E. L. Keyes, of Dedham, M. M. Fisher, of Medway, and Jesse Pierce, of Stoughton. There was some movement by the Democrats and Free Soilers to nominate a coalition ticket, but it failed.

MARYLAND ELECTION.—Full returns show, three Whigs and three Democrats have been elected to Congress. In the Legislature the Whigs have a majority of 7 in the Senate, and 12 in the House.

HOLDEN'S DOLLAR MAGAZINE.—The October issue is an excellent number, containing a great variety of interesting articles, prose and poetical.

NATIONAL LANCERS OF BOSTON. This corps of cavalry, in fatigue dress, with full ranks, under command of W. F. White, Esq., accompanied by Flagg's Brass Band, visited this town yesterday, for recreation and target practice. Their appearance truly indicated, that while they possessed the characteristics of gentlemen, they did not lack any of the qualities of soldiers for discipline and martial bearing; yea, they may challenge competition. Their gentlemanly commander is every way deserving of praise, and the company acted wisely in selecting so worthy a man.

By special train, the Lancers arrived about eleven o'clock, and after an hour or more passed in parading through some of the streets, they repaired a short distance from the far-famed Mount Wallaston, where they evinced their skill at target shooting. After an hour or more spent in social hilarity, the company sat down to loaded tables of the choicest varieties the season affords, prepared by the well known "mine host" of the Hancock House. Sentiments, songs, and music added to the delight of the table.

In reply to a sentiment, complimentary to the Regiment of Massachusetts volunteers to Mexico, Mr. Cremony (reporter of the Herald), and one of the number who sustained their country's honor at that time, responded in a highly eloquent and patriotic strain, (loudly cheered) and dealt justice not only to the Lancers who patriotically presented them with a stand of colors previous to their departure, but administered a withering rebuke to pretended friends of the country and of liberty, who, in the hour of trial, refused to grant aid and denounced them.

It was a joyous meeting of social conviviality, and a happy time for the soldier, which the Lancers will long cherish and remember.

DREADFUL SHIPWRECK.—A severe gale from the northeast commenced Saturday evening last, and raged with great fury during the whole of the night, and throughout the day on Sunday. The gale was probably the most severe of the season. In the vicinity of Boston, tender shrubbery, branches of trees, and in some cases large trees have been blown down.

The British brig St. John, Capt. Oliver, from Galway, Ireland, anchored inside Minot's ridge, about six o'clock in the morning on Sunday, dragged her anchors and struck on the Grampius rocks about nine in the forenoon. The captain, officers, and crew, (with the exception of the second mate and two others,) took to the boat and landed safe at the Glades. The passengers who were saved, got on pieces of the wreck and landed near Whitehead, north end of Cohasset harbor.

The number of passengers and crew on board was about one hundred and twenty, out of which ninety-nine have been lost. Twenty-seven of the dead bodies, mostly females, have been found and buried. Of those saved, two of the women are severely bruised and their lives in danger.

The other brig which was seen at anchor near where the St. John went ashore, was the British brig Kathleen, Capt. Barnaby, from Picotou for Boston, with coal. She also drifted ashore, and still remains, with loss of chains, anchors, and rudder, but it is expected that she will come off after discharging a part of her cargo.

The storm in other parts was very severe, and much damage done.

GOOD BUTTER.—Every one who cares any thing about eating, knows the value of good, sweet butter. Such we would advise, who purchase in Boston, to call on L. Newcomb, Jr., at the Beach Street Market, Stall No. 38—it is but a short distance from the Old Colony Depot. Now is a good time to lay in a lot for winter, as good butter will in a few weeks be scarce. Keeping the best of butter, cheese, lard, etc., selling the lowest for cash, and giving polite attention to all customers, he will no doubt receive, as he deserves, the patronage of the public.

GEORGIA ELECTION.—Returns are received from 74 out of 93 counties. Towns, the democratic candidate is chosen governor by more than three thousand majority. The same party has the legislature.

COURT AT DEDHAM.—The September term of the Court of Common Pleas was adjourned to the sixth day of November next, when the jurors and all whose cases may be pending are notified to appear. Judge Mellen will preside.

THE BUTLER DIVORCE.—The sum of $30,000 was settled upon Mrs. Butler by her late husband, the interest of which alone she may expend annually, and at her death the principal goes to the two children, to whom alone Mrs. Butler has power to bequeath it.

NOTICES.

The next lecture before the Quincy Lyceum, will be by Hon. Thomas G. Carey, of Boston, at the Lyceum Room, next THURSDAY EVENING, at seven o'clock.

The lecture of the following week will be by Dr. J. V. C. Smith, of Boston. Tickets may be obtained at the places named last week, or of the Secretary.

WILLIAM B. BUGBEE, Sec.

Anti-Slavery Fair!

The annual Fair of the Weymouth and Braintree Anti-Slavery Society, will open on the evening of MONDAY, 15th inst., in the Hall owned by the Engine Company, the use of which has been kindly granted for this occasion. The articles offered for sale will be more numerous and be useful, than ever before, and the variety so great, as to suit all classes of purchasers. The Fair will continue open through the week and the Refreshment Table will be constantly supplied with Tea, Coffee, Cakes, Fruit, Cold Meats, etc. There will be Music at the Hall every evening, and it is earnestly hoped that the friends of the cause in all the region round about, will assist by their presence in the festivities of the occasion. We shall give no formal Tea Party, but Tea and Coffee will be provided every evening from six until ten o'clock, at the Hall.

On the evening of THURSDAY, 18th, an Address will be delivered in the Universalist Meeting House, by Wendell Phillips, to commence at seven o'clock. From the friends of the Cause, donations of Tea, Coffee, Sugar, Milk, Cakes, Pies, etc., are earnestly solicited, or donations in money, which will be equally serviceable. Articles for the Refreshment Table may be sent to the Engine Hall on the morning of the 15th, or left with any member of the Society. We call upon the community in which we reside, for assistance in this effort, respectfully urging upon ALL the command "Remember those in bonds as bound with them."

MARRIED.

In Boston, at the Tremont Temple, on Sunday last, by Rev. Mr. Colver, Mr. Jonathan Baxter of this town, to Mrs. Elizabeth C. Bly of B.

DIED.

In this town, 4th inst., Susannah Adelaide, only daughter of Mr. William and Mrs. Sarah C. Hayden, aged 6 years.

She has gone—the lovely rose has been plucked in its bud. In health she was obedient and kind, and during her painful sickness she exhibited a patience, worthy of a saint. We feel in sympathy with the afflicted parents; to them the loss is great and painful to her, the change is gain.

Then mourn her not, the voice of woe Belies not this her triumph hour; Let sorrow's tears no longer flow, For life eternal is her dower! Freed from the earth's corrupt control, The trials of a world like this, Joy, for her disembodied soul Drinks at the fount of perfect bliss!

—11th inst. Mrs. Elizabeth, wife of Mr. George W. Dyer, aged 26 years and 1 month.
In Boston, 6th inst., Mrs. Nancy Billings of Dorchester, aged 68.
In Weymouth, 6th inst., Mrs. Betsey Leach, aged 78 years.
In Milton, Mr. Joseph Bent, aged 86.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

I REMEMBER.

In days long since departed,
I dearly lov'd a maid,
For beauties that can never pall,
For charms that never fade.

My hairs are growing gray now,
But I remember yet:
The charms that won my fancy then
My heart will not forget.

So freshly to my eyes now,
Her maiden beauties bloom;
The impression was a sure one,
It lives beyond the tomb.

And memory brings her back now,
In all the bloom of youth;
With all her winning graces fresh,
And all her changeless truth.

Yet scarce can I regret her,
This world was not her home;
A brighter and a better is,
Where sorrows never come.

No marble rests above her,
To tell where goodness lies;
My beam is her monument,
Her epitaph my sighs.

F. M. ARLINGTON, Weymouth.

ONWARD.

Onward—let our motto be Onward! faith is victory;
Onward! let the trumpet call
Echo o'er this swaying hall!
Onward! though a cloudy day
Sometimes happens on our way;
Gather courage, onward still—
Climb up the rugged hill.

Stem the current, breast the shock,
Firmly, like a mountain rock;
Onward! though the deepening gloom,
Like a shadow from the tomb,
Damps our ardor, blinds our sight,
Onward! it will soon be right!
Gather courage, onward still—
Climb up the rugged hill!

Push ahead—nor fear to fight
Through the shades of deepest night;
Never fail, as onwards do—
God has never made us so;
Hurrah! we're gaining every day,
A point has yielded on our way;
We'll scale the barriers one by one,
The summit's gained—the victory's won!

LIFE.

Seven years in childhood's play, 7
Seven years in school from day to day, 14
Seven years in trade or college life, 21
Seven years to find a place and wife, 28
Seven years to pleasure's follies given, 35
Seven years by business hardly driven, 42
Seven years for fame a wild goose chase, 49
Seven years for wealth a bootless race, 56
Seven years in hoarding for your heir, 63
Seven years in weakness spent and care, 70
Then die and go—you know not where!

WOMAN.

She ne'er with treacherous kiss her Savior stung;
Nor e'er denied him with unholy tongue;
She, when Apostles shrunk, could danger brave—
Last at his cross and earliest at his grave!

ANECDOTES.

An Irishman, after expatiating very warmly upon the temper and beauty of Lola Montes, was asked if she didn't smoke? "Yes, sir, she does," he exclaimed, "and so does every volcano—perhaps you'll show me the lovely crater as does it smoke?"

"Well, James," said Zeb, "I kissed Julia for the first time, last night, and I declare it electrified me." "No wonder," said James, "it was a galvanic battery."

A gentleman on placing his hand too familiarly on a lady's knee, was told by her that he was rude enough to be a savage. "Of what tribe, madam?" "The Pawns," he said.

A captain—one of the old School—being at a ball, had been accepted by a beautiful partner, a lady of rank, who, in the most delicate manner possible, hinted to him the propriety of putting on a pair of gloves. "Oh! no," was the elegant reply, "never mind me, ma'am, I shall wash my hands when I'm done dancing!"

Veneration for the fair sex is carried on to such an extent in San Francisco, that a party of Oregonians stopped to have a dance around an old cast-off bonnet.

A rich officer of revenue one day asked a man of wit what sort of a thing opulence was. "It is a thing replied the philosopher, 'which can give a rascal the advantage over an honest man.'"

It is considered a great compliment in the east, to say to a young girl, "Your skin is as clear and beautiful as the fresh peel of an onion just drawn out from between its flakes!"

Gone a "ducking," is what they say of a fellow in Arkansas, who goes to "sit up" with a young woman.

A nervous and timid dandy having at length screwed up his courage to submit to a bleeding, having undergone the operation without fainting, said, whilst looking at the blood, "Doctor, I think you are a great butcher." "Ay," said the doctor, "and I have been sticking a great calf!"

A sleepy deacon, who sometimes engages in popular games, hearing the minister use the words, "shuffle off this mortal coil," started up, rubbed his eyes, and exclaimed, "Hold on, it's my deal!"

"Captain," said a rough looking personage, "I don't wish to hurt your feelings, but you stole that barrel of flour." The captain has been in a "puzzle" ever since to know whether the affront or the apology were the greater.

GET A STOVE !!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook, as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the
New England Air-Tight Cooking Stove,
both by myself and many of my friends, for the past two years, I can with the greatest confidence recommend it to my numerous customers, with the full assurance that they will find in its use every thing they could desire, and I agree that if any use this and do not find full satisfaction, I will take them back and refund the purchase money. I would invite all who are about purchasing this desirable article to call on the subscriber, (who is sole agent for this town,) and examine the above mentioned Stoves; where will also be found a GREAT VARIETY of other Stoves, both
COOK, PARLOR, OFFICE & SHOP STOVES,
among which is a new and elegant
Parlor Stove, for Wood or Coal, with or without Ovens.
Also—FURNACES, BAKERS, BRITANIA & JAPANNED WARE; TIN AND SHEET IRON WORK Made to Order,
As good as the Best.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR
Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Ovens, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.
It is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons; with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply disposing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.
A SUMMER APPARATUS
is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.
Any person who will give this stove a fair trial will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and Durability, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.
Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.
A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.
These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the
of E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Store, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIST, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

TAKING TOLL.

Mr. Smith kept a drug shop in a little village of Q—, which was situated a few miles from Lancaster. It was his custom to visit the latter place every week or two, in order to purchase such articles as were needed from time to time in his business. One day he drove off towards Lancaster in his wagon, in which, among other things, was a gallon demijon.
On reaching the town, he called first at a grocer's with the inquiry—
"Have you any common wine?"
"How common?" asked the grocer.
"About a dollar a gallon. I want it for antimonial wine."
"Yes, I have some just fit for that, and not much else, which I will sell for a dollar."
"Very well, give me a gallon," said Mr.
Smith.
The demijon was brought in from the wagon and filled. And then Mr. Smith drove off to attend to other business. Among the things to be done on that day, was to see a man who lived half a mile from Lancaster. Before going out on this errand, Mr. Smith stopped at the house of his particular friend, Mr. Jones. Mr.
Jones happened not to be in, but Mrs. Jones was a pleasant woman, and he chatted with her for ten minutes or so. As he was about stepping into his wagon, it struck him that the gallon demijon was a little in his way, and so, lifting it out, he said to Mrs. Jones,
"I wish you would take care of this until I come back."
"O, certainly," replied Mrs. Jones, "with the greatest pleasure."
And so the demijon was left in the lady's care.
Some hours afterwards Mr. Jones came in,
and among the first things that attracted his attention was the strange demijon.
"What is this?" was the natural inquiry.
"Something that Mr. Smith left."
"Mr. Smith from Q—?"
"Yes."
"I wonder what he has there?" said Mr.
Jones taking hold of the demijon. "It feels heavy."
The cork was unhesitatingly removed, and the mouth of the vessel brought in close contact with the smelling organ of Mr. Jones.
"Wine, as I live," fell from his lips. "Bring me a glass."
"O no, Mr. Jones. I wouldn't touch his wine," said Mrs. Jones.
"Bring me a glass. Do you think I'm going to let a gallon of wine pass my way without examining it? No—no. Bring me a glass."
The glass, a half pint tumbler, was produced and nearly filled with the execrable stuff—
as gaudy of grape juice as a dyer's vat—which was poured down the throat of Mr. Jones.
"Pretty fair wine that; only a little rough,"
said Mr. Jones smacking his lips.
"It's a shame!" remarked Mrs. Jones warmly, "for you to do so."
"I only took toll," said the husband, laughing. "No harm in that, I'm sure."
"Rather heavy toll, it strikes me," replied
Mrs. Jones.
Meantime, Mr. Smith having completed most of his business for that day, stopped at a store
where he wished two or three articles put up—While these were in preparation, he said to the keeper of the store,
"I wish you would let your lad Tom, step over for me to Mr. Jones. I left a demijon of common wine there, which I bought for the purpose of making into antimonial wine."
"O certainly," replied the store-keeper—
"Here Tom!" and he called for his boy.
Tom came and the store-keeper said to him,
"Run over to Mr. Jones' and get a jug of
Go quickly for Mr. Smith is in a hurry.

"Yes, sir," responded the lad, and away he ran.
After Mr. Jones had disposed of his half pint of wine, he thought his stomach had rather a curious sensation, which is not much to be wondered at, considering the stuff with which he had burdened it.
"I wonder if that really is wine?" said he,
turning from the window at which he had seated himself, and taking up the demijon again.
The cork was removed and his nose applied to the huge bottle.
"Yes, it's wine; but I'll vow it's not much to brag of." And the cork was once more replaced.
Just then came a knock at the door. Mrs.
Jones opened it, and the store-keeper's lad appeared.
Mr. Smith says, please let him have the jug
of antimonial wine he left here."
"Antimonial wine?" exclaimed Mr. Jones,
his chin falling, and a paleness instantly over-spreading his face.
"Yes, sir," said the lad, taking up the demijon
to which Mrs. Jones pointed with her finger, and departing without observing the effect
his appearance had produced.
"Antimonial wine?" fell again, but huskily from the quivering lips of Mr. Jones. "Send for the doctor, Kitty, quick! Oh! how dreadfully sick I feel. Send for the doctor or I'll be a dead man in half an hour!"
"Antimonial wine! Dreadful!" exclaimed
Mrs. Jones, now as pale and frightened as her husband. "Do you feel very sick?"
"Oh yes. As sick as death!" And the appearance of Mr. Jones by no means belied his words. "Send for the doctor instantly, or it may be too late."
Mrs. Jones ran first in one way and then in another, and finally had presence of mind enough to tell Jane, her single domestic, to run with all her might for the doctor, and tell him that Mr. Jones had taken poison by mistake.
Off started Jane at a speed outstripping that of John Gilpin. Fortunately the doctor was in his office, and he came with all the rapidity a proper regard to the dignity of his office would permit, armed with stomach-pump and a dozen antidotes. On arriving at the house of Mr.
Jones, he found the sufferer lying upon a bed,
ghastly pale, and retching terribly.
"Oh, Doctor! I'm afraid it's all over with me!" gasped the patient.
"How did it happen? what have you taken?"
inquired the doctor eagerly.
"I took, by mistake, nearly half a pint of antimonial wine."
"Then it must be removed instantly," said
the doctor; and down the sick man's throat
went one end of a long, flexible, india rubber tube, and pump! pump! pump! went the doctor's hand at the other end. The result was very palpable. About a pint of redish fluid, strongly smelling of wine, came up, after which the instrument was withdrawn.
"There!" said the doctor, "I guess that will do. Now let me give you an antidote." And a nauseous dose of something or other was mixed up and poured down to take the place of what had just been removed.
"Do you feel better now?" inquired the doctor, as he sat holding the pulse of the sick man,
and scanning, with a professional eye, his pale face, that was covered with a clammy perspiration.
"A little," was the faint reply. "Do you think all danger past?"
"Yes, I think so. The antidote I have given you will neutralize the effect of the drug, as far as it has passed into the system."
"I feel as weak as a rag," said the patient.
"I am sure I could not bare my own weight—
What a powerful effect it had!"
"Don't think of it," returned the doctor.
"Compose yourself. There is now no danger to be apprehended whatever."
The wild flight of Jane through the street,
and the hurried movements of the doctor, did not fail to attract attention. Inquiry followed, and it soon became noised that Mr. Jones had taken poison.
Mr. Smith, having finished his business in Lancaster, was just stepping into his wagon, when a man came up and said to him and the store-keeper who was standing by,
"Have you heard the news?"
"What news?"
"Mr. Jones has taken poison."
"What?"
"Poison!"
"Who? Mr. Jones?"
"Yes. And they say he cannot live."
"Dreadful! I must see him." And without waiting for further information, Mr. Smith spoke to his horse and rode off at a rapid rate to the residence of his friend. Mrs. Jones met him at the door looking very anxious.
"How is he?" inquired Mr. Smith, in a serious voice.
"A little better I thank you. The doctor has taken it all off his stomach. Will you walk up?"
Mr. Smith ascended to the chamber where lay Mr. Jones, looking as white as a sheet.
The doctor was still by his side.
"Ah, my friend!" said the sick man in a feeble voice, as Mr. Smith took his hand, "that antimonial wine of yours has nearly been the death of me."
"What antimonial wine?" inquired Mr.
Smith, not understanding what his friend meant.
"The wine you left here in the gallon demijon."

"That was not antimonial wine," said Mr.
Smith.
"It was not?" fell from the lips of both Mr.
and Mrs. Jones.
"Why, no! It was only wine that I had bought for the purpose of making antimonial wine."
Mr. Jones rose up in bed.
"Not antimonial wine?"
"No."
"Why the boy said it was."
"Then he didn't know any thing about it. It was nothing but some common wine which I had bought."
Mr. Jones took a long breath. The doctor arose from the bedside, and Mrs. Jones exclaimed—
"Well, I never!"
Then came a grave silence, in which one looked at the other doubtfully.
"Good day," said the doctor, and went down stairs.
"So you have been drinking my wine, it seems," laughed Mr. Smith, as soon as the man with the stomach-pump had retired.
"I only took a little toll," said Mr. Jones, back into whose pale face the color was beginning to come, and through whose almost paralyzed nerves was again flowing from the brain a healthy influence. "But don't say any thing about it. Don't for the world!"
"I won't on one condition," said Mr. Smith, whose words were scarcely coherent, so strongly was he convulsed with laughter.
"What is that?"
"You must become a teetotaler."
"Can't do that," replied Mr. Jones.
"Then I can't promise."
"Give me a day or two to make up my mind."
"Very well. And now good bye; the sun is nearly down, and it will be nearly night before I get home."
And Mr. Smith shook hands with Mr. and Mrs. Jones, and hurriedly retired, trying, but in vain, to leave the house in a grave and dignified manner. Long before Mr. Jones had made up his mind to join the teetotalers, the story of his taking toll was all over town, and for the next two or three months he had his own time of it. After that it became an old story.

PRETTY THOUGHTS.

What is joy? The honey of existence; really beneficial and agreeable when partaken of in moderation, but highly injurious when used to excess.
What is contentment? The philosophy of life, and the principal ingredient in the cup of happiness—a commodity that is undervalued in consequence of the very low price it can be obtained for.
What is happiness? A butterfly, that roves from flower to flower, in the vast garden of existence and which is eagerly pursued by the multitude, in the vain hope of obtaining the prize; yet it continually eludes their grasp.
What is ambition? A fierce and unconquerable steed, that bears its rider onwards in the high road to preferment; but it oftentimes throws him such a fall that he rarely ever recovers.
What is crime? A wretched vagabond, travelling from place to place in the fruitless endeavor to escape from justice, who is constantly engaged in hot pursuit. A foe to virtue and happiness, though at times the companion of poor innocence, which is too often made to suffer for the guilty.
What is justice? A pair of scales, in which the actions of mankind are often weighed; the true weights being sometimes brought up by power and wealth, whilst others that are incorrect are substituted.
What is idleness? A public mint, where various kinds of mischief is coined and extensiv-ly circulated amongst the most despicable of the human race.
What is fear? A frightful and dangerous substance to the really guilty, but a vain and harmless shadow to the conscientiously honest and upright.
What is fortune? A capricious, dame, who often rejects those who are most anxious to solicit her favors; whilst others, more unworthy, are the recipients of her bounties without their solicitation.
What is fashion? A beautiful envelope for morality, presenting a glittering and polished
exterior, the appearance of which gives no certain indication of the real value of what is contained therein.
What is wit? A sparkling beverage, that is highly exhilarating and agreeable when partaken
at the expense of others; but when used at our own cost, it becomes bitter and unpleasant.
What is thought? A fountain from which flows all good and evil inventions; a mental fluid, electrical in the force and rapidity of its movements, silently flowing unseen within its own secret avenues; yet it is the controlling power of all animated matter, and the chief mainspring of all our actions.
What is knowledge? A key that unravels
all mysteries, and which unlocks the entrance, and discovers new, unseen and untrodden paths
in the hitherto unexplored fields of science and literature.
What is a Coquette? A young lady of more beauty than sense; more accomplishments than learning; more charms of person than graces of mind; more admirers than friends; more feels than wise men for attendants.—Longfellow.

SOUND DOCTRINE.

A jury the other day in New York gave exemplary damages against a person, accompanied with a reason which implied that public opinion demanded the verdict, and that it was made large as an example to others. This proposition of public opinion (says the Philadelphia Ledger) is a very common notion with jurors, but the justice of it may well be questioned. Twenty men may violate the law, and through an insufficiency of evidence, escape
with impunity. One less fortunate is saddled with the punishment due to the guilt of the other twenty as an example to the rest of the world. He not only bears the legal responsibility of his own acts, all in justice that can be required of him, but that of twenty other persons over whom he could not possibly exercise any control. Judge DAILY, in a recent charge to a jury, sets this matter in a proper point of view, however much other portions of the charge
may be excepted to. He says:—
"The person arraigned is not to be convicted under the impression that that conviction would be of service to the community, or that public opinion demands that an example should be made. Public opinion is not to enter a court of justice to determine the guilt or innocence of a person accused. A sound healthy public opinion, like a pure atmosphere, is beneficial in its effects. It seems to keep in check the propensities of men. But public opinion is not always distinguishing in its judgement of persons.
It is too unstable and too easily influenced to be implicitly relied on. What it has frequen-ly demanded at one time as a sacrifice it has lamented at another as a calamity. The history of the past furnishes a melancholy record of its errors; for before and since the death of the redeemer the lives of the world's best benefactors
have been trodden out beneath the hoofs of this many-headed monster. When called upon to act in the discharge of public duty the consideration must not be whether it is in accordance with public opinion, but whether it is right, and unless a jury are governed by that feeling, they lack that impartiality which is the very essence of justice. If to do Justice it becomes necessary to take ground against public opinion they should not hesitate to do it. It was not to be propitiated by an act of Justice, however slight,
even by the infliction of a private wrong."
This we call sound law, as well as justice.

THE TURN OF LIFE.

From forty to sixty, a man who has properly regulated himself may be considered as in the prime of life. His matured strength of constitution renders him almost impervious to the attacks of disease, and experience has given him judgment the soundness of almost infallibility.
His mind is resolute, firm and equal; all his functions are in the highest order he assumes the mastery over business; builds up a competence on the foundation he has laid in early manhood, and passes through a period of life
attended by many gratifications.
Having gone a year or two past sixty, he arrives at a critical period in the road of existence
the river of death flows before him, and he remains at a stand still. But athwart this river is a viaduct called the "Turn of Life," which if crossed in safety, leads to the valley of "old age," round which the river winds, and then flows beyond without boat or causeway to effect its passage. The bridge is, however, constructed of fragile materials, and it depends upon how it is trodden whether it bend or break.
Gout, apoplexy, and other bad characters also are in the vicinity to waylay the traveler,
and thrust him from the pass; but let him gird
up his loins, and provide himself with a fitting staff, and he may trudge on in safety with perfect composure. To quit metaphor, the "Turn of Life" is a turn either into a prolonged walk or into the grave. The system and powers having reached their utmost expansion, now begin either to close like flowers at sunset, or break down at once.
One injudicious stimulant—a single fatal excitement, may force it beyond its strength—whilst a careful supply of props, and the withdrawal of all that tends to force a plant, will sustain it in beauty and in vigor until night has entirely set.—Science of Life by a Physician.
AN IRON FACT. The quantity of iron of all kinds manufactured in this country, is 700,000 tons annually, while only about 100,000 tons
are imported; in all amounting to 800,000 tons.
Now, if the average foreign cost of the article is no more than $40 per ton, the aggregate increase of price resulting from the mere duty of 30 per cent, without calculating the profits of the importer and retailer incident to the duty, amounts to $6,000,000 which the people have to pay for their iron yearly, more than they would if there were no duty. And of the large tax $8,400,000 go into the pockets of the iron masters, and only $1,200,000, the duty on 100,000 tons, goes into the national treasury
as revenue.
FLANNEL CAKES. "To make flannel cakes,
take two eggs for a quart of sour milk, a tablespoonful of melted butter, one of sugar, and half a one of salt. Put all together, without beating the eggs. Mix it into a batter stiff enough to drop off a spoon like an oyster.
Then have some salaratus dissolved in water,
and stir in slowly until your batter begins to rise. Be careful not to put in enough to turn the color. If the milk is only sour enough to thicken, a tea-spoonful of salaratus is enough for the quart—if it has fermented, it may require two, and your cakes will be nicer. Have a griddle hot, and bake like buckwheat."

SABBATH SCHOOLS.—No. 1.

"Suffer little children to come unto me, for of such is the kingdom of heaven."
It is most probable that a majority of readers
are, to a greater or less degree, conversant with these institutions, that are rising up in such numbers in our happy land, and throughout christendom, and gathering within their pale the early blossom of intellect just as it begins to germinate above the verdant sod and unfold its tender leaves and petals to the warming rays of summer's sun, refreshing showers and the softening dews of heaven,—like a moral star whose hitherto dispersed rays of light are becoming concentrated, to dissipate the darkness which hangs over, and to beautify the moral creation of God.
The importance and claims of the Sabbath School are immeasurably great, from the fact that they are calculated to exert a most powerful influence upon the destinies of our country and world, by preoccupying and training the intellect which is to wield those destinies. We trust that their manifest importance will elicit from every person an earnest attention and a candid examination of any remarks which may be made respecting the subject of Sabbath Schools upon the moral, political and religious advantages, and the obligations of Christians and the world to sustain these inestimable institutions.
The grand design and aim of the Sabbath Schools are to elevate the moral faculties of the youthful mind, and teach them the true principles of christianity. But while their aim is so elevated and their ultimate achievements are so spiritual, they have a powerful influence in forming a correct moral disposition, not only in the pupils and teachers, but in the families connected with them, and thus through the community in which they are providentially located.
Yes, it is in the Sabbath School that the seeds
of morality are sown that constitute the germ
of those embryo principles which operate so conservatively upon the youthful mind, and which characterize children and youth in many sections of our country. It is in the Sabbath School that the principles are cultivated and trained, under the careful hand and plant skill of husbandmen taught of God, which in after life are developed in the full blossoms of all those excellent qualities that distinguish the dutiful child, the affectionate parent, the corteous neighbor, and the useful citizen. But let us dwell for a moment upon their effects on the morals of the pupils. A child is sent to a common day school for the purpose of intellectual culture; and to the gratification of his observing parents and friends, he makes a perceptible
and gradual, if not a rapid progress in the various branches of human science. There he acquires the art of obtaining knowledge from books, and the art of communicating ideas and information by language and writing. There he learns that the earth is a sphere,—upon what portion of it his country is located,—its resources and relative importance to other nations,—and the relative importance of the whole globe to other worlds, whose numbers
and brilliancy often incite a "longing after immortality," as his young intellect expands and with an intuitive consciousness of its capacities would grasp the universe in its scan and analyze its component principles. And are not the moral qualities of the soul capable of a coincident development? And ought they not to receive a like careful and coextensive culture? Instruct a child in all the rudiments of human science, and leave the fallow ground of his heart unbroken, and though he prove not himself a very field or devil he will illustrate but a small portion of the majestic being whom God pronounced "very good."
In the education of the rising generation, the Sabbath School proffers its benign and efficient aid. Its doors are opened by the hand of philanthropy, and philosophy as well as religion
bids the rich and the poor to enlist upon its roll
the charge whom God has committed to them.
By this we would not be understood to undervalue the labors of those pious parents, who strive to train up their children in the way they should go; not to lessen their responsibility to execute this great duty which they owe to God, to their children, and to the world. But we would be understood to say, that the Sabbath school proves a powerful auxiliary to the efforts of pious parents and guardians; that it is admirably calculated and indispensably necessary to roll back the tide of unhealthy influences, which the association with children of unsanctified parents during the week brings over the moral qualities; and that on the whole,
the institution is necessary to secure and preserve a salutary balance in the education of all children for usefulness in this world and happiness in the world to come.
In the Sabbath school, the child is furnished from week to week with familiar illustrations of portions of divine truth,—made clear by the interesting expositions of his indefatigable teacher, whose benevolent principles have led him to avail himself of the copious helps provided in the records of profane history, and the more weighty attestations and convincing arguments of Biblical analogy, which a thorough acquaintance with the scriptures afford. The right of free inquiry upon any position advanced, is strictly inculcated by the teacher, who is ever willing to listen to the suggestions and inquiries of his sweet charge, and to impart all the knowledge he may possess, upon any portion of their exercise not distinctly understood.
And here we would remark, that the zest for wisdom is greatly sharpened and increased by

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.
THE SONG OF FREEDOM.
Tune—Alkonak.

Let war's trumpet sound, let the flags be unfurled,
For slavery or freedom assemble the world;
May each choose his flag and his weapon of fight,
And victory smile on the cause that is right.

Come! muster, ye tyrants, the curse of all lands!
Repair to your banner and marshal your bands;
Your fetters and racks to the battle field bring,
Come on with your prompter, old Cloven, your king.

The Banner of Freedom is streaming abroad,
And millions impatiently wait for the word
To close with their tyrants and crush at a blow,
That scourge of all nations, just Liberty's foe.

What millions compell'd to the slave's wretched life
Await but a leader to join in the strife;
Enshrouded in darkness of slavery's gloom,
Condemned to the fetter, the scourge, and the tomb.

The star in the East—ever Liberty's shield,—
Old tried Massachusetts, the first in the field,
Shall open the eyes of the down trodden slave,
And shine in the van where the free banners wave.

Her press like a meteor shall scatter its rays,
From ocean to ocean her beacons shall blaze,
And thousands that sleep shall be waked to the war,
Around from their slumbers by Liberty's star.

Come, flock to our banner from mountain and glen,
Lake, ocean and river ye true hearted men;
The word of our God is the motto we bear,
Behold it, ye tyrants! behold and despair.

'Tis written in light that the nations may see,
"Go break every yoke, every captive set free,"
In vain you may turn to escape from its blaze,
The proudest shall bend and acknowledge its rays.

Despair then, ye tyrants, your struggle is vain,
Mankind are awakening their rights to maintain,
And tho' we may suffer our cause will endure,
For God is our leader and victory sure.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

BENEVOLENCE.

A benevolent man was Absalom Bess,
At each and every tale of distress
He blazed right up like a rocket;
He felt for all beneath poverty's smart,
Who were fated to bear life's roughest part,
He felt for them in his inmost heart,
But never felt in his pocket.

He didn't know rightly what was meant
By the Bible's promised four hundred per cent,
For charity's each donation;
But he acted as he thought railroad stocks,
And bonds secure beneath earthly locks,
Were better, with pockets brim full of rocks,
Than heavenly speculation.

Yet all said he was an excellent man;
For the poor he'd preach, for the poor he'd plan,
To better them he was willing;
But the oldest man who had heard him pray,
And preach for the poor in a pitiful way,
Could hardly remember him rightly to say
Mr. Bess had e'er given a shilling.

Oh, an excellent man was Absalom Bess,
And the world threw up its hands to bless
Whenever the name was mentioned;
But he died one day, he did, and oh!
He went right down to the shades below,
Where all are bound, I'm afraid, to go,
Who are only good intentioned.

Boston Post.

AN AUTUMNAL MEMENTO.

The yellow foliage trembles,
The withered leaves fall,
Alas! the fair, the lovely
Must share the lot of all.

A sombre radiance lingers
Around the greenwood's crest,
As though the parting summer
A kiss had there imprest.

I gaze—and mournful feelings
My troubled heart o'erpower;
The fading scene before me
Recalls our parting hour.

'Twas said that I should leave thee,
When death was on thy brow,
I was the parting summer,
The fading woodland—thou.

ANECDOTES.

A young reprobate, while travelling in the cars,
Was lectured by an old deacon on the sin of profanity.
"You are on the road to perdition," said the deacon.
The young man drew a ticket from his pocket, and eyeing it with a look that puzzled description, said
"Just my d—d luck, old fellow—I bought a ticket for Brunswick."

A stump orator who wished to gammon some Germans just previous to the election, in order to obtain their votes, observed that though he was not a German himself, yet he had a brother who was remarkably fond of German sausages.

"Well, old Cuff, by what system of connected reasoning do you make out this creature to be an allego-rizer?" "Why, massa," said old Cuff, scratching his head, "I mediatly proceeds to gib you de proof in de tail."

An Irish tailor, making a gentleman's coat and vest too small, was ordered to take them home and let them out. Some days after, the gentleman was told that his garments happened to fit a countryman of his, he had let them out at a shilling a week!

"Can you tell me, Jim, where they get so much corn from to manufacture into whiskey?" "Why no," says Jim, "but I can tell very well where the corn comes from after the whiskey is made."

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,
it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS
is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleas-
ing effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.
A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis,
to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the Cold Weather is Coming !!

GET A STOVE !!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish, on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook,—as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

New England Air-Tight Cooking Stove,
both by myself and many of my friends, for the past two years, I can with the greatest confidence recommend it to my numerous customers, with the full assurance that they will find in its use every thing they could desire, and I agree that if any use this and do not find full satisfaction, I will take them back and refund the purchase money. I would invite all who are about purchasing this desirable article to call on the subscriber, (who is sole agent for this town,) and examine the above mentioned Stoves; where will also be found a GREAT VARIETY of other Stoves, both

MISCELLANY.

THE SEAMSTRESS.

"Hark! that rattle of the dress,
Still with lavish costliness!
Here comes one whose cheek would flush,
But to have her garments brush
Against the girl whose fingers thin Wave the weary broderie in Beading backward from her toil
Lost her tears the silk might soil,
And in midnight chill and morn,
Striving for life into the work,
Shaping from her better thought
Heart's ease and forget me not,
Striving her despair
With emblem woven there."

The clock had struck midnight, yet still the seamstress toiled on, through her fingers were long since weary, and her heart sick almost unto death. Her candle flickered low in its socket, and at last flared up as if about to go out;
she rose, lit another, and still toiled on. The sleet drove against the window pane, rattled like shot upon the frosty glass, and the step of the sleepy watchman without was the sole sound that echoed in the streets; the whole city lay dumb; yet still she toiled on. She had a piece of work which it was necessary to finish by the next day, and so though hungry,
and sick, and spiritless, she was forced to toil on.

The tread of the watchman grew fainter, the tempest deepened; and at last the hour of one struck. The scanty fire which had warmed that miserable apartment, had expired two hours before, and cold chills began to steal over the thinly clad inhabitant. She cast a wishful glance at the dead embers of the hearth, turned over her work to see how much remained, and sighing heavily resumed her needle. And thus hour after hour that lonely and friendless orphan toiled on.

Left fatherless and motherless, she tried to keep up a brave heart, and as long as health lasted had succeeded. But her incessant labors gradually undermined her strength. Her constitution, overtasked, gave way. She became thin and pale; and sometimes was troubled with a hectic cough. The severe winter, finally, had brought a temporary illness, during which her last penny had been exhausted; and it was not without great exertion, for work was scarce, that she had on recovery, obtained something to do. That which she had in her hand was to be finished in an incredibly short time; but anything was better than starvation,
and she had thankfully undertaken the task.

The night wore on. The storm raged fiercer and more icy, and the poor girl shivered now continually. Still the piece of work was far from being finished. At last tears began to fall on her lap, at first slowly and heavily, like
the first drops of a thunder shower, then faster and faster. Finally she sobbed convulsively. She could no longer sew; her emotion was too great
so she laid down her work, and gave free vent
to weeping.

"O, Father in heaven!" she cried, lifting her clasp hands, and looking upward with streaming eyes, "is there no relief from this? Must I struggle in body and soul? Better I were dead. But no! that is a sinful wish. Teach me to say,—Thy will be done."

Renewed sobs choked her utterance, and burying her face in her hands, she wept with a violence that shook the frail chair upon which she was sitting. At last the tempest of her grief gradually died away; her sobs grew less frequent and finally were heard only at intervals, like those of a child which had cried itself to sleep. Exhausted nature had given away.
She slumbered.

And as she slept she dreamed. O, bless God for dreams! They come to the bed of care and poverty and anguish, soothing the worn out struggler, and stringing the soul anew for the strife of the morrow. The rich and prosperous know not what the luxury of dreaming is. But in dreams the famished beggar sits at full board;

the bankrupt forgets his shame and surrounds
his wife and children once more with wealth;
and the mourner beholds again the smile of the loved one, and clasps the wife or daughter to his throbbing breast.

She dreamed. At first, however, the dream was not a pleasant one. The actual work itself to much into the ideal; and her thoughts
were still of cold, and hunger, and weariness.
She fancied herself wandering over a wide common, which was covered with snow so deep that at every step, she drew her breath with great difficulty. Yet struggling on, at last she could stem the driving sleet and wade through the gathering drifts no longer; and completely exhausted she sank down against a bank.

As she dreamed, her head which had rested between her hands on the back of her chair fell over against the wall and in this easier position, she slept more peacefully. A smile gradually stole over her mild features. She started slightly occasionally, and murmuring low words
like a child calling its mother in its slumbers.
The storm meantime had ceased without, and the wind, lately so violent, now moaned low and plaintively, while the musical chaunt of the watchman crying "three o'clock, and a starlight morning," sounded sweet and cheerful after the roar of the spent tempest.

She was dreaming when she smiled. The waste of snow had disappeared, and the icy bank on which she leaned; and in their place
a field of fragrant spring flowers opened before her sight, as she sat on a soft mossy seat. The gurgling of waters hurrying over pebbles, and
the morning songs of the birds were in her ears.
The dew glittered among the grass, trembling
on the leaf of the rose or patting the earth with slow, musical sound, as the breeze stirred the trees around her. A pleasant, but subdued radiance was over the whole landscape; and show light and happy she felt.

Morning began to dawn, but still she slept!— yes! blessed be God she slept. The grey dawn stole into her room at first timidly lingering at the window and nestling close around her form, but finally ventured further into the chamber, exploring every corner, and penetrating into each crevice as the morning advanced.
It was now broad day. Bitter, bitter cold wait, even in that room; but the over wearied slumberer slept on. She had dreamed again;
and now she was happier than ever.

For, as she gazed around the beautiful landscape, the light had seemed to brighten, and she saw two figures approaching her, whom she recognized immediately as her father and mother.
She would have sprung to meet them, but an invincible, though delicious lassitude had stolen over her, and she waited till they came up. How her heart beat when she saw them suddenly behold her, and with a glad cry rush forward and clasp her in their arms. A smile of exquisite delight wreathed her lips as she thus dreamed, and in her sleep she looked like an angel.

The dawn brightened. The winter sun came forth, sharp and clear, and shooting into the room, brought everything out distinctly. A ray lingering round the head of the sleeper and glittering on her hair, crowned her as with a halo of glory, and made her look even more beautiful than before.

At this moment the door opened and an old woman entered, followed by a boy. It was the keeper of the house, attended by the lad sent for the work.

"Hush," said the woman as she saw her lodger. "Poor thing! she has sunk to sleep exhausted. It is a pity to awake her."

"Are you sure she is asleep?" said the boy,
in a low thrilling whisper, as advancing into the room, he obtained a full look in her face. And he shrunk back,

The woman started, looking wonderfully at the lad, and then, by a sudden impulse crossed the room on tip toe, and laid her hand on the shoulder of the sleeper.

But the next instant she drew it quickly away as if the touch had shot an ice bolt to her heart.

"She is dead!" said the lad, awe-struck.
"She is with the angels—thank God!" said
the woman, bursting into tears. "I knew it would come to this, but did not think it would be so soon, or I might have saved her by sharing my own scant fire and crust with her. But yet thank God!"

Yes! cold, and hunger, and weariness had done their work. Her prayers had been kindly answered, she had found relief. The dream had passed into reality; the reunion with her parents was not all a vision; but at what moment the ideal had changed into the real, and the free soul "walked in Paradise," who can tell.

She has found relief. But there are others,
almost, if not quite destitute, who will struggle and struggle on. Is there no one to care for those?

HOW MANY MILES A PRINTER'S HAND TRAVELS.
Although a printer may be setting all day,
yet in his own way he is a great traveller, or at least his hand is, as we shall prove. A good printer will set 8,000 ems a day, or about 24,000 letters. The distance travelled over by his hand will average about one foot per letter, going to the boxes in which they are contained, and of course returning, making two feet for every letter he sets. This would make a distance each day of 48,000 feet, or a little more than 9 miles, and in the course of a year,
leaving out the Sundays, that member travels about 3,000 miles!

PAY YOUR DEBTS.

Religion that does not make a man honest is good for nothing. If a man professes to be a Christian and defrauds his neighbor, that man's religion is vain. And he is dishonest who withholds from another his just due, when it is in his power to pay it.

We, in this country, have acquired a bad
name abroad, from our State reputations, but it is not this of which we wish to speak just now.
It is of the laxness, not to call it by a harsher
name, of many professors of religion, who seldom or never pay their debts until after being called on again, and again, and perhaps finally being threatened with a suit at law. There are some such men in almost every community.

We have one of these men in our eye. He is a very amiable, easy man, who never wishes to quarrel with his neighbors, and is always willing to do them a favor when they are in want of help. But he never pays his debts if he can avoid it. His bills at the store, at the shops of mechanics, perhaps for the food that he eats or the raiment that he wears, are unpaid, and he feels not the least compunctions of conscience on the subject. He prays in the family and in the social meeting and some people think that he may be a Christian; but men of the world say that if he would be honest, they would then have a better opinion of his religion.

We see another debtor. He has no objections to buying anything that he can get on trust,
he will even subscribe for a religious newspaper, or a new edition of the Bible, and make loud professions of his willingness to aid this object and that, but when called upon to pay his subscription, he is unfortunately just then out of money, he will certainly pay it in a few days; but he is no more ready a month afterwards than he was before, and he never intends to pay. He pretends nevertheless to be a pious man, but he deceives very few.

Just now we see another man of this always-owing and never-paying class. Some time ago he contracted a heavy debt, and he has never yet seen a time when he could pay the whole of it at once; and therefore, he has paid none of it. His income has been such that he might with a little economy and much self-denial, have paid part of the debt every year, and by this time have extinguished it, but his conscience does not seem to trouble him at all, although he lives on that which does not belong to him.

Men may sophisticate as they please, they can never make it right, and all the bankrupt
laws in the universe can never make it right,
for them not to pay their debts. There is sin
in this neglect as clear and as deserving church discipline, as in stealing or false swearing. He who violates his promise to pay, or withholds
the payment of a debt, when it is in his power to meet his engagement, ought to be made to feel that in the sight of God, and of all honest men, he is a swindler. Religion may be a very comfortable cloak, under which to hide; but if religion does not make a man "deal justly," it is not worth having.

But what shall a poor man do who is in debt. Let him work hard and pay it. Deny yourself all the luxuries and very many of the comforts of life; be willing to take a humble place in society, and mortify your pride; in dress and style of living be as simple and economical as possible; if necessary, live on bread
and water, and labor diligently, until you satisfy the demands of your last creditor; but never lay up a cent of money nor spend a cent needlessly while you owe it to another. We wish that this principle could be ingrained into the hearts and consciences, at least of professing Christians. There is a looseness on the subject in the church that is perfectly irreconcilable with the laws of God and the maintenance of a good reputation in the eyes of the world.

Let no man be trusted who neglects to pay his debts. If misfortune has suddenly deprived him of the ability to pay that is another thing;
but if by his conduct he shows that he has not disposition to meet his engagements, especially small debts, let him not be trusted. He that is unjust in a little, will be unjust in much. He who defrauds, will steal, and there is scarcely any difference between stealing and wilfully neglecting to discharge a debt.—N. Y. Observer.

ACCUMULATION. An illustration of what a little money will become in time, if put out on interest, and properly taken care of is afforded by an incident related to us yesterday by an old resident. He stated that about 50 years ago a bequest of $10,000 was left to an idiot on Long Island. He was then in his infancy, and is consequently but little over 50. Soon after his father's decease, three respectable inhabitants of this city, all of whom are yet living, were appointed trustees for the care of the bequest, with authority to appropriate $500 annually for the idiot's maintenance, which was accordingly done. This left at first but a small accumulation, but latterly the increase has been rapid, and the principal now amounts to over $100,000. Should the party live 20 years longer, as is not improbable, he will die worth a quarter of a million of dollars. Pretty well for a fool.—Journal of Commerce.

LOVE AND FRIENDSHIP. Love is the shadow of the morning, which decreases as the day advances. Friendship is the shadow of the evening, which strengthens with the setting sun of life.

CORN FED EGGS.

Old Major —, is yet very fresh in the memory of our citizens. He had his eccentricities as old fellows will have; some pleasant, and others, like eccentricities very disagreeable.

The Major used to parade the market, with a basket on his arm, and a cocked hat surmounting his brow, ogling the country girls as if he were a young gallant. Now of all the Major's eccentricities, not one stood more prominent than this very thing of walking through the market purely for the sake of seeing and talking with the country maidens. Coming across a pretty lass he was sure to find some excuse, the old rogue, for a delightful little chat.
No matter whether the subject was poultry,
pigs or penmanship the old gentleman must smile
at the blushing maiden for sometime, draw out his old sayings, and listen to hers. Occasionally, no subject would offer, then any man
but the Major would have been in a pretty pickle, but his genius was ever in the ascendant.
We recollect hearing of a plan he practiced with wonderful success for a long time till the girls found him out. It always secured him good company for minutes, and besides it made the girls think he was a kind old chap, and a perfect paragon of a good husband.

To give one instance to represent the man-
œuvre, we relate the following:

The Major was pursuing his usual tramp through a young array of market baskets when he spied a country lass of modest prepossessing appearance, who was presiding over a large collection of eggs. The old gentleman forthwith poked his basket forward as an introduction, and commenced bargaining for a few dozen eggs, but with no intention of buying, however, mingling with his conversation a number of pretty little allusions and funny questions
which caused the maiden wonderful agitation.
Indeed the huge military cocked hat in itself
inspired feelings of awe, yet the rosy cheeked girl occasionally caught herself laughing very familiarly with the sly good humored face under the old chapeau.

"Well, well, my dear," said the Major, when he was pretty well exhausted of words, "you are a sweet girl, and I'll warrant me the young men know it—so give me six dozen of your eggs. They are fresh!"

"For the twentieth time—yes."

"Know the hens that laid 'em?"

"Go long, I can't count."

"Stop my dear," exclaimed the old fellow suddenly laying his huge hand on the little browned fist of the maiden, as it clasped the first three eggs of the last dozen, and a frown
as of trouble and of doubt shadowed his features, there is one question I forgot to ask you,
not that I, my dear cure a particle, only my wife is very, ah, exceedingly particular about it, and won't eat an egg, nor let me eat
one without she is satisfied. Now, my dear, answer me candidly—are those eggs corn fed?"

"Sir?" exclaimed the lass, dropping the handful of eggs in affected surprise.

"I repeat my dear," drawled out the Major in a kind of wish-to-be-forgotten accent, are these eggs corn-fed? Are you certain the hens eat only corn from the crib; are you certain my dear; Answer correctly, my child, for a great deal depends upon your answer—my wife's health, my own piece of mind, your conscience hereafter, my dear." And the Major paused and looked as if the fate of the world
were sealed in the reply.

"Indeed sir," answered the maiden, almost in a tremble of confusion, "I don't know what the chickens eat, as I didn't think it made such a difference in the eggs."

"Think, my dear, think—you know it makes every difference in pork, and why not in eggs
—answer that—but answer the other first.
Now be particular—very certain."

"Why, sir, I see 'em chasing bugs, and sometimes they don't like, but I'm sure they eat very little corn, for last crop was short, you know."

Then these eggs are not corn-fed? You distinctly assert this?

"Why, sir, I'm sure the chickens couldn't get any corn to eat, so I guess the eggs is not corn fed."

"Then my dear, I regret it very much, but the love I owe my honored wife forces me to it—you must take back these eggs. If people will never learn to tell the difference between corn-fed eggs and slop fed they must suffer the consequences. Now my dear, for I don't care
a copper, you know, and so an egg is well cooked with a little ham and highly seasoned,
I don't believe I could scarcely tell how it was fed. Good morning, my dear, there's a sixpence to buy some ribbon."

THE YEAR 1849. The year 1849 is the 73d-4th of the Independence of the United States;
the 6562d year of the Julian period; the 5609th-10th since the Creator according to the Jews;
the 2602d according to Varro, since the foundation of Rome; 2596th since the era of Ebonas-sar, which has been assigned to Wednesday,
the 26th of February, of the 3967th year of the Julian period, which corresponds, according to chronologists, to the 747th, and according to astronomers, to the 746th year before Christ; the 2825th year of the Olympiads, or the 1st year of the 657th Olympiad, beginning in July 1849,
if we fix the era of the Olympiads, at 775-2
years before Christ, or about July of the year 3938 of the Julian period; the 1265th-66th year since the Hegira, or flight of Mahomet, which took place July 16th, in the year 622.

CAUSES OF INSANITY.

Dr. Brigham, Superintendent of the New York Asylum for the Insane, has made a valuable report on insanity and its causes. On the subject of hereditary insanity, contrary to the opinion of many, he has found the inherited form of insanity as curable as any other.

Of the 2,014 patients who had been at the Asylum, 1,017 were men, and 997 women, and 637 were known to have insane relatives. The statistics on this subject also show that insanity is a little more likely to be transmitted by the mother than the father, and that mothers are considerably more likely to be transmitted to daughters than to sons; while the fathers more frequently transmit it to sons. Among the frequent causes of insanity in those not disposed to it is the over indulgence of the appetites and passions in early life; and to those who inherit a tendency to this disease, such a course is highly pernicious. The utmost attention should be given to securing a good bodily constitution. Such children should be encouraged to run about the fields and take much exercise
in the open air, and thus insure the equal and proper development of all the organs of the body. They should not have the intellect unduly tasked. Very early cultivation of the mind, and the excitement of the feelings by the strife for the praise and the honor awarded to great efforts of mind and memory, is injurious to all children, and to those who inherit a tendency to nervous diseases or insanity, most pernicious. In after life, persons thus predisposed to insanity, should strive under all circumstances, to preserve great equanimity of temper, calling to mind the words of wisdom,
"He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty; and he that ruleth his spirit than he that taketh a city." In Dr. Brigham's opinion, the most frequent and immediate cause of insanity, and one of the most important to guard against, is the want of sleep.

THE WIFE'S INFLUENCE.

A woman has her husband's fortunes in her power, because the may, or she may not, as she pleases conform to circumstances. This is her first duty, and it ought to be her pride.
The passion for luxury or display ought not for a moment to tempt her to deviate in the least degree from this line of conduct. She will find her respectability in it. Any other course is wretchedness itself, and inevitably leads to ruin.
Nothing can be more miserable than the struggle to keep up appearances. If it could succeed, it would cost more than it was worth; as it never can, its failure involves the deepest mortification. Some of the sublimest exhibitions of human virtue have been made by women who have been precipitated suddenly from wealth and splendor to absolute want.

Then a man's fortunes are in a manner in the hands of his wife, inasmuch as his own power of exertion depends on her. His moral strength is inconceivably increased by her sympathy, her counsel, her aid. She can aid him immensely by relieving him of every care which she is capable of taking upon herself. His own employments are usually such as to require his whole time and his whole mind. A good wife will never suffer her husband's attention to be distracted by details to which her own time and talents are adequate. If she be prompted by true affection and good sense, she will perceive when his spirits are borne down and overwhelmed. She of all human beings, can best minister to its needs. For the sick soul her nursing is quite as soothing, as it is for corporeal ills. If it be weary, in her assiduity it finds repose and refreshment. If it be harassed and worn to a morbid irritability, her gentle tones steal over it with a soothing more potent than the exquisite music. If every enterprise
be dead, and hope itself almost extinguished,
her patience and fortitude have power to rekindle
them in the heart, and he again goes forth to renew the encounter with the toils and troubles of life.

NATIONAL PROPENSITIES. When a celebrated Scotch nobleman was ambassador to the court of France, King Louis was always very anxious to learn from the character of his nation, tristis junctis in uno.

"Well, my lord," cried the king, "how would an Englishman be found after a hard fought field?"

"Oh! sleeping away the fatigues of the day,
replied the ambassador.

"Very prudently," rejoined his majesty—"and the Irish?"

"Oh! he'd be drinking away the fatigues of the day."

"Good! good!" laughed out the royal Louis.

"And, now, though not the least in glory's annals, your own countryman—the bonny Scot?"

"Why, your majesty, I ken Sandy's humor
—he'd be just darning his hose, perhaps, and thinking of the siller he could save."

TOBACCO. We hold smoking and chewing to be emaciating, dirty, and expensive habits, which a man should forswear. Drink is a more natural vice. God made the throat for swallowing, but he never made, we believe, the mouth to be a smoke-funnel and a squirt, or the nose, (coming to snuff), to be a dust-bin. We repeat—drunkenness is doomed to wither under the cure of society; we wonder when the weed will cease to blacken our mouths, poison
our breath, paralyze our stomachs, and whiten
our faces? Not in a hurry we fear.—Boston Pilot.

THE ADAMS LIBRARY.

Mr. Editor.—I wish to make some enquiries through your paper, concerning the "Adams Library" so called. A year ago, or more, this library was placed in the Town House, a room having been fitted up there for the purpose. I presume it is now locked up there for safe keeping. I have made some enquiries respecting the way in which this library is to be used, but I have been unable to obtain any information on the subject, and wish, therefore, to enquire of those who have the charge of this matter, what arrangements have been made whereby the citizens of the town can avail themselves of the benefits of this gift of Mr. Adams. Do individuals have the privilege of taking out the books, or are they to be read on the spot, if read at all? For one, I do not know who has the charge, and therefore should not know who to apply to in order to gain access to the library; and I believe this to be the case with a great many of our citizens. It seems to me, that the town should be more generally informed on this subject. Will not some one who is acquainted with the regulations of this library enlighten the public a little in regard to it, and thereby oblige a CITIZEN.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

HON. THOMAS G. CAREY'S LECTURE.

The second lecture before the Lyceum, was given by the gentleman whose name we have just announced. We were somewhat disappointed in this address. Considering Mr. Carey a very prominent representative of a great body of enterprising and influential men, known as the mercantile profession, we were expecting from him some remarks in special reference to that profession. We listened for some speculations in regard to Railroads, over which department of business he stands, at present, an energetic superintendent. We considered him peculiarly competent to enlighten any community in regard to this important subject. But it was merely in this, that we were disappointed in Mr. C. Simply, in regard to his selection of a subject. In the treatment of it he left no opportunity for disappointment. The same beauty of thought, splendor and force of diction, and the same ease in the discussion of principles, characterized this, as well as his numerous other public addresses. His discourse was eminently useful and practical. Selecting no special subject for an entire essay, the lecturer remarked upon a variety of topics, different in character, and discussed each of them with a perspicuity and force characteristic of the sound and philosophical thinker.

The pleasant doctrine that "all men are created free and equal" was analyzed with singular acumen. The contrast between sacred and profane inspiration, as illustrated in the teachings of our Saviour and of Shakespeare, and the reflections of the speaker in regard to the sacred scriptures, breathed the highest sentiments of justice and the loftiest spirit of moral freedom and of christian purity and devotion.

The discourse was well written, but the reading lacked fire. The spirit of this lecture, like the presence of God in scriptural narration, seemed to be found not in "thunder and earthquake" of passionate declamation, but in the "still small voice" of reason and reflection.

COALITION. The democratic and free soil parties in Middlesex County, have adopted an union ticket for Senators, all of the nominees on the old ticket having declined, except William E. Parmenter, democrat. The following are the new candidates:—Charles Thompson, Edwin Whitney, Arnold Hutchinson, Joseph T. Buckingham, F. W. Graves, and Charles Choate.

FROM EUROPE. By express to the Boston Times, news by the Europa has been received from Halifax. Active preparations for war are making by the Sultan of Turkey, and England has announced its determination to support the Porte, but the prevailing opinion is that no serious results will arise. The distress in Ireland on account of the potato rot, it is said, will be greater than at any former period. The English news is not important. Not much is said about the difficulty between the French and American governments.

NEW HAMPSHIRE FESTIVAL.—This affair will take place on the afternoon of Wednesday, November 7th—probably in the hall over the Fitchburg Railroad Depot, the Company having offered the use of it for that purpose. The tickets will be two dollars each. The Hon. Daniel Webster has consented to preside at the dinner. The Hutchinson Family are expected to furnish the music on the occasion.

MORE TEACHERS. Governor Slade, the Agent of the Board of National Education, went west a few days since in company with some twenty-five young ladies on their way to take charge of schools in the West.

STORE BREAKING IN BRIDGEWATER.—Two stores in North Bridgewater, belonging to Thomas A. Ford, of Boston, were broken open on the night of the 18th inst., and robbed of a large lot of boots and brogans.

NORFOLK COUNTY RAILROAD. The Directors have made arrangements to mortgage the road and franchise for $700,000, and have made Robert G. Shaw, J. Amory Davis, and Charles T. Russell the trustees for that purpose. By this arrangement all the subsequent mortgages and attachments are to be removed, so that the creditors will be enabled to obtain bonds for their debts, as soon as the necessary papers are completed.

Jimmy O'Neil, the well known door-keeper of the Presidential Mansion, under General Jackson, died at Washington, on the 17th inst.

CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE. We have received from John C. Rives, Esq., a handsome, bound volume of the "Congressional Globe," for the past year. This is an exceedingly valuable present, and Mr. Rives will please accept our thanks for this token of remembrance.

We would call the attention of our readers to the prospectus of the Globe in another column. All who wish a complete transcript of the doings of the "assembled wisdom" of the nation, at the ensuing session of Congress, which will be one of great interest and moment, should subscribe for the Globe and Appendix. Read the prospectus, which tells the whole story.

HOLDEN'S MAGAZINE. The November number is already issued with its usual amount and variety of reading. This work now stands, and very deservedly, among the best of the monthlies. Mr. Holden, the original proprietor, recently died in California, but it is announced that the Magazine will be continued without any change of plan except, if possible, an improvement in its embellishments, &c.

"AMERICAN RAILWAY TIMES." The first number of a weekly sheet bearing this title has been issued by Robinson & Co., Boston. It is in quarto form, quite convenient for binding,—and is intended to give every kind of information bearing upon the railroad interest. There being no journal in New England devoted to this subject in particular, this paper will have a wide field of operation, and, judging from the number before us, its publishers understand the wants and will be able to supply a desideratum to this great and growing interest of the country. The terms are two dollars per year, in advance.

"THE COLLEGE OF THE HOLY CROSS." Judge Woodbury of the U. S. Court has given an elaborate opinion in favor of the constitutionality of the charter asked of the Legislature of this State for the Catholic College at Worcester. It will be remembered that the Legislature of last winter refused the grant asked for.

NATIONAL COMMON SCHOOL CONVENTION. This Convention assembled in Philadelphia, 17th inst. Nearly two hundred delegates were present, representing fourteen States. Hon. Horace Mann, of this State, was chosen President, and made an admirable address on taking the chair. Letters were read from Messrs. Van Buren, Spencer, and other eminent friends of the cause of education. Hon. Joseph R. Chandler made a report on Girard College, showing that there are under its care two hundred boys, between seven and eleven years of age, and that the instruction and discipline of the college is succeeding well.

COMPLIMENTARY DINNER.—The members of the Bar of Middlesex, a few days since, gave a complimentary dinner at the Revere House, to Judge E. R. Hoar, recently appointed to the Common Pleas bench.

BODIES FOUND.—Three dead bodies were picked up on Monday, at Nantasket—supposed to be some of those who perished on board of the British brig St. John, recently wrecked in the Bay. Twenty-three bodies have floated ashore at Cohasset, and have been recently interred by the citizens of that place.

BARN BURNING.—A large barn on Brush Hill, Milton, belonging to Mr. Leeds, was totally destroyed by fire on Tuesday night, together with its contents of hay and farming tools. Loss about fifteen hundred dollars.

THE FISHES ARE COMING.—A schooner arrived at Marblehead on Saturday, from Bank Quezon, with 7,500 fish, had spoken another schooner with 9,000 fish. Schooner Monroe has arrived at Marblehead, from Grand Bank, with 17,000 fish; spoke schooners Rebecca, with 16,000 fish, and the Eliza Ann, with 13,000.

WORTHY OF IMITATION.—The Austrian government has determined to border with a live hedge, all the lines of railroad in that country. These hedges are to be formed, wherever the climate will admit of it, of mulberry trees. These plantations, besides protecting the railroads from the intrusion of animals, it is anticipated, will contribute to give a spring to the silk culture.

SIR JOHN FRANKLIN.—The English steamer brought a rumor that the British Admiralty had heard of Sir John Franklin—that he was safe in Prince Regent's Inlet, but surrounded by barriers of ice. A Boston vessel which has just arrived at New London from Davis's Straits brings a similar report. The natives stated that Sir John had been four seasons frozen in Prince Regent's Inlet—all well, but still surrounded by ice.

ELECTIONS.—In Maine, Dr. Hubbard's majority for Governor is 1254 over all; Legislature, 88 Democrats to 63 Whigs. The Ohio Legislature stands: House—20 Whigs, 34 Democrats, 6 Free-soil; Senate—17 Whigs, 16 Democrats, 1 Free-soil. The Tennessee Legislature is tied on joint ballot—50 to 50. The Whigs have the Senate, and the Democrats the House. In the Georgia Legislature, the Democrats have a majority of 7 on joint ballot—3 in the Senate and 4 in the House. At the election in Texas a majority of nearly two-thirds voted in favor of the amendment of the constitution, for the people to elect their judges.

SHOP BREAKING. The shop of Horace L. Colamore, in Kingston, was entered on Friday night, of last week, and robbed of a variety of articles of clothing. A man, supposed to be one of the robbers, was arrested in this town on Saturday night last.

Lamps will have a less disagreeable smell if you dip your wick yarn in strong hot vinegar and dry it.

At the agricultural fair, in Hartford, Mrs. Seymour, the authoress, took the premium for silk stockings.

The Edward Everett's California Company broke up after being two days at the mines. Only about half would work. The total dividend of the company's property would be $175 to each man.

The Democrats of New Hampshire have nominated Governor Dimsore for re-election.

Freeman Hunt, the editor of the Merchant's Magazine, has received the nomination of the democrats of the Second Assembly District in King's county, New York.

By a letter addressed by the President to Mayor Woodhull of New York, it appears that General Taylor has decidedly postponed his northern visit until next year.

In Ireland, the English government has 30,000 soldiers, 21,000 enrolled pensioners, and 12,700 policemen.

A German paper mentions the death of a police sergeant from lockjaw, produced from a bite on the thumb from a drunkard whom he was taking into custody.

Interesting Statement from the Empire State. Schuylerville, N. Y., April 28, 1847.

Mr. S. W. Fowler—Dear Sir: A desire to benefit the afflicted, has induced me to make the following statement of facts. My son, now seventeen years of age, has been afflicted, during his whole life, with a constant cough and pain in the chest, accompanied with night sweats and a loss of flesh, which produced great emaciation and debility. During this time he was attended by many physicians of the highest repute, whose prescriptions gave but temporary relief. All our neighbors who saw him regarded him as one who was rapidly approaching an early and premature grave. I was prevailed upon by a friend to try WISNOR'S BALSA OF WILD CHERRY. He commenced its use, and the first bottle gave him astonishing relief, and after using four bottles, his disease was overcome, and he was restored to sound and permanent health.

Dr. Corbett's Highly Concentrated SHAKER SYRUP OF SARSAPARILLA. The cures effected by this powerful alternative of the blood are multiplying daily. Certificates, as to its efficacy, are rendered voluntarily, to an almost unlimited extent. But on these alone the proprietors ask not the public to rely. The words of Science unquestionably must bring more conviction to the doubting, than even the accredited statements of hundreds rescued from the grave.

The distinguished Chemist, Augustus A. Hayes, M. D. who has chemically tested this preparation, writes as follows:—

Messrs. Edward Brinley & Co.—

Gentlemen—With reference to "Corbett's Compound Concentrated Extract of Sarsaparilla" I received a copy of your Formula for preparing it.

From testing the Syrup, the fact of the existence in it of the active substances named, was ascertained, and the general good qualities of the preparation inferred.

The Formula exhibits the union of some of the best of our native medicinal roots and plants, with substances of the highest repute as remedial agents, and does not include any metallic compound. For the cures in which the medicinal qualities of Sarsaparilla are sought for this preparation should have a preference in consequence of the care and skill evinced in compounding it. Respectfully,

A. A. HAYES, M. D., State Assayer of Mass. March 16, 1849.

The Globe: A Congressional, Agricultural and Literary NEWSPAPER.

THE approach of Congress calls out the Annual Prospectus of the Globe Establishment. This Prospectus is full of interest. The coming in of a new Administration—the consequent branching of a new policy touching the internal concerns of the country—the new and most important issues arising from the late vast accession to the public domain, and the great national subjects associated with it—the impending difficulties in our relations with France, and the possibilities of complication of our affairs with the troubles of Europe,—conspire to create great expectations as to the proceedings of the next Congress. The approaching Session will probably continue till late in the summer of 1850. The debates, from the agitation of so many questions of vital interest in the Republic, will draw forth all the talent of the National Legislature. To bring its deliberations home to the people, on each succeeding day, while measures are maturing, in effect, to bring the whole nation into council. The discussion, spreading from the Capitol to the remotest parts of the Union, forms a public opinion which reacts upon Congress and controls its decisions.

To become a useful instrument, however humble, to the working of the great machinery of the people's popular institutions, is the ambition of the editor of the Globe. Extraordinary preparations have therefore been made to meet the increasing demands of our rapidly-improving and growing country for Congressional intelligence. The Globe Press has already enlisted the ablest Reporters yet known to Congress; its materials and machinery are of the best sort; and the exclusive devotion of the individual who for so many years has made it his study to embody and publish the labors of Congress, gives reason to hope that an advance will be made in the accomplishment of this undertaking commensurate with its increased importance. But the accumulation of expense consequent on the additional number of Reporters required—the extra charges incurred in printing at night the debates of the preceding day—the vast addition made to the mass published, by the protracted sessions and the fuller reports given—will render our enterprise a failure, unless Congress shall so far patronize it as to become a purchaser of such portion of the daily sheets issued, as shall contribute to make the reports that fill them. The undersigned has, therefore, in the confidence that he has made for the next session, in the expectation that Congress will subscribe for as many daily sheets for each Member, at the subscription price, as will, in part, defray the expense of reporting, and give them circulation as Congressional documents. The Publisher will conduct the charge of reporting, and it will give an impulse to the circulation of the Congressional Print, which, although the cheapest in the Union (the expense of preparation considered) will yet yield sufficient profit to make the system permanent.

John C. Rives having purchased the interest of F. P. Blair in Jackson Hall—the printing office machinery and materials—becomes the sole proprietor thereof, and will give his exclusive attention to the Congressional Department. J. C. Rives will conduct the Miscellaneous Department of the Newspaper. F. P. Blair retires from both concerns, with prayers for their permanent usefulness and prosperity.

The Globe will be published daily during the session of Congress, and weekly the remainder of the year. It will undergo no change in the form of a Weekly Globe, a Congressional Globe, and an Appendix.

The Weekly Globe will contain Agricultural and miscellaneous articles; and will occasionally give details of such importance as command universal interest.

The price of the Weekly Globe is reduced to one dollar, with a view to obtain a more general circulation. Subscribers who have hitherto paid $2 per annum, will be charged only $1 after the expiration of the first year.

The Congressional Globe will embody, as it has done for the last sixteen years, Congressional proceedings and debates exclusively. The Appendix will embrace the revised speeches generally, and the messages of the President of the United States and the reports of the Heads of the Executive Departments.

The Congressional Globe and Appendix will be published as fast as the proceedings of Congress will make a number. Subscribers may expect one number of each week during the first week of a session, and two or three numbers of each week afterwards until the end of the session. Each volume will probably comprise two thousand royal quarto pages, of small type.

Complete indexes in the Congressional Globe and Appendix will be sent to subscribers soon after Congress adjourns.

Nothing of a political party aspect will appear in the Globe save that which will be found in the Congressional reports. A paper assuming to be an impartial vehicle for all sides, cannot maintain its character if the editorial columns reflect a party hue.

For one copy of the DAILY GLOBE (daily during the session of Congress, and weekly during the recess) a year, $5 00

For the DAILY GLOBE for less than a year, at the rate of 24 cents a month

For one copy of the WEEKLY GLOBE for one year, 1 00

For one copy of the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE during the session, 3 00

For one copy of the APPENDIX during the session, 3 00

For four copies of either, or part of both during the session, 10 00

For ten copies of either, or part of both during the session, 20 00

The prices for these papers are so low, that advance payments are indispensable to carry them on. Postmasters who may obtain subscribers will be allowed twenty per cent. on the subscription prices for single papers, which they may retain when they send on the names of subscribers and the subscription money.

The price for the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE and APPENDIX to Clubs who take ten copies, is so low, that no deduction can be afforded. Subscriptions may be remitted by mail, at our risk, in money at par in the section of the country where subscribers reside.

Quincy Hall Clothing Depot,

ON THE BRAINTREE AND WEYMOUTH TURNPIKE, IN QUINCY.

JOHN DINEGAN WOULD respectfully announce to the inhabitants of Quincy and adjacent villages, that he has just received a FULL ASSORTMENT of everything that is necessary for the FALL AND WINTER TRADE. Gentlemen wishing to furnish themselves with a Fashionable and well got up GARMENT would find it to their advantage to call and examine his Unusually Large and Carefully Selected Stock of Goods. J. D. has just opened several CASES of BROADCLOTHS, of English, French and German manufacture, embracing all the FANCY AND FAVORITE COLORS worn for Sack Coats, Dress, Frock or Over Coats, or any other kind of a Garment worn.

BOYS' CLOTHING. Special attention will be given to this branch of our business. Children of three years and upwards can have their Garments made to order, and in a SUPERIOR STYLE, and as cheap as in any Store that can be named. OUR FURNISHING DEPARTMENT. Linen, Kid and Fancy GLOVES; Linen SHIRTS, BOSOMS and COLLARS; Flannel SHIRTS and DRAWERS, of every color worn, and at unusually moderate prices; new styles of FANCY CRAVATS, and READY MADE CLOTHING. Those in want of any kind of a Ready Made Garment are invited to call, as they can be suited at any price. Parents wishing to purchase for themselves or children would do well to call and examine his extensive assortment of well made and trimmed Garments, suitable for all classes of society, from the mechanic to the independent gentleman. Every article is got up under his own superintendence, made by SEWING WORKMEN, and WARRANTED to be as good as can be got at any other Store in the United States. Take Notice. Every article is marked in plain figures, from which no abatement can be made, and sold for CASH only; the purchase money refunded if every article does not PROVE to be such as they are represented to be. JOHN DINEGAN, Proprietor of the Quincy Hall Clothing Depot, on the Braintree and Weymouth Turnpike. Quincy, Oct. 6. 1f

J. A. Holden, School St., Quincy, WOULD inform the inhabitants of Quincy and Braintree, that he has just received, and will be constantly receiving, New and Suitable Goods for the Coming Season, his intention being to have always on hand A VARIETY OF FASHIONABLE GOODS, among which are to be found, a good assortment of German, French, English and American BROADCLOTHS, of various Shades and Prices, suitable for DRESS, FROCK AND OVER COATS. FOR SACKS AND OVERCOATS, Pilot, Devonshire Kersey, Tweeds, Cording and Castor Cloth, suitable for men's or boys' clothes. FOR PANTALOONS, New DOESKIN FABRICS, and other denominations of FANCY WEAVINGS, which he offers as particularly acceptable. He would also call attention to his AMPLE ASSORTMENT of the most RICH and BEAUTIFUL STYLES, both as regards quality and pattern. FURNISHING GOODS, Consisting of Caps, Stocks, Cravats, Bosoms, Collars, Flannel Shirts and Drawers. Also, READY MADE CLOTHING, at very low prices. It will be found that he has adopted the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, a mode which is considered as a guarantee against the fraudulent devices of disreputable dealers, and also against the sometimes interminable process of making a bargain. Should there be any who disfavor such a system, they may, by calling at his establishment, find reasons to alter their opinion. Customers are allowed to return every article which on trial is found to have been misrepresented. But we doubt if they will find occasion to do so. He DOES HIS OWN CUTTING, which he flatters himself he has no need to boast of, inasmuch as it is now too well known to need any man's praise, and least of all his own. He invites the attention of such as expect Punctuality and Good Workmanship, FOR CASH, such being his rule of business,—the REDUCED RATES at which he sells rendering any other mode impracticable. All who thus employ him, he is confident, will have good reason to be satisfied. Quincy, Oct. 13. 1f

Great Excitement at Town Hall, QUINCY. The Largest and Best Assorted Stock of Cloths and Ready Made Clothing To be found in Norfolk County, may be seen at RUSSELL & CO'S, TOWN HALL CLOTH & CLOTHING STORE, QUINCY. RUSSELL & Co. would respectfully invite the attention of buyers in Cloths or Clothing, FOR FALL OR WINTER WEAR, to their LARGE and SPLENDID assortment of Cloths and Clothing, recently purchased by our senior Partner, in the Boston and New York Markets. These Goods having been bought low for CASH we feel confident in being able to sell at least from Six to eight per cent. Cheaper than any other Clothing Dealer in the vicinity, our sales being much larger than any other within ten miles radius. The Assortment comprises CLOTHS, CASHMERES, DOESKINS, Black German, English and French Cloths, VESTINGS—Velvet, Silk & Satin, CASHMERET, BEAVER, PILOT, KERSEY, &c., &c. Furnishing Goods. HATS, CAPS GLOVES, SUSPENDERS, SHIRTS, Drawers, and every article in the Hosiery line. If you want a cheap Garment, For Winter or Fall, Be sure and give RUSSELL An early call. Quincy, Oct. 13. 1f

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

LINES ON THE DEATH OF MISS RACHEL WHITE, WHO DIED IN AUGUST, 1845.

Shall sculptor'd monuments arise
Above the hero's resting place,
And beauty's tears and manhood's sighs
Do honor to the warrior race?

Shall he who made of gold his God,
And lived in vanity and pride,
Be honored when beneath the sod
And rest the good man's grave beside?

And shall no tears for thee be shed,
Thou faithful, toiling, patient one?
No mourner weep above the head
Of her whose duties well were done?

Yes, some will mourn above thy bier,
And grieve that worth unhonored dies,
While men the rich mementoes rear
Where pride, conceit or folly lies.

And I must shed a tear for thee,
Thou small the tribute, well I know;
Whoever wins a tear from me
Deserved it or it would not flow.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

SUNG BY A SAILOR AT THE HELM.

The moon shines bright,
And the bark bounds light,
As the stag bounds over the lee:
We love the strife
Of a sailor's life,
And we love our dark blue sea.

Now high, now low,
To the depths we go,
Now rise on the surging main;
We make a track
O'er the ocean's back,
And play with the hoary mane.

Fearless we face
The storm in the chase,
When the dark clouds fly before it;
And meet the shock
Of the fierce Siroc,
Though Death breathes hotly o'er it.

The landman may quail
At the shout of the gale,
Peril's the sailor's joy;
Wild as the waves
Which his vessel braves,
Is the lot of the sailor boy.

JOHN ALCOHOL, MY JO.

John Alcohol, my Joe John,
When we were first acquainted,
I'd money in my pockets, John,
Which now I know there isn't.
I spent it all in treating, John,
Because I loved you so;
But mark me how you've treated me,
John Alcohol, my Joe.

John Alcohol, my Joe John,
We've been too long together,
So you must take one road, John,
And I will take the other;
For we may tumble down, John,
If hand in hand we go,
And I will have the bill to foot,
John Alcohol my Joe.

THE FARMER'S SONG.

His wants are few and well supplied
By his productive fields;
He craves no luxuries besides,
Save what contentment yields.

More pure enjoyment labor gives,
Than fame or wealth can bring;
And he is happier who lives
A farmer, than a king.

ANECDOTES.

A lady from the city while on a visit in the country, took her little son, about four years old, to church with her for the first time. As soon as the organ commenced, the little fellow started up with delight, looked back to the gallery, stretched his neck and raised himself to his very tallest, and continued gazing aloft with straining eyes. "Sit down," said his mother. "I won't," he cried, so as to be heard all around, "I want to see the monkey."

"Are you an Odd Fellow?" "No, sir! I've been married for a week!" "I mean, do you belong to the Order of Odd Fellows?" "No, no, I belong to the Order of married men." "Mercy, how dumb! Are you a mason?" "No, I am a carpenter by trade." "Worse and worse; are you a Son of Temperance?" "Neither you, no; I am a son of John Gosling."

A green one, who had crossed the Atlantic, told a story of a storm, when the rain poured down in such torrents, that the ocean rose six inches. "There's no mistake," said he, "because the captain kept a mark on the side of vessel."

A man very unpopular in Dublin had a remarkably long body and his teeth stood out in front. "Augh!" said an old woman as he passed, "Augh! there ye go, all back and teeth like a comb!"

"Isn't your hat sleepy?" inquired a little urchin of a gentleman with a shocking bad one on. "No—why?" inquired the gentleman. "Why, because I think it is a long time since it had a nap," was the answer.

A melting sermon being preached in a country church, all fell a-weeping but one man, who being asked why he did not weep with the rest, "O!" said he, "I belong to another parish."

"I'll give you a piece of my mind," said an enraged woman to her husband. "Now don't," replied her loving swain, "you hain't got none to spare."

A little boy hearing his father say that there is a time for all things, climbed up behind his mother's chair and whispering in her ear, asked when was the proper time for hooking sugar out of the sugar bowl!

REPAIRING

Done Faithfully and with Dispatch.

GET A STOVE !!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE!" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish, on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook,—as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

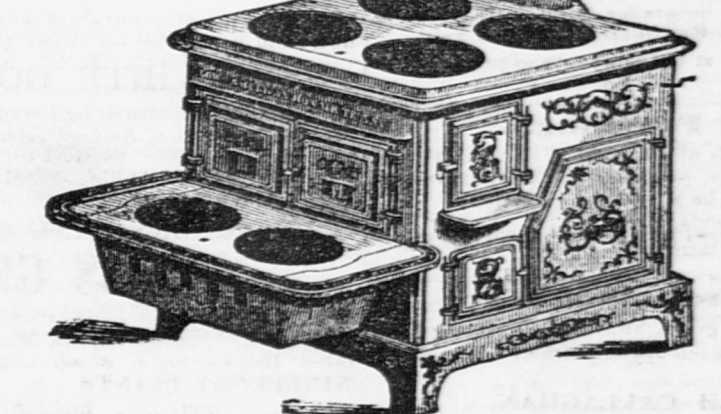

New England Air-Tight Cooking Stove, both by myself and many of my friends, for the past two years, I can with the greatest confidence recommend it to my numerous customers, with the full assurance that they will find in its use every thing they could desire, and I agree that if any use this and do not find full satisfaction, I will take them back and refund the purchase money. I would invite all who are about purchasing this desirable article to call on the subscriber (who is sole agent for this town) and examine the above mentioned Stoves; where will also be found a GREAT VARIETY of other Stoves, both

among which is a new and elegant

Parlor Stove, for Wood or Coal, with or without Ovens.
Also—FURNACES, BAKERS, BRITANIA & JAPANNED WARE; TIN AND SHEET IRON WORK Made to Order,

As good as the Best.
CHARLES HOLMES.

Quincy, Sept. 15.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR
Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat in the Oven, gives the Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven,—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boiler from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

It is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is especially designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and Durability, over any other Air Tight Cook Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove. A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the

Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory
of the Agent in this town.

E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stoves, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIST'S, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

Also—
SHEET IRON, TIN AND COPPER WORK done to order,
Of the best Materials, and in a workmanlike manner.

MISCELLANY.

EARLY MARRIAGES.

A writer notices a communication in which
early marriages were advocated, and presents
"the other side of the picture," as follows:—

All know the opinion of the good and wise
Franklin upon this subject, who was a warm advocate in its favor. Perhaps Franklin was philosophically right in his opinion, but facts go to prove that he was practically wrong. For instance, the children of very young parents are generally deficient in strength of body and mind, and commonly die young. Franklin was the fifteenth child of his father, and the eighth of his mother; and more still, he was the youngest child for five successive generations on his mother's side, from whom, more than his father, he inherited his eminent talents. Pitt, Fox, and Burke, were each the youngest child of their respective families.
Daniel Webster is the youngest child by a second marriage; so also was Lord Bacon, whose father was fifty, and his mother thirty-two years of age, at his birth. Judge Story's mother was forty-four at his birth. Benjamin West was the tenth child of his parents; and Dr. Doddridge was the twentieth child by one father and mother. It is a proverb, that "the youngest children are the smartest." And why? Evidently because the parents are mature in mind and body, and consequently transmit a higher order of mentality to their offspring.
Does the intelligent farmer expect a healthy and luxuriant crop when he seeds with dwarfish green corn or unripe potatoes? And why not bring in requisition as much science and common sense to propagate "the human form divine" as "potatoes and cabbage"? Grant that early marriages would obviate "much of the vice and wickedness which is now almost unavoidable,"
is not the remedy worse than the disease, if it be the means of bringing into existence a race
of puny, ill-formed children, a majority of whom die before they arrive at maturity? But the evil does not end here. Those who do live transmit their mushroom constitution to their offspring, and thus most effectually are the in-iquities of the fathers visited upon the children.

SCIENTIFIC LECTURE.

"Ladies and Gentlemen: The animal or rather reptile, which I shall consider this evening,
is commonly called the toad—more uncommonly the land frog. It is a bird that has been without feathers ever since they were shot off by the Paddy some hundred years ago—very docile in its disposition and domestic in its habits.
It is more remarkable for its good behavior
than personal beauty.

It measures more in length than a small mouse, and averages considerable across the back. Its prevailing color is a mixture of nutmeg, ginger and black pepper, excepting the belly which resembles dirty white kid;—here it might seem that nature had made an egregious mistake. Had she put the hard, dark, un-show-durable skin of the back next the earth,
better economy would, I think, have been evinced, and a more refined taste exhibited; but, as Pope says,—"whatever is, is as is."

It is amply provided with stools, called toadstools, but it always prefers sitting on the ground
—generally under a current bush, a cabbage leaf, or harrow; and winks bewitchingly at every passer by, the girls especially. In short,
the animal couldn't stand erect if it were to try;
and therefore always receives its company seated.
It never walks, trots, gallops, nor flies; but when it moves, it gives with a lazy, goutish jerk and hop, seldom moving more than one in succession before it stops to rest, think and meditate upon the improvement, or rather innovations of the age, and matters and things in general. It possesses no tail, and is supposed to have no desire for one, since the saying is proverbial that, "It is no more needed than a toad wants a tail." It displays no rings upon its fingers—wears none in its ears; in the place of which it has a precious jewel in its head.
Would that as much could be said of the thousand and one fashionable human hop toads in the garden of society.

WHAT'S A GENTLEMAN.—We are constantly reading cards of thanks to the gentlemanly captain, the gentlemanly steward, the gentlemanly clerk, the gentlemanly bar-keeper, et cetera, et cetera, and we have often asked ourselves what constitutes a gentleman of the present age.
In old times it was birth, manners, gentility of appearance; then it was fortune, living without labor, and with ease and comfort; now it appears to be a title only conferred in return for some favor, and indiscriminately bestowed.
Thus, the captain of a ship is termed gentlemanly if he treats his passengers with courtesy;
the clerk of a steamboat who hands the printers
some newspapers, is gentlemanly; and the steward who pops you champagne is called gentlemanly. We are the nation of all others for titles, and we confound them all. Whenever we talk with Dr. Francis he always calls us doctor; when the recorder is speaking to us he calls us judge; the lawyer calls us counsellor; the general never forgets to call us major; the countryman addresses us as "captain,"
and the downyaster as "stranger." The title least heard among us is mister. We were once dining with our old consul at Falmouth,
Mr. Fox, and were quite started at a sweet Quaker girl asking us, quaintly and demurely,
"Mordant, what wine wilt thou drink?"—
Noah's Sunday Times.

COUNSEL TO BOYS.

Be brisk, energetic and prompt. The world is full of boys and men too, who draw through life, and never decide on anything for themselves but just draggle one leg after the other,
and let things take their own way. Such people are the dull stuff of the earth. They hardly deserve as much credit as the wooden trees,
for the trees do all they can in merely growing, and bearing only leaves and seeds. But these poor, drawing, dragging boys do not turn their capacities to profit half as far as they might be turned; they are unprofitable, like a rainy day in harvest time.

Now the brisk, energetic boy will be continually awake, not merely with his bodily eyes,
but with his mind and attention during the hours of business. After he learns what he has to do, he will take pride in doing it punctually and well, and would be ashamed to be told what he ought to do without telling. The drawing boy loses in five minutes the most important advice; the prompt, wide awake boy never has to be taught twice, but strains hard to make himself up to the mark, as far as possible, out of his own energies. Third rate boys are always depending on others; but first rate boys depend upon themselves, and after a little teaching, just enough to know what is to be done, they ask no further favors of any body.
Besides, it is a glorious thing for a boy to get this noble way of self-reliance, activity and energy. Such an one is worth a hundred of the poor, dragging creatures who can hardly wash
their own hands without being told each time
how it is done. Give me the boy who will do his own work promptly and well, without asking, except once for all, at the beginning, any question; the boy who has his wits about him,
is never behind hand, and don't let the grass
grow under his heels.—Cashet.

ARISTOCRACY.

There are men—we blush to call them men
—who turn up their noses at the mechanic and humble laborer. Being liberally educated as it is called—they look down with a sort of contempt on those, who in some cases have contributed to their support. "You need not dispute
a spinning wheel," said an old lady to her pompous son, one day "for many a night have I worked at it to get money to send you to school."
There are women, too, who will not touch a needle with their delicate hands, who laugh at the poor and industrious, who learn trades, or work in factories, for a living. "La! how unrefined they are," she says, with a scornful smile, as she lounges on the sofa, reading the last pink novel. We once knew a lady—shall we call her a lady? of this complexion. She was loudly belaboring a poor hard working girl, calling her low and unrefined. "Why," said
she, "her father was nothing but a low mechanic." "Yes," remarked a woman present, "her father was a mechanic. I knew him well, for he lived in the same neighbourhood, with your mother when she went out washing." There reader, if you had been present, you would have seen a strange confusion of face, and heard a vain attempt to utter something too quickly to come out. It stuck in her throat. When we hear men or women speak lightly of the industrious part of community, we feel just like tracing back their genealogy. We have done so in several instances, and you would be surprised at what we learned. The most aristocratic man of our acquaintance is the grandson of a fiddler; the proud, set woman, a daughter of a wash-woman. It betrays a lack of good sense to condemn or look with contempt on any vir-tuous person however poor he or she may be.
The wise man respects and loves goodness
wherever it is found.

FASHION. Some one says "Commerce is king." It is not true, for Fashion is king.
Fashion is king everywhere, from palaces of princes down to the number of flounces on a lady's gown. Trade, and commerce, and agriculture and science, and art, are all conducted after a fashion. A man is clothed from his head to his feet after a fashion. Public opinion is become a thing of fashion, and the preacher gets his crowded and rich congregations from fashion. No matter what is comfort or necessary, every thing must have a degree of fashion.
"To be out of fashion is to be out of the world," is no joke. It is just what nine-tenths of the world actually believe, and the principle
they act upon. The fussy, bob-tail coated top on the promenade is no more a devotee to fashion in his sphere, than is the plain quiet Quaker in his. The acts, words, frills, and flounces of each and almost every one, are regulated by fashion—a fashion that have examples and imitators. Fashion, then, is king and the only way to get justice from a Common Council, plain, homely truth from a preacher, or honest
advice from a lawyer, will be to make justice,
and truth, and honesty fashionable.

THREE THURSDAYS IN ONE WEEK. A scientific paper says, Let a vessel sail east round the world, and arrive in port on Thursday, according to their reckoning. On the following day
let the crew land; they will find it Thursday on shore. On the next day let them board a vessel which has just arrived from a cruise
round the world, sailing in a westerly direction,
and they will again find it Thursday on board that ship. It is thus possible to find three Thursdays in one week.

A noted philosopher being asked by a friend
how he kept himself from being involved in quarrels, replied, "By letting the angry man have all the quarrel to himself."

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, NOV. 3, 1849.

WHERE ARE WE NOW?

Mr. Editor:—Up to the time when Gen. Taylor was nominated for the Presidency, I was a whig. I was a whig not merely in name, or from association with whigs, but from a thorough conviction that whig principles and whig policy were best for my interest and for the welfare and prosperity of the country. I believed the whig principle of "protection" to be a vital one. I believed their plan of currency and their method of collecting and disbursing the revenues, far superior in cheapness, convenience and safety, to all the hard money schemes and sub-treasury contrivances that ever were dreamed of. I believed in the power of the general government to make internal improvements for the national benefit. I believed in the doctrine that the President is only the executive power, and that when he assumes the legislative functions, either by declaring before hand—as Mr. Van Buren did—that he will not sanction certain laws if they are made, or by placing his veto upon the acts of congress upon other ground than unconstitutionality, that he becomes a usurper and ought to be treated as such: nor have I lost my faith in any of these things yet. But somehow I have lost my party, or I have lost me, for at the last election, I found myself voting for Martin Van Buren, and now I find myself called upon to join with the democrats for the purpose of electing Senators and Representatives in opposition to the whigs.

When Gen. Taylor was nominated, I had no particular objection to him on the score of his being a Southern man, and a slaveholder: I had voted for Mr. Clay, who was both the one and the other, and I would have voted for him again. I did not suppose that the President was to settle the slavery question, for according to our creed he would have nothing to do with it if he kept within the limits assigned him by the constitution, and therefore I felt no particular alarm on that subject; but when I was told that he was not a whig, that the whigs had abandoned their principles in nominating him, and when I found men whom I had always looked up to as reliable whigs—men of rank and character—organizing an opposition on this ground, I joined the new party at once, and did what I could to bring others into it.

Well, matters went along well enough till we came to the Buffalo convention. Then came the nomination of Van Buren—a man whom I hated politically—and the Buffalo platform, which did not contain much that looked like old whig principles, and I began to think I had made a mistake; but I was told that Van Buren had seen the error of his ways and could be trusted now, and that it was necessary in order to bring in the democrats, not to say too much about whig principles in the outset, and so I kept on and hurled for Van Buren and Free Soil with the rest.

After all, our candidate did not get a vote, but our folks said they did not expect he would, that we were only making a demonstration now, but four years hence we would give the renegade whigs what paddly gave the drum.

After a while I heard that our folks were going to unite with the democrats in New York. I did not like this, for I did not see how whig principles were to govern or whig policy to be carried out by such a union: nor did I see how anything could be done for the cause of freedom in conjunction with a party which had always sustained Southern notions on that subject. Being uneasy, I went to one of our leading men to inquire about it. He assured me it was all humbug—a whig fabrication—that the free soil party would never unite with the democrats in New York or elsewhere. On this I rested content, till the astounding news came that the union had taken place, when I went once more to my distinguished friend to inquire if it was true. Yes, he said, it was true—the free soil party in New York had gone over to the enemy in a body—they had deceived and betrayed us—they had abandoned the great cause of human rights for a miserable division of the spoils. He then asked me if I had covered themselves with eternal infamy, and would go down to posterity in the same category with Judas Iscariot? Do you not think, said I, that there is some danger of the same thing being attempted here—not that it can be done, of course—but even the attempt to do it will cover us with suspicion, and lead reflecting men to doubt whether you gentlemen who take the lead in our affairs are so much better whigs, after all, than even old Taylor himself? Not the least danger, my friend, there is not a man in our ranks who has brass enough to make such a proposition, or if there is, he will be hushed out of our conventions at once; no, the "free democracy" (I did not like that word "democracy," it sounded ominous)—the "free democracy" of Massachusetts will sink or swim alone—we will receive all comers, but we cannot unite with any party—there will be no New York union here for the sake of dividing the spoils of office, or, as that arch traitor, John Van Buren, said "for the sake of defeating the whigs."

Again, I was satisfied, but I afterwards learned that the attempt to unite with the democrats was made at our Senatorial convention, and that my distinguished friend favored it: and now I learn that another convention has been called and a mongrel ticket actually agreed upon!

And this brings me back to my question—"WHERE ARE WE NOW?"—we "free soil" whigs I mean. You see I cannot go to my free leader again, for it is very evident that he has elected me. He has played the same game himself which he told me would consign the New Yorkers to "everlasting infamy!" He has enrolled his name with Judas Iscariot! It seems to me now, that the whole thing was a game from the beginning, first to cheat us into opposition to our old friends, and then sell us to our old enemies. At any rate, I can't vote for a mongrel ticket, part democrat, and part I don't know what, and I am very much inclined to follow the advice given by the "free soil democracy" of New York, to some of their whig allies, and go back where I came from.

Now, Mr. Editor, you occupy a neutral position, and I suppose you take a very impartial view of all these operations—what do you advise me to do?

QUINCY PATRIOT.

It is not our province to give advice in such cases, especially where men admit that they have been well-advised already.

The inhabitants of Abington, in Plymouth county are agitating to have that town made the shire town of the county instead of Plymouth.

Contracts are about being closed for extending the Boston, Concord and Montreal Railroad to Warren Village, 68 miles from Concord, and the work of grading will be commenced in a few days.

The Governor of Pennsylvania has appointed the 29th of November as a day of Thanksgiving.

Hon. Abbott Lawrence has arrived in London, and entered upon his duties as American Minister.

The dwelling house of Perez Packard, in Plymouth, was consumed by fire on the 15th ult.

FOR CALIFORNIA. The ships, Richmond and Argonaut, sailed from Boston for California on Wednesday last, the first having one hundred and fifty three and the latter two hundred and sixteen passengers. We notice the names of the following persons from this town in the published list:—

In the Richmond—Samuel Pope, J. W. Sanborn, Joshua H. Spear, William P. Barnard, George Walker, Henry Souther, Henry Souther, Jr., Frederick Souther, Charles P. Derby, William G. Appleton, Ebenezer Bent, Winslow B. Bent, John Moses and Ebenezer Pope.

In the Argonaut—J. S. Reed, Harvey F. Whicher, Nathaniel Cushing, N. C. Cushing.

AGRICULTURAL EDUCATION. At a recent meeting of the Norfolk County Agricultural Society, Messrs. Charles F. Adams of this town, S. D. Bradford and B. F. Copeland of Roxbury, E. K. Whitaker of Needham, and E. L. Keyes of Dedham, were appointed a committee to prepare a memorial to the Legislature, for the establishment by the State of a system of thorough Agricultural Education.

A SMASH. On the Old Colony Railroad, about three miles from Boston, last Monday morning, a gravel train run off the track, in consequence of a switch being out of place, and some ten or a dozen gravel cars were smashed to pieces.

HEAVY ROBBERY. The safe of the Union Wharf Company, at Provincetown, was opened on Tuesday night of last week, and robbed of twenty thousand dollars, principally in bills of the Freeman's Bank, Boston.

DEATH OF AN ENGLISH TRAVELLER. Frederic Strickland, son of a British baronet, perished on the White Mountains of New Hampshire on the 19th ult. He perished in ascending Mount Washington alone, and the next day was found dead. He lost the track, and probably became insane in his wandering.

HYDROPHOBIA. Mr. Asa Amory died of hydrophobia, in Medford, on Tuesday last. Some time last May, Mr. Amory was bit by a small dog lying by the roadside. The bite caused a small wound, which was soon healed up, and nothing more thought of it.

COALITION IN NORFOLK COUNTY. The democrats and free-soilers of this County held conventions in Dedham on Wednesday. Committees of conference were chosen by the conventions who agreed on the following union ticket for Senators, Ezra Wilkenson, of Dedham; Charles F. Adams, of Quincy; M. M. Fisher, of Medway.

Great good feeling prevailed throughout, and the nominations were concurred in unanimously.

RAILROAD ACCIDENT. The Dedham train from Boston, on Wednesday morning, ran off the track about three miles from the former place in consequences of the wheel of the engine breaking and running under the forward car. This occurred near a high embankment and had not the deep sand restrained the impetus of the forward car there must have been a serious loss of life. Fortunately no one was injured.

ARREST. Fitz Henry Warren, Second Assistant Postmaster General, who has lately been paying a visit in Springfield, was arrested at the depot Tuesday forenoon, just before the departure of the southern train, at the instance of a creditor in Worcester, whose claim amounts to about $1100. Mr. Warren gave bail for his appearance on the 20th of next month.

THE CRESCENT CITY. This steamer arrived at New York on Sunday morning, from Chagres on the 17th inst. She brings nothing later from California. Panama was healthy, as was the Isthmus generally.

The steamer Panama sailed on the 9th for San Francisco, taking all the passengers that were at Panama. The steamers Unicorn and Senator had both sailed previous to that date. The ships Ocean and Onahue were both at Panama, and would sail for San Francisco.

PENMANSHIP.—Mr. S. Lee Lyman, Author and Teacher of Elegant Penmanship, and Stylographic Card Marking, purposes opening a School in this town, shortly, for the purpose of teaching Practical and Ornamental Penmanship. Due notice will be given of time and place.

Reviews of lectures before the Quincy Lyceum unavoidably postponed until next week.

The Sixteenth National Anti Slavery Bazaar will be held in Boston during Christmas week, and all desiring to co-operate are requested by notice in the Liberator to communicate with, Anne Warren Weston.

Rachel Sharp, a colored girl, from the Gloucester poor house, has been indicted for causing the death of her infant child, by poison.

The Baptist denomination of Philadelphia, and the Methodists of Ohio, have resolved that "dancing is prejudicial to the growth of grace in the soul."

Walker said the other night that marriage used to be matrimony—but it's now a matter of money.

David Hogan, a colored man, was killed in a quarrel, by George Cox, on Sunday evening, in Southac street, Boston.

The rascal who has been sitting the fires in Chelsea, has been caught in the act. His name is John Betton.

John C. Calhoun, it is announced, has devoted the past summer to the preparation of a Treatise on the Elementary Principles of Government and the Constitution of the United States.

On Monday afternoon, as the Empire State was about leaving the wharf at Fall River, the boat swung round and struck a post upon the wharf which was broken. A man who was standing near was struck on the head and so badly injured that his recovery is doubtful.

The master of the Quincy School, Boston, has been mulcted in $110 damages, for inflicting excessive punishment on one of the pupils.

A son of Thomas H. Benton stabbed a Mr. Lyons of Louisville, last week, in a quarrel about a lady.

The valuation of real and personal estate in the town of Plymouth is $2,518,733. Polis 1355.

The valuation in Abington amounts to $1,408,745; increase in the last year $25,533.

Capt. Stephen Brigham, one of the heroes of Bunker Hill, died in Vernon, (N. Y.) on the 11th ult., in the ninety-sixth year of his age.

The Democrats of Plymouth County have nominated John Russel and Jabez P. Thomson for Senators.

A Virginia paper presages a cold winter, because the squirrels are emigrating South in great numbers.

The organization of the expedition against Cuba, says the New York Sun, 'is at this moment as vital and formidable as on the day when the Proclamation was uttered against it.'

At Exeter, N. H., Benjamin Abbott, LL. D. died Thursday morning, at the venerable age of 87 years. He was extensively known as an able, indefatigable successful teacher in the capacity of Principal of the Phillips Exeter Academy.

A young lady of Boston has accepted an offer of $400 per month to act as book-keeper in a mercantile house in San Francisco.

Letter Bags of Steamships Crescent City and Ohio, for California, Panama, Lima, Kingston, &c., will close on Tuesday, Nov. 13, at the New York Post Office.

The editor of an exchange says he never saw but one ghost and that was the ghost of a sinner who died without paying for his paper. 'Twas horrible to look upon—the ghost of Hamlet was no circumstance to it.

Everything useful or necessary is cheapest. Walking is the most wholesome exercise; water the best drink; and plain food the most nourishing and healthy diet. Even in knowledge, the most useful is the cheapest.

Some disciple of honest Isaac Walton thus felicitiously toasts "the girls we love?" Slimmers in form, and delicate as a trout, May no true angler find his own a poet.

When you purchase an article, no matter what, a hat or a pair of shoes, a barrel of flour, or a book, look with confounded surprise at the seller.

Some sensible fellow has said, that where one man reads a merchant's sign, a hundred will read his advertisement.

Never marry a girl who is fond of being always in the street—who is fond of running to night meetings—who has a jewelled hand, and an empty head—who will see her mother work and toil while she lays in bed and reads novels, and feigns sickness.

A petition is in circulation for the pardon of Phillips, the "Cape Cod Gold Digger," and has already received more than four hundred signatures.

MARRIED.

In Cohasset, last inst., by Rev. Mr. Winchester, Mr. GEORGE M. PIERCE, of this town, to Miss MARIA SAWYER.

We cannot but express our sincere wishes for the continued joy and prosperity of the happy couple through life.

May all vexations, care and strife Be kept from out their way, And may the Bride with joyous heart E'er bless her wedding day.

Norfolk ss. To either of the Constables of the Town of Quincy, Greeting:

L. S. YOU are hereby required, in the name of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, to notify and warn the inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, qualified to vote in Town Affairs, to meet at the Town Hall, in said Quincy, on MONDAY, the twelfth day of November next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to act on the following articles, viz:—

ARTICLE 1. To choose a Moderator.

ARTICLE 2. To see if the Town will open, warm, and light the Rooms in the Town House, for the Quincy Lyceum, free from expense.

And you are also required to warn the Inhabitants of said Quincy, qualified to vote in Elections, to meet at the Town Hall, on MONDAY, the twelfth day of November next, at half past nine o'clock in the forenoon, for the following purposes:—

FIRST. To determine whether the Town will send a Representative to the next General Court.

SECOND. To bring in their votes on one ballot, to the Selectmen, for a Governor and Lieutenant Governor of the Commonwealth, three Senators for the County of Norfolk, and (if the Town so determine) a Representative to the next General Court.

Hereof full notice, and make return of this Warrant, with your doings thereon, unto the Town Clerk, at or before the time appointed for said meetings.

Given under our hands and seals at Quincy, this thirtieth day of October, in the year of our Lord eighteen hundred and forty nine.

GEORGE MARSH, Selectmen.

JOSEPH W. ROBERTSON, of Quincy.

A true copy, Attest: SETH ADAMS, Constable.

QUINCY, Oct. 31st, 1849.

NORFOLK SS.—By virtue of the above Warrant, I hereby notify and warn the Inhabitants of the Town of Quincy, who are qualified as therein expressed, to meet at the place, time, and for the purposes therein named.

Interesting Statement from the Empire State. Schuylerville, N. Y., April 25, 1847.

Mr. S. W. Fowle—Dear Sir: A desire to benefit the afflicted, has induced me to make the following statement of facts. My son, now seventeen years of age, has been afflicted, during his whole life, with a constant cough and pain in the chest, accompanied with night sweats and a hectic fever, which produced great emaciation and debility. During this time he was attended by many physicians of the highest repute, whose prescriptions gave but temporary relief. All our neighbors who saw him regarded him as one who was rapidly approaching an early and premature grave. I was prevailed upon by a friend to try WISLAK'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY. He commenced its use, and the next bottle gave him astonishing relief, and after using four bottles, his disease was overcome, and he was restored to sound and permanent health. WM. PETT.

Dr. Corbett's Highly Concentrated SHAKER SYRUP OF SARSAPARILLA.

The cures effected by this powerful alternative of the blood are multiplying daily. Certificates, as to its efficacy, are rendered voluntarily, to an almost unlimited extent. But on these alone the proprietors ask not the public to rely. The words of Science unquestionably must bring more conviction to the doubting, than even the accredited statements of hundreds rescued from the grave.

The distinguished Chemist, Augustus A. Hayes, M. D., who has chemically tested this preparation, writes as follows:—

Messrs. Edward Brinley & Co.—Gentlemen—With a bottle of "Corbett's Compound Concentrated Extract of Sarsaparilla" I received a copy of its Formula for preparing it.

From testing the Syrup, the fact of the existence in it of the active substances named, was ascertained, and the general good qualities of the preparation inferred.

The Formula exhibits the union of some of the best of our native medicinal roots and plants, with substances of the highest repute as remedial agents, and does not include any metallic compounds.

For the cure in which the medicinal qualities of Sarsaparilla are sought for, this preparation should have a preference in consequence of the care and skill evinced in compounding it. Respectfully,

A. A. HAYES, M. D., State Assayer of Mass.

DIED.

In this town, 27th ult., Rebecca Blanchard, eldest daughter of Mr. Thompson and Mrs. Polly Ann Baxter, aged 11 years and 3 months.

She has been cut off in the morning of life; her brief course is ended—her work is finished. Yet she will not be soon forgotten. Fond parents will cherish her memory for the many filial virtues she possessed; brothers and sisters, for her tender care and affectionate regard. Classmates and friends both in the Sabbath and public schools, will long remember her for her gentle and amiable manners, kind and benevolent disposition. She was ever diligent and faithful in all her studies, and never guilty of any of those little improprieties, that often tend to mar the happiness of an otherwise happy school. During her short but painful sickness, she was patient and meek; she expressed no fears in dying, and her parting words to her brothers and sisters, were—Be good! be good!

Her funeral, attended by numerous relatives and friends—by the children and teachers of the Universalist Sabbath School, and of the Point Grammar School. Rev. Mr. Dean, addressed them in a brief but affecting address. Then the following hymn, prepared for the use of the Grammar School, was sung with much heartfelt emotion and tender expression of feeling.

Not all, not all are here to-day, There is one vacant seat, One from our band hath passed away, No more with us to meet.

Rebless, studious, mild and kind, Rests in her little grave, She needs no more the Summer wind, Nor storms that o'er her rave.

Her gentle voice no more we hear, Nor pleasant smile behold, She rests upon her father's bier, Her life's brief story told.

Amid our merry throng alas! No more her voice will ring, We miss her from her seat—her class We miss her when we sing.

Teacher and playmate, classmates all, Will miss her day by day; Oh! may her early exit teach, That we too, pass away.

Sweet be our schoolmate's dreamless sleep, Upon that hallowed spot, Where holy angels ever keep, A bright and silent watch.

The Boston Almanac for 1850.

THIS popular Annual, beautifully embellished, bound in cloth, and gilt, surpassing any previous number in the elegance of its style, and the value of its contents, will be published about the middle of November.

IT WILL CONTAIN A NEW RAILROAD AND TELEGRAPH MAP OF NEW ENGLAND and the greater part of the State of New York. Over sixty Railroads are exhibited, and all the important places on the routes. It is finely engraved on Steel, and is alone worth the price of the whole work.

Calendar and Memoranda Pages, embellished with VIGNETTES OF THE TWELVE PRESIDENTS OF THE U. S., with brief Statistical Sketches imparting new information.

A complete CITY RECORD, being a systematic compilation of the various Departments of the Government. Recent Laws, FINANCES, PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS, including the WATER WORKS, (with fine Engravings,) a BUSINESS DIRECTORY of Boston, tables of Streets, Wharves, Halls, Buildings, Offices, Societies; Railroads, Telegraphs, Expresses, Omnibuses; Mails and Postages to all parts of the world; Rates of Wharfage; Weather Tables; Local Events, &c.

State Government, Probate Courts, and Commissioners of Insolvency, in Mass.; U. S. Government, with members of Congress politically designated; General Events, during the past year of tumult and change; and many other useful Statistics.

This Almanac has 220 closely printed pages, and contains more than an ordinary two, of 500 pages, which would sell for two or three dollars. For the Almanac, the price is only TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, with a liberal discount at wholesale. It is retailed at all the Stores in New England, and the cities of the South and West.

The work will in future be conducted by the undersigned, agreeably to arrangement with the late S. N. DICKINSON, its former proprietor. Orders sent immediately to Messrs. B. B. MUSE, SEY & CO., 29 Cornhill, or to M. THOMAS GROOM, 82 State Street, Publishers, will be early answered. COOLIDGE & WILEY.

FALL AND WINTER TRADE. Gentlemen wishing to furnish themselves with a Fashionable and well got up GARMENT would find it to their advantage to call and examine his

Unusually Large and Carefully Selected Stock of Goods. J. D. has just opened several CASES OF BROADCLOTHS, of English, French and German manufacture, embracing all the FANCY AND FAVORITE COLORS worn for Sack Coats, Dresses, Frock or Over Coats, or any other kind of a Garment worn.

Special attention will be given to this branch of our business. Children of three years and upwards can have their Garments made to order, and in a SUPERIOR STYLE, and as cheap as in any Store that can be named.

OUR FURNISHING DEPARTMENT. Linen, Kid and Fancy GLOVES; Linen SHIRTS, BOSOMS and COLLARS; Flannel SHIRTS and DRAWERS, of every color worn, and at unusually moderate prices; new styles of Fancy CRAVATS, and READY MADE CLOTHING. Those in want of any kind of a Ready Made Garment are invited to call, as they can be suited at any price. Parents wishing to purchase for themselves or children would do well to call and examine his extensive assortment of well made and trimmed Garments, suitable for all classes of society, from the mechanic to the independent gentleman.

Every article is got up under his own superintendence, made by SUPERIOR WORKMEN, and WARRANTED to be as good as can be got at any other Store in the United States.

Take Notice. Every article is marked in plain figures, from which no abatement can be made, and sold for CASH only; the purchase money refunded if every article does not PROVE to be such as they are represented to be.

JOHN DINEGAN, Proprietor of the Quincy Hall Clothing Depot, on the Braintree and Weymouth Turnpike. Quincy, Oct. 6. 4f
J. A. Holden, School St., Quincy, WOULD inform the inhabitants of Quincy and Braintree, that he has just received, and will be constantly receiving,

New and Suitable Goods for the Coming Season, his intention being to have always on hand A VARIETY OF FASHIONABLE GOODS, among which are to be found, a good assortment of German, French, English and American

BROADCLOTHS, of various Shades and Prices, suitable for DRESS, FROCK and OVER COATS. FOR SACKS AND OVRECOATS, Pilot, Devonshire Kersey, Tweeds, Cudington and Castor Cloths, suitable for men's or boys' clothes.

FOR PANTALOONS, New DOESKIN FABRICS, and other denominations of FANCY WEAVINGS, which he offers as particularly acceptable

FOR FALL AND WINTER WEAR. He would also call attention to his AMPLE ASSORTMENT of VESTINGS, of the most RICH and BEAUTIFUL STYLES, both as regards quality and pattern.

FURNISHING GOODS, Consisting of Caps, Stocks, Cravats, Bosoms, Collars, Flannel Shirts and Drawers. Also, READY MADE CLOTHING, at very low prices.

It will be found that he has adopted the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, a mode which is considered as a guarantee against the fraudulent devices of disreputable dealers, as also against the sometimes interminable process of making a bargain. Should there be any who disfavor such a system, they may, by calling at his establishment, find reasons to alter their opinion. Customers are allowed to return every article which on trial is found to have been misrepresented. But we doubt if they will find occasion to do so.

HE DOES HIS OWN CUTTING, which he attests himself he has no need to boast of, inasmuch as it is now too well known to need any man's praise, and least of all his own.

He invites the attention of such as expect Punctuality and Good Workmanship, FOR CASH, such being his rule of business—the REDUCED RATES at which he sells rendering any other mode impracticable. All who thus employ him, he is confident, will have good reason to be satisfied.

POETRY.

THE EMPTY HOUSE.

"This house to let!"—So long the placard staid,
I went across to see
If it were dull, or dark, or comfortless,
Or what the cause could be.

The parlor was a pleasant little room;
The chambers snug and light,
The kitchen was quite neat and cheerful too,
Although 'twas almost night.

My mind was somewhat in a thoughtful mood,
So, on a broken chair,
I sat me down to moralize awhile,
Upon the silence there.

How many changing scenes of life, thought I,
This solitude recalls!
Joy's ringing laugh and sorrow's smothered moan,
Have echoed from these walls.

Here, in this parlor, jovial friends have met
On many a winter's night!
Ripe ale has loomed, and this old rusty grate
Sent forth a cheerful light.

Here stood the sofa, whereupon has wooed
Some young and loving pair;
Here hung the clock that timed the last caress,
And kiss upon the stair?

These chambers might relate a varied tale,
Could the dumb walls find breath;
Of healthful slumber, and of wakeful pain—
The birth-cry and the death.

Some crusty bachelor has here, perhaps,
Crept grumbling into bed;
Some frenzied Caudle desperately sought
To hide his aching head.

Some modest girl has here unrobed the charms
Too pure for vulgar view;
Some bride has tasted here the sweets of love—
And certain lectures, too.

This little studio has seen the toil
Of some poor poet's brain,
His morn of hope, his disappointed day,
And bitter night of pain.

Or else some well-paid preacher has wrought out
His hundredth paraphrase;
Or some old book worm trimmed his lamp, to read
The tale of other days.

And where are they to whom this was a home?
How wide have they been cast,
Who gathered here around the social board,
And sported in days past?

How many distant memories have turned
To this deserted spot!
Recalling errors and reviving joys
That cannot be forgot!

Young love may here have heaved its dying sigh,
When angry words were spoke;
Domestic tyranny may here have reigned,
And tender hearts have broke.

Perchance some mother, as she passes by,
May cast a lingering gaze
Upon the scene of many a happy hour,
The home of her young days.

And what are they who next will fill this void
With busy noisy life?
Will this become a home of happy peace,
Or one of wretched strife?

In sober thought, I left the silent house,
And gladly sought my own;
And when I passed next week, upon the door
I saw the name of—Brown.

Boston Atlas.

ANECDOTES.

When cousin Ichabod first saw the elephant at the show, he exclaimed with much astonishment, "Then that's the real manager, the identical critter himself! Wouldn't it of them make a team to draw stone with? Ain't he a scrounger?" Ichabod went home and related what he had seen. "I seen," said he, "the genuine manager—the biggest lump of flesh that ever stirred. He had two tails, one behind and 'other before. Philosophers call the fore one a proboscis. He put one of his tails in my pocket and hauled out all the gingerbread—every hooter. What'd ye think he done with it? Why, he stuck it into his own pocket, and began to fumble for more."

A Western lady, who had a serious annoyance in a borrowing lady who was accused one morning by a child belonging to the latter, with "Pleese, ma'am, can you lend mother a little 'mjin?" "No, dear," replied the lady, kindly: "tell your mother that I haven't an 'Indian, but I can let her have a little 'nigger, if that will do." She was not troubled afterwards.

"Sister, are you happy?" "Yes, Deacon, I feel as though I was in Belzebub's bosom."

"Not in Belzebub's?" "Well, some one of the patriarchs, I don't care which."

"I am in favor of Jo King," exclaimed a political enthusiast, pushing his way through the crowd, up to the ballot box.

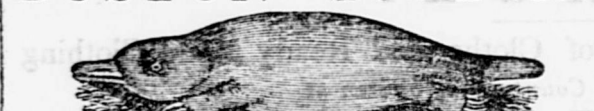

"Well, if you're in favor of Joking," replied Mose, "this is no place to practice, so yer'd better scud, or yer'll get lam'd."

Jem, hearing a man repeat the old saw, "You can never squeeze blood out of a turnip," remarked that he had seen blood squeezed out of a turn-up-nose. The philosopher mizzled.

"Pa, is beach good to eat?" "Certainly not, Cimon. Why do you ask me such a question as that?" "Cause the newspapers says that during the hot weather, the rich people all go and live on the beach. 'Phebe, be quick and grease this boy's temples, and put him to bed, or he'll die with the brain fever."

A person named Hyde, going to visit a tanner, fell into a vat and cried for help. "Oh," said the tanner, "I never pull out a Hyde until it is well tanned."

Another Wonder ADDED TO THE BOSTON MUSEUM.

THE REMARKABLE Ornithoryncus, Or DUCK-BILLED PLATYPUS,—the connecting link between the BIRD AND BEAST;

Being evidently HALF FISH, which, together with the CURIOUS, HALF FISH, HALF HUMAN MERMAID.

Which was exhibited in most of the principal cities of America, in the years 1840, 41, and 42, to the wonder and astonishment of thousands of naturalists and other scientific persons, whose previous doubts of the existence of such an astonishing creature were entirely removed.

THE IMMENSE COLLECTION OF NEARLY HALF A MILLION

QUINCY PATRIOT.

Cold Weather is Coming !! GET A STOVE !!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook,—as all will bear
me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

New England Air-Tight Cooking Stove,
both by myself and many of my friends, for the past two years, I can with the greatest confidence recommend it to my numerous customers, with the full assurance that they will find in its use every thing they could desire, and I agree that if any use this and do not find full satisfaction, I will take them back and refund the purchase money. I would invite all who are about purchasing this desirable article to call on the subscriber, (who is sole agent for this town,) and examine the above mentioned Stoves; where will also be found a GREAT VARIETY of other Stoves, both

COOK, PARLOR, OFFICE & SHOP STOVES,
among which is a new and elegant
Parlor Stove, for Wood or Coal, with or without Ovens.

Also—FURNACES, BAKERS, BRITANIA & JAPANNED WARE; TIN AND SHEET IRON
WORK Made to Order,
As good as the Best.

Quincy, Sept. 15. if CHARLES HOLMES.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives the Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boiler from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,
it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size from and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS
is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleas-
ing effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient
Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.
[Its price being within the means of all families who want a good stove.
A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis,
to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory
of the Agent in this town.
E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stoves, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECON-OMIST'S, and various other patterns of Cook Stoves, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.
—ALSO—
SHEET IRON, TIN AND COPPER WORK done to order,
Of the best Materials, and in a workmanlike manner.

Also—One hundred Apple Trees, at from twenty five to forty cents each, grafted fruit.
Also—One hundred Cherry Trees, in bearing order, at from fifty cents to one dollar each. For sale by the subscriber at his Nursery in South Quincy.
All persons who think the autumnal months an unsuitable time to remove Trees, are invited to call on the subscriber, who will convince them of their error.

NED BAYLIE'S REVENGE.

Didst ever know Patty Cary? No?—Well, then you have lost the acquaintance of the wildest, merriest witch of a maiden that ever was known. Let me see—how shall I describe her. I never could describe a merry maiden.
Their laughing black or blue eyes and rosy dimples will continually keep coming up, and make me forget all their characteristics. What then shall I do to make your acquaintance with Patty Cary? Why, I will just refer you to some such description as I want to give, but am unable. Yes, Fanny Forrester—dear Fanny Forrester is just the one. Read Fanny's merriest description of a merry maiden, and you will have Patty Cary.

She had wasted her whole summer in walking—walking, did I say?—I should rather say running over the hills, and now fall had overtaken her, all unprepared. She was the head of the family, for her mother had been dead for two years, and there were half a dozen little urchins dependent upon her care.

'What shall I do?' she said to her father, in a tone which sounded rather depending for her.
'School commences next week, and not one of the children is fitted.'

Her father looked up from his paper, and said quietly, 'Why don't you have a bee?
Your mother used to have sewing bees when you were all small, and got heaps of work done.'

Patty's face grew brighter, and she exclaimed—'I will do that. There are more than a dozen girls who will be glad to come,' and she began counting them to herself—'Susan Davis, Peggy Wilson, Mary Dawson, Kate Ring—O,
yes there's twenty.'

'But you must cut the work out, Patty,' interposed her father, 'and have everything all ready in order, so they will be able to accomplish something. You can go down to Squire Walton's in the morning and get your materials.'

Ah, what a load was off Patty's mind. To go down to Squire Walton's to have some twenty girls and a frolic, and all the winter's sewing, which had so long been a bugbear to her, would be done.

How busily her little fingers did fly for a few days! If she had but worked as busily long, she would have needed no bees to help her, for the whole hive would have been drones compared with her.

There were frocks and aprons, to say nothing of the pantalons and pantaloons. When all the work was cut and piled up on the old round table, which had been turned out of the corner for the occasion, then came the thought that something must be prepared for tea, for surely she could not ask them to work without a rich treat.

But she set about the preparations with a heavy good will. I wish you could have seen her, dear reader, when she was making those nice pies. Her sleeves were pushed up above her elbows, and never was a fairer arm displayed at lever or ball room. A chequered apron covered her chintz morning dress; cheeks covered with roses, and her mouth with dimples
she sang merrily at her task. Soon the long lively scoured table began to give evidence of her success. Pumpkin pie, of the rich gold color, loaves of white and brown bread of spongy lightness, tarts, cakes and other little et ceteras. And now she was taking out of her huge pot a leg of ham, which was to answer
for something more substantial.

Her hive was now all ready, and only waiting for the bees to swarm. The night before the snow fell gently and noiselessly, and covered the earth with its beautiful soft carpet. But in the morning the sun rose as clear and shone
as bright as if the elements had not been disturbed. Patty swept and dusted the 'spare room,' and a blazing fire crackled on the hearth. Immediately after dinner, the girls began to gather in, and then such a buzzing.

When Patty thought they had pretty much
all gathered in, she began to distribute her work.
Not one in three had provided themselves with trimmings, scissors or needles. Patty had forgotten to furnish either, so brother John, a stout boy of twelve, was summoned to do their bidding, and was kept plodding through the snow,
first in one direction, then in another, till the afternoon was well nigh spent. However, they did considerable, and promised to make amends
in the evening—the long, quiet evening that was coming. Patty had thought as they were going to meet to work, it would not be polite to invite any beaux. When Mr. Cary came home to tea, he told Patty he should not make his appearance again till they had gone, for he could not stand such a chatter. 'John,' said he, 'may take the pony and carry them home.'

They worked busily till eight o'clock and had really done wonders, when Patty sprang up all at once, and throwing down her work, declared she could stand it no longer, and they must devote the rest of the evening to fun and frolic. All followed her example, and such babbling as succeeded!

'What shall we do?' says one.

'Who does not know that when a party are all ready and waiting for a frolic it is hard to devise any thing to do?'

'Let's get a sleigh,' said Patty, 'and have a coast down the hill back of the house.'

All of them were in trim for a frolic, no matter what.

'Can we get a sleigh up on to the hill?'
asked one.

'O yes,' replied many voices.

'We'll get Ned Baylie's,' said Patty, 'he has a new light one—a real beauty. What say to the first ride?'

'Capital,' they all replied at once.

No sooner was the purpose formed, than they were on the way to accomplish it.

Ned Baylie was a fine young farmer, on whom all the lasses in town had fixed her eyes for the last few years. He had always kept a fine horse and carriage, and now had just purchased a splendid sleigh. His barn was near by Mr. Cary's, and a long way from the house.
Every thing was favorable, and the girls suppressed their mirth as they went out, only suffering it to show itself in a low giggle.

Some of the hardest fingers unshaped the barn door, and the sleigh was drawn noiselessly from its new resting place. They tugged away till their cheeks were warm and rosy with exercise; but they succeeded in getting it out on to the top of the high hill. The sleigh wasn't very large, but they piled a good many girls into it, and the rest were to have their turn next time. When it was all ready and the girls all packed in, then came the convulsions of laughter,—some of them fell down in the snow, and laughed and shook in as unladylike a manner
as possible.

They really wanted to give one shout when they started; but no! possibly that might betray them.

So off they went in silent glee, and on they went in the sleigh with full speed, till half way down the hill, they struck violently against a rock. Then came a suppressed shriek, and crash went Ned Baylie's new sleigh in atoms.
The girls from the top of the hill came running down, and all was fright and consternation.
Now their joy was turned to grief. What should be done? There was only one alternative, and that was to leave the sleigh where it was, and say nothing about it. If nobody told, Ned would never find out. Some of the girls didn't seem to care much, but Patty Cary, wild thing as she was, actually shed tears. I will not say she was not selfish. Perhaps she thought she might some time have a pleasant ride in it; for Ned had often cast love glances towards the merry firm, and she always blushed too when he stepped along side of her, and never laughed or coquetted with him as she did with some young men. She knew herself to be the whole cause of the disaster, and she thought (reasonably enough too) that she might incur his just displeasure. But they plodded their way back to the house, still as mice. A damper had been put upon their mirth.

Very soon the company dispersed, and many promises of secrecy were exacted from each other at parting.

Patty trembled lest she should show signs of guilt when she should hear of it, but she resolved to try for once to conceal her knowledge of the circumstance.

When Mr. Cary came in to breakfast the following morning, he said,—'Well, a pretty scrape some of our boys had last night. Ned Baylie's new sleigh was taken out of the barn, drawn to the top of this hill back of the house,
and evidently intending to have a ride; but the sleigh struck a rock in coming down, and smashed her pretty well up. Ned, has offered ten dollars reward, and he's a pretty sharp one.
I rather guess he'll find 'em out. Sorry times for 'em if he does.'

Patty's lip quivered a little, and her heart went pit-a-pat, but her father never noticed any change in her demeanor.

For the next few days nothing was talked of but this daring outrage. It was reported Ned had sworn, if he did find out, to be pretty well revenge.

But yet the secret was well kept, notwithstanding all the slanders put upon the fair sex about secret keeping. Now I want to ask if this is not an unanswerable argument in favor of their caution and reserve? Here were at least twenty maidens, all hugging a pretty important secret. Not a lip could Ned hear.

Patty could not act herself, though, when she saw him, and soon began to fancy he wasn't quite so attentive as he had been formerly.
Whether it was for this cause or not I could not tell, but surely she had lost some of her vicacity, and didn't seem quite as happy as formerly. Her father was constantly praising Ned Baylie for his enterprise and industry, and he would add, with a sly wink at Patty, 'I used to think he had an eye to some of my property once, but may be he's concluded 'twould be a poor investment.'

Patty always turned and buried herself about something else to hide her confusion, for Patty used to be somewhat piqued too, to see him going to neighbor Davis's so often. She couldn't see any peculiar attractions in Susan—
not she; perhaps he could though.

Mary Dawson was going to have a party, and of course all in that section were invited. Patty thought of Ned Baylie's wandering attentions when she arranged her hair and dress; and really she did look far prettier than any other girl. O, what a merry time they had.
'Twas fine sleighing, and several young men proposed the getting up a regular sleigh ride for the next week. To go about twelve miles, and have a dance and supper, was what they proposed. Never was a better opportunity chosen to propose a thing of this sort. All were on the spot.

No sooner had they got their plans pretty well managed, than Ned Baylie stepped to the side of Patty Cary, resolved to secure her for a partner for himself.

Patty was not in just the right mood to receive his attentions very cordially. She tossed her head very scornfully to several remarks he made, and as soon as a favorable opportunity occurred, turned to chat in her most fascinating manner with one who had long been a rival for Ned, with the merry girl.

Ned muttered as he turned on his heel,—
'She needn't think to come any of her coquetish tricks on me; she's got the wrong man.'

As soon as Ned was beyond the reach of her voice, her vivacity all forsook her and she barely sustained her part in the conversation.
But Ned never looked back to see what effect
his absence had produced.

He sought Susan Davis, and offered her the same invitation he had resolved on giving Patty, though not with quite so much pleasure.
It was readily accepted, and very soon noised about the room. Whether Patty was made unhappy by it we know not, but she slipped out, and found her way home at an hour
much earlier than would have been anticipated.
She steadily refused all invitations to the sleigh ride, and she had many. Ned didn't venture to inquire till they got ready to start, whether she was going or not; but when he saw the party all assembled and no Patty, he felt really disappointed. He ventured to ask if she had been forgotten.

'Forgotten! no,' echoed many voices; 'she wouldn't come at any rate; she had invitations enough, but they didn't suit her ladyship.'

Ned's pleasure was marred; he was pleased too at the thought that possibly it might be for his sake. At any rate, he talked so much about her, and what a loss her merry laugh and sparkling eyes were to the assembly, that Miss Susan Davis began to feel quite incensed about it, and said with a tone of some pique, that she had flirted and coquetted with so many of the young men, that she guessed they began to grow tired of her. Ned thought she could draw a host about her with a smile any time.

'She hasn't been quite as lively as usual these last few weeks; what can be the matter, do you know?'

'No I don't,' rather tartly replied Susan.
She used to be well enough, and has had part
in some rather bold plots.'

'Indeed,' was Ned's only response, for he was just coming to the conclusion that he had more than ordinary interest in her merry face and charming manners.

'By the way, Mr. Baylie, said Susan, after an awkwardly long pause, 'did you ever find out who broke that splendid new sleigh of yours?'

She had touched a sure subject to command
his attention. 'No do you know any thing about it?' he asked earnestly.

'Suppose I did,' she replied evasively, 'would you give me the promised reward?'

'Indeed I would, willingly,' he replied, 'ten dollars would be nothing if I could discover the rascal. I'd have my revenge.'

'Don't be too harsh, Mr. Baylie,' she continued, 'very likely you wouldn't execute one of your threats.'

'Wouldn't I, though?' he asked, in a determined tone. 'Just let me find out and I'll show you what I can do. Now answer me straightforward, do you know who was the pre-tender?'

'I will answer you in as concise a manner—
Possible I do.'

'Who was it then?'

'Oh, it doesn't follow because I know, that I shall tell you. Very likely it may be some one I have great interest in and wouldn't like to subject to your vengeance.'

'Come,' he continued, with something of impatience, 'don't trifle so—if you know, tell me.'

'Suppose I tell you that your anger will vanish, when I announce the name?'

'I don't care what you tell me about my anger, if you tell the name.'

'Well then, Patty Cary.'

'Patty Cary! pshaw! I don't quibble; I don't believe you know any more about it than I do.'

'I have told you truly and now you won't believe me.'

'Why she couldn't have broken a sleigh alone; she must have had assistance, and perhaps instigators.'

Then Susan was obliged to recount the whole history of the sewing bee and the frolic,
and when she had concluded, she asked, mischievously.

'Where new is your promised vengeance?'

'Not abated a whit—I will still have my revenge.'

After all was told, Susan tried to enjoin secrecy on him as to the source of his knowledge, and even promised to give up the reward if he wouldn't betray her. Ned was in deep meditation all the rest of the evening; very likely he was planning some mode of revenge; for finding it a woman, any thing he had proposed to himself before, would most likely fail him in the present emergency.

At any rate, he didn't seem to flinch in his stern resolutions, for the next morning Patty received a letter, requesting her presence at the house of Ned Baylie, to answer to a charge of willfully breaking a sleigh belonging to said Edward Baylie.

Poor Patty trembled as soon as she read the first sentence, and ran to her chamber and wept bitterly, before she could go any further.
There was not much more to be said. It barely said, it was thought better the examination should take place at his house than more publicly in order to save both her and her father's feelings; indeed, it was not necessary that the subject should be mentioned at all at present.

Patty prepared her dinner with a heavy heart, though she tried to appear cheerful. After it was through she prepared for her walk, without mentioning its object to any one. When she arrived Ned received her with great dignity and showed her into a room, in the centre of which stood a table very imposingly covered with papers.

He requested her to be seated, and notwithstanding he preserved the utmost reserve and composure of manner, yet somehow Patty felt at ease as soon as she entered his presence.

'Are you to examine me?' she asked with the assurance of the former merry twinkle in her eye.

Ned answered without losing gravity, and then handed her a paper, which he said would explain her the subject.

Patty's little hand trembled a little as she took it up, but as her eyes passed down its page the color came quickly to her cheeks, and ere she was quite through she covered her face
as nearly as she could with her hands, and half crying half laughing, sunk—I was going to say into a chair—but she did not, though she fully intended to. A stout pair of arms encircled her little waist and bore her to a seat on the sofa, and then the owner of those arms took a seat beside her, and took her hand in his
—and—and—I don't know, but I should say, revenge was sweet that time any way. And I believe Susan Davis and several other girls tho' it queer vengeance. But we are quite sure parties interested in the affair were satisfied
with it, as it's no further business of ours.

PRINTERS AND PRINTING. J. T. Buckingham, Esq., speaks of the importance of the printers to authors, as follows:—

'Many, who condescend to illuminate the dark world with the fire of their genius, through the columns of a newspaper, little think of the lot of the printer, who, almost suffocated by the smoke of a lamp, sits up till midnight to correct
his false grammar, bad orthography, and worse punctuation. I have seen the arguments of lawyers, in high repute as scholars, sent to the printer in their own hand writing, many words
—and especially technical and foreign terms—abbreviated words, words misspelled, and a few or no points, and those few, if there were any, entirely out of place. I have seen the sermons of eminent "divines," sent to press, without points or capitals to designate the division of the sentences—sermons, which, if published with the imperfections of the manuscript, would disgrace the printer's devil, if he were the author. Suppose they had been so printed. The printer would have been treated with scorn and contempt as an illiterate blockhead—as a fellow better fitted to be a wood Sawyer than a printer.'

Nobody would have believed that such gross
and palpable faults were owing to the ignorance or carelessness of the author. And no one but the practical printer knows how many hours a compositor, and after him a proof reader, is compelled to spend in reducing to a readable condition, manuscripts that the writers themselves would be puzzled to read.'

LARD OIL. In Cincinnati it is calculated that 11,000,000 pounds of lard will be run into lard
this year, two sevenths of aggregate will make searings, the residue oil, say about 20,000 barrels of 43 gallons each. There is also an establishment in that city extensively engaged in extracting the grease from the residue of the hog, and will probably this year operate in this way on 30,000 hogs. This concern alone is expected to turn this season 3,000,000 pounds of lard; 3,000,000 pounds of stearine have been made in one year into candles and soap
in these factories, and they can make 6,000 pounds of candles per average day throughout the year.

SOMETHING FOR THE CURIOUS. The word
"warrent" will spell one hundred and sixty-seven grammatical English words.

THE SABBATH. The Sabbath is God's special present to the working man, and one of its chief objects is to prolong his life, and preserve efficient his working tone. In the vital system
it acts like a compensation pond; it replenishes
the spirits, the elasticity and vigor, which the last six days have drained away, and supplies
the force which is to fill the six days succeeding; and in the economy of existence, is answered by a saving's bank. The frugal man who puts aside a pound to-day, and another pound next month, and who, in a quiet way is always putting past his stated pound
from time to time, when he grows old and frail, gets not only the same pounds back again, but a good many pounds besides. And the conscientious man, who husbands one day of existence
in every week—who, instead of allowing the Sabbath to be trampled and torn in the hurry
and scramble of life, treasures it devoutly up—the Lord of the Sabbath keeps it for him, and in length of days and hale old age, gives it back with usury. The savings bank of human existence is the weekly Sabbath,

DREAMING FOR A BREAKFAST. Down in Aroostook county, Maine, a Scotchman and an Irishman happened to be journeying together through the most interminable forests of that region, and by some mishap had lost their way,
and had wandered about in a famishing condition for a while, when they fortunately came across a miserable hovel which was deserted save by a lone chicken. As this poor bird was the only thing eatable to be obtained they eagerly despatched and prepared it for a supper.
When laid before them, Pat concluded that it was insufficient for the support of both himself and Sawney, and therefore made a proposition to his companion that they should spare their chicken, until the next morning, and he who had the most pleasant dream should have the chicken, which was agreed to by the Scotchman.
In the morning Sawney told his dream, and he thought angels were drawing him to heaven in a basket, and was never so happy before in his life. Upon concluding his dream, Pat exclaimed, 'Och, sure and by Jabsers, I saw you going,
and thought you wouldn't come back after the chicken, and I got up and ate it myself.'

MEDICINAL QUALITIES OF THE GRAPE. In
the vineyard districts of France, Spain, and other wine-growing countries the medicinal properties of the grape are well known and are highly prized. The free use of this fruit, has a most salutary effect upon the animal system, diluting the blood removing obstructions in the liver, kidneys, spleen and other important organs, giving a healthy tone and vigor to the circulation, and generally augmenting the strength of the entire animal economy. In diseases of the liver, and especially in that monstrous compound affliction dyspepsia, the sa-lutory and potent influence of a "grape diet" is well known. The invigorating influence of the ripe grape, freely eaten, upon the feeble and debilitated is apparent, supplying vigor and the rosy hue of health in the stead of weakness and pallor, and this by diluted property, which enables the blood to circulate in the remote vessels of the skin, which before receiving only the serous or watery particles.

THE TEENS. The teens! that beautiful, mysterious portion of the life of man! when he was born as it were again into a new existence,
when the sweet dream of infancy is over, and all its brilliant flowers are faded; when a sense of higher meaning in the things of this world—
a deep reaching of the spirit after the hidden life behind this varied curtain—a stretching forth of the soul towards the lofty, the generous, the heroic—those whisperings of the heart which tell of a higher destiny prepping, of something grand to be achieved, some great and noble end answered, by this existence—this soul, now
first surrendered, as it were, in our own land, reveals itself. The teens! sacred interval between the prosaic, oft-told tale, has begun, while life is yet to the young, clear eye that which poetry is or should be. "A more ample greatness, a more exact goodness, and a more absolute variety than can be found in the nature of things!" The teens! Oh, what a push of promise is there in that first gush of fervent life into flowers! But the wind of the desert has passed over the blossoms, and where are they?
What is the Summer to the Spring?

TEARS. Tears are sometimes a relief and sometimes a burden; they are a relief to a woman, but a burden to a man; they relieve a woman because her sympathy approves them;
they burden a man because his pride rebukes
them; a woman weeps because she feels, a man because he can't feel; a woman's tears affect a man but a man's disaffect a woman; a woman

SATURDAY, NOV. 10, 1849.

DR. J. V. C. SMITH.

The third lecture before the Lyceum was given by Dr. Smith, of Boston. Subject—"Water, and its general circulation through the Earth."

The popularity of this gentleman as a lecturer is not a profound lecturer, drew a very large audience. The Town Hall was crowded to the gallery. This fact we consider a sufficient compliment to the Dr. without adding a word ourselves. His remarks were animated by the same youthful fire and energy which characterized his addresses before the Lyceum during its early years.

Having introduced his subject, and remarked briefly in regard to the Earth's structure, the lecturer proceeded to explain the philosophy of Springs, and the Artesian Wells. Some speculations in regard to coal mines existing in this vicinity were introduced with a naive sui generis. Historical facts in regard to the immense depth to which boring for water had been carried in France, were detailed with much ability. The easy and "off-hand" manner of speaking which distinguishes this gentleman, contributes in no small degree to his popularity. It seems to be in the manner, more than in the matter that the interest of his auditors centre. He says a thing so easily you cannot but be pleased, and so naturally, you cannot but believe.

The conclusion of this lecture embraced a description of the Hydrostatic Ram, an instrument of recent invention, its great utility in domestic use and the ease of its application to any waterfall.

Here the lecture was exceedingly useful and practical.

"THE NET THAT GATHERED OF EVERY KIND."

This is the title of a Sermon published by Rev. William P. Lunt, of this town, on the occasion of the departure of a company of our townsmen for California. It has been published in a neat pamphlet form, and is for sale at Gill's Bookstore, price ten cents. We make the following extract from the work:

"Every human undertaking may be illustrated by the similitude which the Great Teacher employs in my text. Men throw their net into the sea. They engage in some enterprise. Their labors are followed by a great variety of results,—some good, some bad, some favorable, some disastrous. The pulling of the net to shore, examining the contents, separating what is worth preserving from what is worthless, perhaps poisonous; all this is the work of time, and must be left to experience and to the operation of that law of Providence, by which what is of permanent value in human labors endures, and what is noxious and evil is doomed to be burned up, or to be cast out and to be trodden under foot of men."

This, we may fairly assume, will be equally true of the great movement which is carrying away so many of our population to the shores of the Pacific, in quest of the treasures which are said to be there accumulated, to reward the toil of those who leave so much behind to fetch them from nature's bank of deposit. And, although there may be no reason to doubt that that bank may suspend specie payments on all demands that may be presented for a great while to come, yet that is but a single item when we would fairly consider and judge of the whole enterprise, and weigh its probable benefits along with its equally probable, or we may rather say, its certain difficulties, labors, perils, and privations. If any, who engage in this enterprise, imagine they shall catch nothing but gold fish, when they throw the net, they flatter themselves to their cost. If they do not sit down at home, before they leave, and consider the labor of throwing the net, of watching and tending the same, and of drawing it when full to shore; if they do not bear in mind that all kinds of fish look prettily in the water, and that it is only when they are taken up and examined that it can be known if any one contains a piece of money in his mouth; they deceive themselves unnecessarily. But, on the other hand, although the exercise of a cautious forecast is the dictate of prudence, we are not obliged to conclude that none should engage in this enterprise, not even those who have counted the cost, and who are willing to comply with the terms upon which alone a measure of success can be secured."

Remain, my dear Sir, yours, truly,
WILLIAM JAY.

J. W. TAYLOR.

SENDING AN UMBRELLA BY TELEGRAPH. Among the very gentlemanly conductors on the Erie railroad, none is better known for his politeness and humor than Mr. Ayres. Not long since, an old lady on the upward train of cars, when they were upward of a hundred miles from Piermont, suddenly missed her umbrella. "There!" she exclaimed, dolorously, in a voice that attracted the attention of all in the cars, "There! I do declare, I've left my umbrella aboard the steamboat down to Piermont," and continued bewailing her great loss till Ayres entered. She repeated her grievance and sorrow to him. "Bless you ma'am," said he, "is that all? we can put you all right in a minute. Send for it by telegraph, ma'am; and so saying he reached up his hand to the bell rope that passes through all the cars, and jerked it once or twice and then went to another car, where by a wise arrangement, all articles picked up on the boat are carried along with the train. He returned a moment afterward with the umbrella. "Lord-amassy!" exclaimed the old lady in a fever of delight and astonishment, "I knowed they sent letters and newspapers by telegraph, but it's the first time I ever heard of sending an umbrella!"—Journal of Commerce.

GREEN TEA. The Chinese manufacture green tea for the British and American markets by using, in the dyeing process, a coloring matter composed of indigo and gypsum, powdered in the proportion of an ounce to fourteen and a half pounds of tea in many instances, it is said, Prussia blue, a still more deleterious substance, is substituted for indigo. So says a correspondent of the London Athenaeum, who has witnessed the whole process. The information that every hundred pounds of this tea contains more than half a pound of gypsum and indigo, or Prussia blue, will be more curious than agreeable to the lovers of the green and may serve very rationally to account for its prejudicial effects.

STEAM NAVIGATION. The Oriental and West India Steam Packet company own forty steamers, which have cost upon the average $250,000 each; aggregate cost, $10,000,000. They employ 2,000 sailors, and have sixty foreign establishments connected with the service. Their expenses are $10,000,000 a year, of which $2,300,000 is covered by the receipts from government for carrying the mails. Ten thousand persons in Southampton are more or less connected with and dependent upon this company.

THE DIFFERENCE. Liverpool, the first commercial city in England, the very counterpart of New York, with the same population, affords only one daily paper. New York supports over a dozen flourishing dailies, and a host of weeklies.

WAR. Sir W. Molesworth stated in the British parliament last year, that the war with the Kaffirs in India, which cost the British nation £2,500,000—$12,000,000—was occasioned by the loss of one axe and two goats, which were alleged to have been stolen by the Kaffirs.

Whig Meeting.

The Whigs of Quincy are requested to meet at the Lyceum Hall, THIS EVENING, at 7 o'clock, to nominate a candidate for Representative to the next General Court, and to transact any other business that may come before them.

I. W. MUNROE,
Chairman of Town Whig Committee.

The Rt. Rev. Marston Eastburn, D. D., Bishop of the Protestant Episcopal Church in Massachusetts, will preach in Christ Church on SUNDAY (to-morrow) EVENING next, at a quarter before seven o'clock, and administer the Rite of Confirmation.

CONSUMPTION.

This terrible disease is commonly attributed to our climate. But if the climate were to blame the disease would have been inflicted on that, and not upon the people. We think the fault is in the people, and that if the people would keep the skins of themselves and their children properly washed, and abstain from gluttony, poison, and intemperance for a generation or two, CONSUMPTION would be no more known.

However, consumption prevails as matters are, and picks off the best and prettiest of us, in our prime. In this state of things we must do the best we can, piece and patch out the web of life, with journey, voyages and medicines. Of all the medicines we know of Dr. Wistar's Balsam of Wild Cherry is what we first recommend. We have in our office a living proof of its efficacy, who, for five years, would have been beneath the bed and long ago. The inventor of this medicine, Dr. Wistar, was a man of science, of humanity, and undoubtedly prepared the remedy in its best form and the public may rely upon Mr. Fowler for the genuine article.—Boston Chronotype, Jan. 18, 1847.

FURTHER EVIDENCE.

As to the great efficacy of Dr. Corbett's Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla.

Messrs E. Brinley & Co. Gentlemen—I was brought quite low in the summer of 1847, with the Dysentery. I sought a Physician several times and was dangerously sick, so much so as to believe I must die. I grew worse daily, and was so reduced and weak that I frequently fainted away. For many days I complied with the directions of my physicians. But obtaining no relief and hearing of Corbett's Syrup of Sarsaparilla, I was induced to make trial of it.

My little boy about five years of age was also very sick of the same disease at the same time. The first few doses I took revived miserably. The pains were speedily allayed and the disease was so early checked that I was enabled to attend work in the course of a week. My little boy was also soon cured, and only part of a bottle was taken by both of us. Absent from home some time after, I returned from Montreal in 1848, with the same disease, which had been increasing on me many days. I resorted again to the 'Shaker Syrup of Sarsaparilla,' and took only a few doses, when again I was early and fully restored to health. I know this Syrup cured me, and I recommend it to all who may suffer as I have.

The Boston Almanac for 1850.

THIS popular Annual, beautifully embellished,

bound in cloth, and gilt, surpassing any previous work in the elegance of its style, and the value of its contents, will be published about the middle of November.

IT WILL CONTAIN

A NEW RAILROAD AND TELEGRAPH MAP OF

NEW ENGLAND and the greater part of the State of New York. Over sixty Railroads are exhibited, and all the important places on the routes. It is finely engraved on Steel, and is alone worth the price of the whole work.

Calendar and Memoranda Pages, embellished with

VIGNETTES OF THE TWELVE PRESIDENTS

OF THE U. S., with brief Statistical Sketches importing new information.

A complete CITY RECORD, being a systematic compilation of the various Departments of the Government, Recent Laws, FINANCES, PUBLIC IM-

PROVEMENTS, including the WATER WORKS,

(with fine Engravings), a BUSINESS DIRECTORY

of Boston, tables of Streets, Wharves, Halls, Buildings, Offices, Societies, Railroads, Telegraphs, Expresses, Omnibuses; Maps and Postages to all parts of the world; Rates of Wharfage; Weather Tables;

State Government, Probate Court, and Commissioners of Insolvency, in Mass.; U. S. Government, with members of Congress politically designated;

General Events, during the past year of tumult and change; and many other useful Statistics.

The Almanac has 220 closely printed pages, and contains more than an ordinary Sw. of 500 pages, which would sell for two or three dollars. For the

Almanac, the price is only TWENTY FIVE CENTS, with a liberal discount at wholesale. It is retailed at all the Stores in New England, and the cities of the South and West.

The work will in future be conducted by the undersigned, agreeably to arrangement with the late

S. N. DICKINSON, its former proprietor.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

TO MR. —

Believe thou th' Eternal will Consign a soul to hell,
And canst thou hope, while doubting still,
All with thee will be well?

How knowest thou th' Eternal's mind
Or that thou sharest his grace?
How dar'st thou hope in heaven to find
At least a resting place.

If one, if only one, be lost,
What proof thou art not he?
Wilt thou, presumptuous sinner, boast
That there are worse than thee!

The best that e'er as man was known,
That e'er on earth has trod,
Decl'd that none were good, save one,
That one th' Eternal God.

Thy debt, perhaps, thou thinkest light,
When with some brother's weight,
But he who holds the scales aright
Knows all things he has made.

Some, rear'd and taught by pious men,
Pass saintly on their way;
Some, born within the pirate's den,
Are taught to rob and slay.

Had these a different culture prov'd,
The saint, perhaps, had been
A fiend—the thief a saint beloved;
God sees behind the screen.

If one be lost thy chance is small,
Th' millions round thee stand;
One righteous God has made them all
And holds them in his hand.

If one be cast to endless woe,
How can I trust in thee,
My God, since none on earth can know
But that one I may be!

Or if another, his dread cries,
His agonizing groan,
Would make a discord in the skies
And shake th' eternal throne.

No longer with th' angelic choir
Would mercy's plaudits swell;
But echo, on her sounding lyre,
Would ring the cries of hell.

Is this the place that Christians love!
Where mercy forth is driven?
Is this the mansion of the dove,
The Savior's boasted heaven.

Ah no, if sympathy be there,
If charity endure,
Our souls shall witness no despair
That mercy will not cure.

The Savior's hand from every eye
Shall wipe away the tear;
Shall stifle ev'ry rising sigh
And quiet every fear.

While ransom'd millions gather round
To praise the sinner's friend,
And heaven reechoed with the sound,
Thy mercy has no end.

F. M. ADLINGTON, Weymouth.

ANECDOTES.

A Boston physician, when a young man, occupied an apartment opposite a married couple. One could not hear the rough voice of the husband grumble out—"Take away your boots!" to which the wife replied in a querulous tone—"Ah! you did not speak so when we were first married—then you used to say to me, take away your little footstools today!"

A person not over and above opulent, once borrowed four dollars of a gentleman, which was never expected to be paid and no note was given. He called one day and observed, "I owe you four dollars, don't I?" "Yes," replied the other. "Well," said the borrower, "just lend me six and that will make it ten!"

A clergyman in a parish church in England, having put a notice into the clerk's hand, one Sunday, stating that services would in future be morning and evening and morning and afternoon alternately, honest Roger improved upon, and said that the service would be to "all eternity."

"I wouldn't marry an eastern man if I had to live an old maid all my life," exclaimed a Boston country lass. "Why not?" demanded an astonished companion. "Because every paper you pick up contains an account of the failure of the eastern males!"

"Tom, stand out of the way of that gentleman!" "How do you know he is a gentleman?" "Because he has got on striped trousers."

A Rhode Island clergyman lately illustrated the necessity of corporal punishment for the correction of juvenile depravity with the remark, that "the child, when once started in a course of evil conduct, is like a locomotive on the wrong track—it takes the quickest to get it off!" When the reverend gentleman delivered himself of this bit of waggonery, with all becoming gravity, a general smile lit up the countenance of many an attentive hearer.

A postmaster in Pennsylvania, on entering his house recently, found an infant boy on the door steps, which somebody had left there. Being asked how he accounted for this incident, he replied "that the mails were very irregular all over the country."

Judge Jeffries, when on the bench, told an old fellow with a long beard that he supposed he had a conscience as long as his beard. "Does your lordship," replied the old man, "measure consciences by beards? If so, your lordship has none at all."

"Aint you afraid you will break, while falling so?" said a chap in the pit of a circus to the clown. "Why so?" asked the latter. "Because you are a tumbler," replied the wag. The clown faints.

"Shall we take a 'bus, up Broadway?" said a young New Yorker, who was showing his country cousin the wonders of that city. "Oh dear! no!" said the frightened girl; "I would not do that, in the street!"

The Globe:
A Congressional, Agricultural and Literary NEWSPAPER.

THE approach of Congress calls out the Annual Prospectus of the Globe Establishment. The time is full of interest. The coming in of a new Administration—the consequent broaching of a new policy touching the internal concerns of the country—the new and most important issues arising from the late vast accession to the public domain, and the great national objects associated with it—the impending difficulty in our relations with France, and the possible complication of our affairs with the troubles of Europe,—conspire to create great expectation as to the proceedings of the next Congress. The approaching Session will probably continue till late in the summer of 1850. The debates, from the agitation of so many questions of vital interest to the Republic, will draw forth all the talent of the National Legislature. To bring its deliberations home to the people, on each succeeding day, while measures are maturing, is, in effect, to bring the whole nation into council. The discussion, spreading from the Capitol to the remotest parts of the Union, forms a public opinion which reacts upon Congress and controls its decisions.

To become a useful instrument, however humble, to assist the working of the admirable machinery of our popular institutions, is the ambition of the conductor of the Globe. Extraordinary preparations have therefore been made to meet the increasing demands of our rapidly-improving and growing country for Congressional intelligence.

The Globe Press has already enlisted the ablest Reporters yet known to Congress; its materials and machinery are of the best sort; and the exclusive devotion of the individual who for so many years has made it his study to embody and publish the labors of Congress, gives reason to hope that an advance will be made in the accomplishment of this undertaking commensurate with its increased importance. But the accumulation of expense consequent on the additional number of Reporters required—the extra charges incurred in printing at night the debates of the preceding day—the vast additional made to the mass published, by the protracted sessions and the fuller reports given,—will render our enterprise a failure, unless Congress shall so far patronize it as to become a purchaser of such portion of the daily sheets issued, as shall contribute to make the reports that fill them. The undersigned has ventured on the will conduct the work for the next session, in the expectation that Congress will subscribe for as many daily sheets for each Member, at the subscription price, as will, in part, defray the expense of reporting, and give them circulation as Congressional documents in their several districts. This will enable the Publisher to bear the charge of reporting, and it will give an impulse to the circulation of the Congressional Print, which, although the cheapest in the Union (the expense of preparation considered) will yet yield sufficient profit to make the system permanent.

John C. Rives having purchased the interest of F. P. Blair in Jackson Hall—the printing office machinery and materials—becomes the sole proprietor thereof, and will give his exclusive attention to the Congressional Department. J. C. Pickett will conduct the Miscellaneous Department of the Newspaper. F. P. Blair retires from both concerns, with prayers for their permanent usefulness and prosperity.

The Globe will be published daily during the session of Congress, and weekly the remainder of the year, and will undergo distribution in the form of a Weekly Globe, a Congressional Globe, and an Appendix.

The Weekly Globe will contain Agricultural and miscellaneous articles; and will occasionally give debates of such importance as command universal interest.

The price of the Weekly Globe is reduced to one dollar, with a view to obtain a more general circulation. Subscribers who have hitherto paid $2 per annum, will be charged only $1 after the expiration of the first year.

The Congressional Globe will embody, as it has done for the last sixteen years, Congressional proceedings and debates exclusively.

The Appendix will contain the revised speeches separately, and the messages of the President of the United States and the reports of the Heads of the Executive Departments.

The Congressional Globe and Appendix will be published as fast as the proceedings of Congress will make a number. Subscribers may expect one number of each a week during the first weeks of session, and two or three numbers of each a week afterwards until the end of the session. Each volume will probably comprise two thousand royal quarto pages, of small type.

Complete indexes to the Congressional Globe and Appendix will be sent to subscribers soon after Congress adjourns.

Nothing of a political party aspect will appear in the Globe save that which will be found in the Congressional reports. A paper assuming to be an impartial vehicle for all sides, cannot maintain its character if the editorial columns reflect a party hue.

TERMS.

For one copy of the DAILY GLOBE (daily during the session of Congress, and weekly during the recess) $5 00

For the DAILY GLOBE for less than a year, at the rate of 84 cents a month

For one copy of the WEEKLY GLOBE for one year, 1 00

For one copy of the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE during the session, 3 00

For one copy of the APPENDIX during the session, 3 00

For four copies of either, or part of both during the session, 10 00

For ten copies of either, or part of both during the session, 20 00

The prices for these papers are so low, that advance payments are indispensable to carry them on.

Postmasters who may obtain subscribers will be allowed twenty per cent. on the subscription prices for single papers, which they may retain when they send on the names of subscribers and the subscription money.

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,

it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 5, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS

is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and Durable, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove. A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

of the Agent in this town. E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stoves, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIST'S, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

GET A STOVE !!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE!" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish, on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook,—as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

lars and Fifty Cents if not paid till the end of six months—THREE DOLLARS if delayed till the expiration of the year.

No subscription nor advertisement will be stopped previous to the payment of all arrears unless at the option of the proprietor. When subscribers wish their papers discontinued, they will give notice to that effect at the time their subscription expires. Every subscriber will be held responsible for the payment of his paper so long as it is sent to his address at the Post Office, Tavern, or any other place, whosoever
he may have ordered it, until legally notified to the contrary.

Advertisements, correctly and conspicuously, inserted at the customary prices. The number of insertions required must be marked on the advertisement, otherwise they will be continued until ordered out and charged for accordingly.

The privilege of annual advertisers is limited to their own immediate business; and all advertisements for the benefit of other persons, as well as all legal advertisements, and advertisements of auction sales,
sent in by them, must be paid for at the usual rates.

Business letters and communications addressed to the Editor, postage paid, will receive early attention.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

For the Quincy Patriot.

FROM A CALIFORNIA EMIGRANT.

SAN FRANCISCO HARBOR, Sept 14th, 1849.

FRIEND GREEN—In my last, I promised a few items in relation to Rio Janeiro, and the succeeding incidents I should meet during the remainder of my voyage. Rio Janeiro the largest city in South America, was settled by the Portuguese, and is, at present, the seat of government of the Brazilian Empire. It contains 220,000 inhabitants, and many fine buildings; among which, the most prominent
are the Emperor's Palace, situated near the landing, and the Cathedral. The Custom House is made up of white and red; the frontiers exhibiting there being little semblance of their own importance. The slave Slaughter House is also worth seeing. The slaves who perform all the labor, present a picture of filth and misery, which, to be realized must be seen. The cattle were driven in by scores with long poles; a tall negro, encased in blood and filth gave one blow to each on the spine, behind the horns, which, if rightly placed, finishes them at once. Several saw in this way killed in a single minute when the blows are rightly placed; but when (as not infrequently happens) the strike is this side of his mark, a scene of mangling cruelty ensues. To this add some twenty negroes coming and going, carrying the lade, etc, on their heads, themselves nearly naked, plastered with blood and dirt, and you have a picture whose only relief is the dexterity shown by a few half-breeds in throwing the lade, in which they are as sure of their victims as our rifleman would be of a squirrel. In the rear of the landing is a scene, if possible, worse; where men and women are engaged in washing the tripe.
I noticed one woman naked below the hips, beside of a house, Colosseum fashion, washing away as if
for life, and several others could boast of no superabundance of clothing. The Emperor's Palace is built of marble, occupies a whole square, and is no doubt very costly. In beauty it would bear no comparison with our granite, and one of our workmen will do the labor of three engaged here. One thing which strikes the New Englander is the countless rounds of guards that meet him at every street.

In civility, however, they will compare favorably with our soldiers, and would make good examples for the imitation of some of our city police. Several California vessels were in the harbor when we arrived, and they are constantly coming and going.
Many of the Captains have had trouble with their passengers; the same complaint being made by all,
viz: they have been badly crowded and badly served.

One night I strayed into a church (Catholic of course) decorated with gold and silver, illuminated
by hundreds of wax candles, and received from one of the priests a picture of some saint; being given to understand it would prove a safe guard in the storm and tempest. Here again slavery was presented in a new form. The Portuguese beauty, with laughing men and flashing eyes, was there with her donation for the priest, and by her side the poor negress placed in solitary damp (a copper coin) in the silver of the church. Surely, could these poor people reason, they must consider the Almighty partial when comparing their lot with their masters.

Going off late one night, finding the slaves who pulled the boat did not do their duty, I promised them some dainties if they would pull better. They tried hard but were evidently exhausted. When aloudside they told me in their broken jargon, they had eaten nothing since day-light; it was then past 11 P. M. I procured a piece of raw pork and some ship's biscuit, and threw into the boat. After eating a few minutes in silence nature could do no more and they dropped asleep. With a curse on slavery in every form I retired to my hammock.
How long they remained I know not, but the next morning they came off soon after sunrise to pull passengers on shore. At Praia Grande, opposite the city, one day, I saw coming along the sand embanked shore, a company who from the regularity of their march at a distance, I supposed to be soldiers;
but as they approached the clanking of iron became audible, and I found they were chained together and employed in carrying water for the prison, about one mile distant. The mode of transportation is worthy of notice. Each convict is provided with a stout saken sack, holding several gallons.
This is poised on the head and carried with as much apparent ease as is a bundle by one of our ship boys; the clanking irons forming a dismal music while two armed guards bring up the rear. If one is disposed to witness human nature in its littleness
he should see an armed guard following a chain gang; for while the latter may inspire compassion,
the former can create no feeling but contempt.

Sunday, April 24. Entered an omnibus in Palace Square, in appearance ancient as Noah's ark, drawn by four jackasses, and was soon whirled away to the Amphitheatre, about one mile distant. In the centre is the arena, oval shaped, about five rods by six, surrounded by a high board fence, with seats rising tier above tier, surmounted with a row of boxes
on top. The gladiator enters at a gate at one side;
the bull being admitted at a similar opening opposite. At first a horseman rode in, dressed in a species of uniform surmounted by a cloak of black velvet reaching to his saddle. This appearance was loudly cheered by the audience of some two thousand persons. Another now entered dressed in a red uniform, more gaudy than beautiful, mounted on a fine Arabian charger, who makes the circuit of the enclosure, first in hand, bowing to the audience, and receiving their plaudits. After exhausting our patience with bows and grins, the opposite gate
was thrown open, and the bull, a lean lank animal,
rushed in, and made for the horseman, who avoided
him by a dexterous movement of his charger and with a backward thrust stuck a small spear in the animal's neck. This spear is about the size of a bucket wire, with a barb on one side, and is set in the end of a light wooden staff six feet long, gaily ornamented with tissue paper of various colors. I two feet from the barbed end the staff is sawn half off.
When a blow is given the staff breaks, leaving the spear end hanging to the animal's neck. When a successful thrust is made, the audience cheer loudly;
the horseman takes to flight rapidly coursing around the arena, and others on foot rush in to distract the attention of the animal. The sport is now fairly commenced. One displays a red flag and the bull rushes on him with redoubled fury, but is met with another spear similar to the first, the thrust of his horns being avoided by a nimble spring
aside, and other flags are shown to draw his notice.
Should the gladiator fall, he lies still face downward and the bull leaps over him without doing any injury, and the others are ready to engage him. At one time two men, both horse and rider and the bull
for a moment were master of the field, but several others came to the rescue, and obliged his majesty to turn at bay. In this way four bulls were exhausted, when the clamors of the audience called out from among the spectators a tall gentled looking man,
with dark complexion and flashing eyes, slightly but firmly built. He entered the arena and making a low bow, threw off his coat with the utmost sangroid, and with his weapons whatever ednly awaited the approach of the bull. Silence the most profound now prevailed; among the assembled thousands each one could almost hear the beating of his own heart so profound was the interest. The bull was then let in and made for the man who seized him by the horn and nose, and after wrestling with him a few minutes, leaped between his horns
and in this manner rode around the arena until the bull was fairly subdued, when he mounted on his back while the audience roared and the crowd was showered upon him on every side. This still closed the performance; and I went, with the same opinion of our Chaplain, who attended, that a bull-fight was more cruel in name than practice, and since the days of tilts and tournaments, is the most exciting of any amusement that can be witnessed by people of modern days.

Friday, May 4. At 10 A. M. weighed anchor, and had taken to Rio. [Pronounced by the natives, Reo].
The breeze was light till evening, when it set in from the southwest, rolling up an ugly sea, and putting us under double treble topsails.
May 10. Latitude 30° 29' north. At 4 P. M. the barometer fell and sudden clouds began heaving up to windward. At 6, sudden squalls
were taken in, main and fore sail furled, top-gallants clewed up and topsails doubled reefed. The lightning at times illuminated the whole horizon in a lurid blaze
of light, followed by pitchy blackness, while amid the surrounding gloom, two balls of fire played and flickered round the mast heads, seeming like ball-
fire scowling through the darkness, until one blinding flash followed by a crash louder than a hundred cannon sent them to oblivion. The rain now poured down in torrents; the wind, however, was light and towards morning sail was made till we were under royals and studdensails. Before the lightning began the air was so stilling that respiration seemed difficult; but after the thunder began
it grew purer until it became fresh and bracing.

May 12. This evening a specimen of quarter deck eloquence was displayed by Capt. W. between two decks. From the conversation it appeared that two of the passengers paid fifty dollars for a bare berth and Capt. W. being satisfied for room told one of the sewards to take possession of it. The holder objected; the mate was called, who, being unable to adjust the difficulty, sent for the captain. He was told that the occupant of the adjoining berth was sick, and Dr. Darling, the ship's surgeon, did not think it prudent to force another man into his berth.
Bursting with rage he vociferated, "I want here
one word of argument, not one word—to hell!" with Dr. Darling—who the bloody hell cares what he says, and if they have paid fifty dollars, with other phrases equally elastic and moral. Such is the man who presides over the comfort of nearly one hundred and fifty men on a 7, 10, seven month's voyage. He finally yielded the point and retired, with the contempt of all who witnessed the scene.

May 27. Latitude 52° 5' south, weather quite comfortable and smooth sea. Flocks of albatrosses around us and Cape pigeons in great numbers,
watching for the particles of food which from time to time are thrown from the vessel. The former is the largest of oceanic birds and when caught and hailed on board were ever ready to do battle, like
the eagle presenting a dauntless front and flashing
eye. The latter are the size of teal, with white beak and belly, black head, tips, tail and brilliant starry wings.

May 28. Towards night the mercury in the barometer fell down to 27 and soon after the wind began to blow. At 4 P. M. blew a heavy gale and kept on increasing; during the first part of the night it blew the hardest I have ever seen, and the cold was sharp and biting. My hammock danced and leaped about like a foot-ball; my head playing a tit-tat-to with the carlines. At 12 M. I went on deck. The hulk was lying to, her fore-top-mast stay-sail split like paper; the rigging coated with snow and ice,
laying in confused masses about the deck, the wind screamed and howled like a thousand devils, while the foam-capped waves glittering in the moonbeams
seemed moving hills of sparkling silver.

June 3th. At 3 A. M. the cry of "ice-berg" was called between decks. Springing from my hammock I went on deck. The night was clear and sterning cold. The ice-berg was about four miles
a headward supposed to be one hundred feet high. It appeared of a pale indigo color glistening in the moonlight; with occasional dark spots, probably the shadow of hollows, in its surface. In length it was variously estimated to be from one to four miles. Although it was a sublime sight I did not wish for a nearer acquaintance, and with cheerful hearts we kept on our course at the rate of nine knots.
But I must pass over many events for want of time, such as making land, on a dead lee shore, off Christmas Island—the ship being taken aback in the night, when some went on deck with and some without pistols, others cried out she is sinking, and one genius scolded a younger brother because he would not go on deck to see if she was going down. Did space permit, I would tell of a spall on the morning of June 25th, when I was awakened by an unusual noise, and going on deck found everything in confusion, the Captain's quarters, the seamen lying about like spirits (noisy ones)—the sails flapping and cracking—moaning of the timbers and snapping of the spars, all together forming a scene fearful but ludicrous. I must also pass over the washing in snow and ice—the intense cold, the various annoyances, some imaginary,
many real, incident to our passage round Cape Horn, and the good run north after doubling the Cape, until the morning of July 5th, when we made the island of Juan Fernandez, where we came to anchor the next evening, in fourteen fathoms water, within pistol shot of the shore.

This island, rendered memorable by the residence of Alexander Selkirk, a Scotch sailor; the circumstances of which, gave rise to the beautiful story of Robinson Crusoe and his man Friday, is of volcanic origin—lays in latitude 33° 30' south longitude 70° west, is about fifteen miles long, and raises in breadth from three to seven miles—is distant about three hundred miles from the main land, and some seventy from Massateno, lying between. It belongs to Chili, and was formerly used by that government as a place for the transportation of convicts. A Governor and soldiers were kept here by the Chilean government, until about twelve years since, when the convicts obtaining the mastery took the vessels which were laying in the harbor, and left the island. The ruins of a fort with several guns of large calibre remain, and cannon balls were lying about in various places. On one side of the ruins are caves, formerly used as prisons, where the convicts were confined at night, guarded by sentries. These caves are dug in the side of a hill, facing the sea—
are about twenty in number, some of them of large size. One of the largest we measured—its length was 70 feet, breadth 16 1-2, and from floor to ceiling 25 feet. The hill is formed of hard clay, easy to cut with a knife. The water is carried down to the shore in a small aqueduct, or rather spout,
built by the convicts, which still remains unimpaired.
The water is of the purest, and shore so bold that a vessel may lay close on and haul her casks off by a line reaching ashore. The bark Edward Fletcher, which came in while we were there, obtained
fresh water, while the natives, who are natives of various heights, with the richest valleys in the world, and slopes between. Wherever the soil is broken in, radishes, turnips, ground apples, strawberries &c., spring up in abundance. Early on the morning of July 7th, I landed, and felt my pulses thrill with a strange feeling, as my feet first pressed the soil of this land of glory.

The settlement consists at present of four mud huts, with thatched roofs, and without floor or windows. The population is comprised in fifteen souls all told, ten males and five females; two of the latter small children, and one a miss of fifteen.
I visited one of the huts occupied by one woman,
two men, and three children.

The men appeared lazy, the children dirty, the smallest being nearly naked. The dress of the men was a loincloth, half loincloth, and they appeared anything but interesting. The woman was dressed in a chemise and petticoat, and a headband, and reaching from the waist downwards; that with a kerchief around the neck completed her costume;
the loincloth and feet being left bare. A looking smile that played around her mouth, and the flashing of her dark eyes, gave to her countenance an appearance of wild interest. With the children I was soon on good terms, and had one of them hanging round my neck, greatly to the delight of its mother, and amazement of my companions. After remaining here a few minutes, we started with two others for a ramble among the mountains. We climbed some five miles a portion of the way on our hands and knees, holding to the roots and shrubs of the plants and bushes. After gaining an elevation so high that the ship looked like a miniature vessel in a fish pond we left our rifles leaning against a tree, and taking a short rest, and frugal luncheon, toiled on. The labor now commenced in earnest. The way was so steep, at times we were obliged to reach up standing on tiptoe, and after grasping some root or shrub, pull our bodies to the same elevation. One time we were on the top of a narrow ridge, varying in width from three to ten feet; the sides like a wall; from whence we could look down into the tops of trees hundreds of feet below, apparently growing beneath our feet.

After attaining the highest elevation possible, we kindled a fire, hoisted a flag, discharged our pistols, and gave three cheers for the Emperor Edward Fletcher standing up to the harkens where she came to anchor alongside of our vessel. The report of our pistols sounded like cannon; while the echo of our voices was caught up by the crags and cliffs,
until the whole mountain seemed to bellow back the sound. The descent was much easier, and towards night we arrived at the base, greatly fatigued, with powerful appetites, and found a supper of fresh fish prepared by some of the company on shore. During our rambles we found large quantities of berries resembling chercherberries in appearance and color, full of small seeds and very juicy. These are used by the inhabitants, both as food and drink during their hunts among the mountains. Although it was the winter season, roses were abundant; some blossoms on the peach trees, while the wild flowers, mints, and other aramatic herbs, in places, created a beautiful fragrance,
very agreeable after the snowy breezes of Cape Horn. The higher slopes, and some of the valleys are covered with trees of various kinds, some of great size, and any degree of hardness. A species of wild Rhamnus grows here of enormous size;
some of the leaves being nearly four feet across,
with roots and stalks in proportion. A quantity was carried on board, and for several days formed a luxury in the way of vegetables; the stalks being peeled and eaten raw. Peaches in any quantity in the season; strawberries of gigantic size, with melons, cherries, grapes, figs, quinces and ground
apples are abundant, and produced spontaneously.
Wild dogs, horses, mules, jackasses, goats and pigeons are numerous in some parts of the island.
The waters teem with fish of various kinds; among them cod, bream, silver-fish, tautog, and a species

so closely resembling the bass, I am inclined to think it one of that family; these with many others
I am unable to name, were caught within a short distance of the shore with little effort. Numbers of craw fish, resembling the lobster in appearance and taste, with the exception of the claws which are smaller, were caught from the deck with lines;
while the rocks and stones among the breakers, litterally swarmed with crabs and shell fish. The presence and energies of a few money loving yankees only is wanted to make this the greatest place
in the south Pacific for refitting vessels, and supplying them with wood, water, and fresh provisions
for, or after a voyage round Cape Horn.

From Juan Fernandez, we sailed on the evening of July 8th, and after a pleasant run of 96 days, arrived at San Francisco, Sept. 12th, where we came to anchor after a passage of two hundred fourteen days from Boston; all in good health and spirits. When we came in, many vessels, some of them the finest in the world, were in the harbor, and new arrivals add to the list daily. The city, so called, consists at present of some three hundred buildings, built mostly of mud brick, baked in the sun, and boards lapped
together, while tents by the thousands, of all kinds and sizes, glitter along the shore and hills around.
Clothing, spirits, and tobacco are cheap; gold plenty, and rents, wages, board, &c., high. A small room in a building no better than a shanty, lets
for from two to eight hundred dollars per month;
carpenters get from ten to sixteen dollars per day;
blacksmiths more, and common laborers from five to eight dollars. Board can be obtained from twelve to one hundred dollars per week, at the hotels, and find your own blankets, but many board themselves, living in little tents at a cost of some three or four dollars per week. I met the city attorney, P. W. Field, formerly of Quincy; he lives in this way, had been here seven and one half weeks, and laid by four hundred dollars. Gambling is in a flourishing condition, and dozens of change hands daily, in the numerous tells located here. The highest stake I have seen down on a single game was six thousand dollars, the players exhibiting less apparent interest than a yankee pedlar would trading for whistles.

Property of all kinds is safe without lock or keeper. Revolvers are at a discount and rifle barrels are either turned into crow bars, or laid away to be used when the owners return to that land, where the good people mourn over the state of society in California. I have seen trunks containing clothing, tools and money, lying outside a tent, the owners thirty miles off, and the property was safe as church-plate in New England.
The reason is obvious—gold is plenty, dollars
holding the places of cents with us, and a person caught stealing would dance on air without paying the thief.

I have seen and conversed with many who have returned from the mines. They agree in one particular, and one only, that is, gold is plenty, sickness
more so, and the labor the hardest imaginable.
Those who come down sick resemble walking skeletons; vessels may be seen in the river daily, with the flag signal flying. The weather is growing better daily, and the sickness decreasing; yet many a poor fellow is at home with high notions and brilliant prospects, will sleep among the hills of California
with no head mark but the tears of his companions perhaps themselves soon to follow. Most of the companies who come out here split up on arrival or soon after and I would advise those who fit men out for the mines, to do it as individuals and not as members of a company, and that too without being lured by the promises of any kind; for no one can rely on his fellow man until after he arrives; so no man whose honesty requires a keeper, is fit to disturb; and the excitement obligators would be forfeited without hesitation, which the man whose integrity is dearer to him than gold is perhaps trained in his movements for his own good and that of his employer. This is the latter only that obligations are binding and the honest man needs
none but his own conscience. A passage out here, two good suits of wolen clothes and one hundred dollars, or more in cash is the best outfit. The health of our company is good generally, my own remarkably so, and while other companies are bursting around us, ours shows at present no signs of dissolution. I am at present on board the bark, 45 miles above San Francisco, at a place called New York. The settlement consists of a hotel of three rooms built of rough hewn, one store 15 by 18 feet,
two ten feet houses and several tents with men by the million. A portion of the company have gone up the Sacramento, the remainder will follow soon
as conveyance can be provided.

Yours truly,
J. C. EDWARDS.

OREGON. This is the greatest lumber country in the world. Around one mile, within a circle of three miles, stands timber enough to last a hundred years. The mill all the time cutting six thousand feet
a day. The trees are from six to ten feet in diameter, and some of them three hundred feet high.
They are felled into a lake, floated to the mill three miles, saved by water power, and turned out at the side of the mill, whence a vessel takes them to California. Wheat in Oregon averages sixty-five pounds, a bushel, and Oregon flour brings six dollars more a barrel at the gold mines than any other.
The number of votes cast in Oregon, in June was 943.

SENTENCES. In this world real evils are frequent, imaginary ones are perpetual—"I have been happy," some may say—"I shall be happy,"
most say—"I am happy," none say.
The habitual drunkard is a Felo de se—Is it less criminal to kill by slow poison than with a dagger?
If you have a family, it is as unjust to squander
away your substance, as for a steward to embezzle
the estate of his Lord which he has to manage.
The idle man is more perplexed in doing nothing
than the industrious in doing what he ought.
Provoking our foes, has not ruined half so many
as confiding in professed friends.
Virtue itself does not consist in never erring
—that is impossible—but endeavoring immediately to recover from the error.
Condescension adds a degree of elevation to the highest ranks of life—Dancers always sink below
their leap.
To take pleasure in viewing the prosperity of others, is a much surer mark of benevolence, than pitying them in calamity.

A PROCLAMATION

For a Day of Public Thanksgiving and Praise.

The Holy Scriptures declare, that if men will "acknowledge God in all their ways, He will direct their paths." A greater benefit cannot be conceived than for an erring mortal to have his steps directed by infinite wisdom.

To enable an individual to this estimable blessing,
he must lead a life of honesty, purity, and benevolence, towards his fellow men, and of sincere piety towards his Maker. He must be upright and just in all his doings, fearing God.

States are but aggregates of Individuals; and like individuals they may acknowledge God in all their ways, by establishing wise and beneficent institutions, by enacting equal and good laws, by providing for all their children the means of education and knowledge, by suppressing vice and encouraging virtue; by respecting the institution of religion,
and leaving to every citizen the liberty of worshiping God according to the dictates of his own conscience, and by such public religious acts and observances as are proper for communities, and thus have their paths to prosperity, peace and true glory,
directed by Him; or by pursuing an opposite course, incur His displeasure, and bring upon themselves his judgments.

From the earliest infancy of Massachusetts, it has been the annual custom of our fathers, when the harvest was gathered home, and the mercies of God had crowned the departed year, to acknowledge Him in the religious observance of days set apart for Public Thanksgiving and Praise.

Following their good example, I do, therefore,
by and with the advice and consent of the Council,
appoint THURSDAY, the twenty ninth day of November next, to be observed by the people of this Commonwealth, as a day of Public Thanksgiving, Prayer and Praise.

Let it be observed in a manner becoming an enlightened and moral people, highly favored of Heaven.

The past has been to us a year of general health, prosperity, and abundance. The angel of death,
in his second career of destruction round the globe,
passed lightly over our beloved Commonwealth, and has ceased his ravages in all parts of our country.

Labor has earned and eat its bread in peace,
and the enterprise of our citizens, in the various pursuits of business upon the land and upon the sea, has been well rewarded. A kind and fraternal feeling has been manifested through all classes of the community, and a spirit of love and charity has more and more exhibited itself amongst those who,
under different names and in different forms, profess to be the followers and disciples of the Son of God.

Our common schools and other seminaries of learning, and those public and charitable institutions, founded by our ancestors, and strengthened and increased by the present generation, designed to anchorate and improve the intellectual and moral condition of men here, and to discipline, and by the blessing of heaven, fit them for happiness
hereafter, are beautifully fulfilling the purposes of their creation.

Civil and religious liberty are enjoyed without restraint or molestation, and the Bible, containing God's revealed will to man, and unfolding the glories of the gospel of peace, "which brings life and immortality to light," is in the possession of, or is accessible to, every human being within the limits of the State.

In the full enjoyment of all these mercies vocationed to us by the Benefactor of mankind, let us
on that day go up to His temples, and "worship Him in spirit and in truth."

And whilst with the voice of thanksgiving we through His courts, and adore and praise Him for "His goodness to the children of men," as unworthy sinners we should humble ourselves in His presence, and by unfeigned repentance and faith in Christ our Saviour, comply with the terms upon which He pardons His erring creatures, and confers upon them the gift of eternal life.

Grateful for His past bounties, and for the blessings which we now possess, let us entreat Him, to continue those blessings to us, and teach us how to improve them to His glory, for the advancement of our own happiness, and the benefit of the race.

That He will impress upon the hearts of those,
to whom He in His providence has opened the store house of plenty, with the truth, that the benevolent Saviour in the declaration, "the poor ye have always with you," intended to remind us of our abiding obligation to imitate Him, in His acts of kindness to the destitute and suffering, and cause us all to remember, that one of the highest evidences of "pure religion, is to visit the widow and the fatherless in their affliction."

That He will inspire the citizens of this great republic with an honest and noble patriotism, with a respect and attachment to the constitution and laws of the Union, and of the States, and lead them to maintain with integrity and manly vigor the principles of republican liberty upon which they are founded.

That He will hasten the time when, without discord or violence, slavery shall cease to exist in these United States, and when disenthralled and regenerated Africa, with all her wronged and ill-treated children, shall stretch out their unmanacled hands to God.

That He will give union and discretion to the struggling friends of liberty in the countries of the earth, and endow them with wisdom and arm them with power, without the effusion of blood, to regain their long lost rights.

WASHINGTON'S CODE OF MANNERS.

Every action ought to be with some sign of respect to those present.

Be no flatterer, neither play with any one who delights not to be played with.

Read no papers or books in company. Come not near the papers or books of another when he is writing.

Let your countenance be cheerful, but in serious matters be grave.

Show not yourself glad at another's misfortunes.

Let your discourse with others on matters of business be short.

It is good manners to let others speak first.

When a man does all the can, do not blame him though he succeeds not well.

Take admissions thankfully.

Be not too hasty to believe flying reports to the injury of another.

Let your dress be modest, and consult your condition. Play not the peacock by looking vainly at yourself.

It is better to be alone than in bad company.

Let your conversation be without notice of envy.

Urgo not your friend to discover a secret.

Break not a just where none take pleasure in mirth.

Speak not injurious words either in jest or in earnest.

Goze not on the blemishes of others.

When another speaks, be attentive.

Be not apt to relate news.

Be not curious to know the affairs of others.

THE DISADVANTAGE OF BEING TALL. Yet one thing must not omit—women those seeming angels, from whom I thought we received the better portion of our nature—to whom I conceived man to be indebted for half his divinity; the women—whose eyes are suns—whose words are music—whose looks are love—treated me as unceremoniously, and as coldly, and unfeeling, as those of my own sex. I was never plighted enough to contemplate beauty without a feeling of admiration—more occasionally, without love. I followed my hand at various periods of my life to at least a dozen. Chrissie excused herself by saying that she was very chilly during the winter, and therefore particularly partial to a small and low room, which would shelter her from the cold of her husband's society till spring. Rosa affirmed she was remarkably fond of walking, and as she should not be able to reach my arm, begged to decline "my polite offer." Jane said that looking up to me hurt her neck; and what was worse than all, a servant girl, by whose beauty I was flattered enough to be entranced, made me a low curtsy, and with a malicious affectation of humility, declared she was but a mean body—a poor servant, and could not think of looking so high!

BAKERS. This term was originally applied to those whose business it was to break packages and sell by the piece or less quantity; it afterwards came to designate an agent employed by both buyer and seller, and is thus defined by the learned Froilope: "he is one who stoppeth in between two men making a bargain, and plundereth both.—Lift for the Lady."

LITTLE KINDNESS.—Small acts of kindness! how pleasant and desirable do they make life! Every dark object is made light by them, and every tear of sorrow is brushed away. When the heart is sad and despondency sits at the entrance of the soul, a trifling kindness drives despair away, and makes the path cheerful and pleasant.

COURTESY.—A lover should be treated with the same gentleness as a new glove. The young lady should pull him on with the utmost tenderness at first, only making the smallest advance at a time, till she gradually gains upon him, and twists him ultimately round her little finger; whereas the young lady who is hasty and, in too great a hurry, will never get her lover to take her hand, but he left with her wits at her fingers' end.

HUMAN NATURE.—Bad as may be the nature of man, still the honor for noble deeds, the respect for virtue, the abhorrence for that which is ignoble or base, will ever influence bodies of men when acting on first impulses. When the traitor has performed his part—when the end is gained for which he has been employed; the crowd whom he has most benefited, will cast him from them, and the very men who had lured him to the deed, will spurn him as if his touch were contagious; for as if his very presence breathed infamy.

WALNUTS.—It has been ascertained that the shag bark walnut may be successfully engrained, and that the engrained trees are much the surest bearers. It is probable that the hickory, or shag bark, would do well engrained on the pig-nut. If it should, the quality raised might be greatly increased and the quality much improved. The Madras nut, which is usually sold at the shops under the name of the English walnut, at twelve and a half to sixteen cents per pound, may be cultivated here without difficulty, and is very productive. In the vicinity of New York there is a tree which has produced in a single year as many as sold in the market for $200.

The passions, like heavy bodies down steep hills, once in motion, move themselves and know no ground but the bottom.

Why is the printing-press like the forbidden tree in Paradise? Because from it springs the knowledge both of good and evil.

John Abernethy, the eminent surgeon, used to tell his scholars, that all human maladies arose from two causes—stuffing and fretting.

Wit is the lightning of mind, reason the sunshine, and the reflection the moonlight; for as the bright orb of the night owes its lustre to the sun, so does reflection owe its existence to reason.

An ounce of quicksilver, beat up with the white of two eggs, and put on with a feather, is the cleanest and surest bed-bug poison.

Every man has, in his own life, follies enough; in his own mind troubles enough; in the performance of his duties deficiencies enough; in his own fortunes evils enough—without being curious about the affairs of others.

He who sedulously listens, pointedly asks, calmly speaks, coolly answers, and ceases when he has no more to say to the point, is the fittest for business, and is sure to succeed.

Money is the fool's wisdom, the knave's reputation, the wise man's jewel, the rich man's trouble, the poor man's desire, the covetous man's ambition, and the idol of all.

We can't help it but we do feel like one of our contemporaries whenever we see a neat pretty girl, with tempting lips and roguish eyes, and a well-turned ankle—we always wish that she was near a mud puddle, and that we had to life her over. It's a weakness, probably, but we cannot help it.

As we are always wishing instead of working for fortune, we are disappointed, and call Dame Fortune "blind," but it is the very best evidence that the old lady has most capital, eye sight, and is no "granny" with spectacles.

Someday thinks that if nature had designed a man to be a drunkard she would have constructed him like a churn, so that the more he drank the firmer he would stand.

"I come to steal," as the rat observed to the trap. "And I spring to embrace you," as the steel trap replied to the rat.

If you don't want to fall in love with a girl, don't commence flirting with her. This courting for fun is like boxing for fun. You put on the gloves in perfect good humor—with the most friendly intentions of exchanging a few amicable blows; you find yourself insensibly warm with the enthusiasm of the conflict, until some unlucky punch in the "vested" decides the matter, and the whole affair ends in a downright fight. Don't you see the similarity?

The Yankee Blade says, "nearly all the suicides in this country are by foreigners. Yankees rarely make way with themselves—for nearly every one thinks he has a chance of becoming President, and and, at any rate, his curiosity prompts him to live on, just to see what it will come to."

Go to strangers for charity, to acquaintances for advice, and to relatives for nothing—and you will always have a supply.

Be not too hasty to believe flying reports to the injury of another.

There are some blackguards too contemptible even to be kicked by a gentleman. To attack them is to descend to their own level.

It is stated that of the five hundred and forty young ladies who failed last year, more than one half fell into the arms of gentlemen! Only one had the misfortune to fall on the floor.

"Women go much further in love than men."—Yes, they do; and in this they fulfil the old proverb—"they go further, and here worse!"

About 180 tons of ivory are used in Sheffield annually. It is supposed that 18,000 elephants are killed yearly to make up the supply.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, NOV. 17, 1849.

HON CHARLES F ADAMS'S LECTURE.

"Thoughts in reference to the American Revolution."

formed the subject of this gentleman's remarks before the Lyceum. It was a theme peculiarly suited to please any audience in this community, and a theme, also, with which the successors of this distinguished gentleman have ever been identified. In our opinion a subject could not have easily been selected more becoming the speaker or the place.

It is unnecessary to say that these "thoughts" were well conceived and happily presented. Commencing with a glance at the earliest records of Grecian and Roman history, the lecturer proceeded to trace the principles of "right" and "wrong"—the spirit of human freedom from that early day down through the "ages," till its introduction into the new world of Columbus. More than two centuries ago this spirit of Freedom, wafted by the breeze of Heaven and directed by the hand of Providence, reached the western wilds of America. Then and there were planted those great principles of civil and religious freedom, which have made the wilderness "bud and blossom like the rose." The golden harvest of civil and religious Freedom which was then sowed by our Puritan forefathers are now being reaped in peace and plenty by their happy descendants.

Thoughts of the character were ably presented by the lecturer and the address was delivered with just criticism on the character of many who stood conspicuous in the great struggle for human Freedom. Rich in anecdote, sound in doctrine, and pungent in criticism, the lecture was a "Feast of reason and flow of soul."

The allusion to Joseph Hawley of North Hampton, was extremely felicitous and the introduction of an important letter written by the gentleman in relation to the period that "tried men's souls," was approp to the period.

In the course of the lecture it was hinted by the speaker that the subject might be continued by him in a subsequent lecture. We shall be happy for one to listen to a continuation of so excellent a subject by so able a person as Mr Adams.

REV J T BURRILL'S LECTURE.

The theme of this gentleman's remarks before the Lyceum on Thursday evening of last week, was "California." Public expectation ran high in regard to this exciting subject, and we trust it was amply satisfied. It was an able, impartial and impressive address. The subject was explored with freedom, and presented with candor. Glancing with a rapid but cautious eye, at the causes of the "Mexican war" and the consequent "annexation of California" to our Republic, the lecturer proceeded to develop the importance, and natural resources of the modern "El Dorado," its exploration by Col Fremont, Capt Sutter and others, and also the elements of character which are requisite for those adventurous spirits, who are emigrating to that distant region. The lecture displayed profound research into the historical records of the country, together with a vast amount of statistical information relative to California. Free from vague and fanciful speculations, unbiased by prejudice and exaggeration, this lecture did not fail to enlighten as well as edify, the immense audience which had assembled to listen to it. The lecture was substantial in matter, simple in style, and impressive in utterance. No lofty flights of Eloquence, here the attention of the audience above the subject, and no gaudy flowers of Rhetoric or Posey beguiled them to linger among the beautiful creations of Fancy, but all was practical and plain, all seemed truthful and sincere. Few men in our opinion, could have presented this important and exciting subject with the interest, ability and impartiality of Mr Burrill. We shall be exceedingly anxious to have another opportunity of listening to a lecture upon any subject by this gentleman, confident that the mental mine which could yield so rich a treasure, must have within its brilliant store house, other gems of equal if not of superior value.

THE ELECTION.

The returns of the election in this State, last Monday, indicate that Gov. Briggs wants over a thousand votes of an election by the people. The following is the result of the balloting in this town:—

For Governor.

Whole number of ballots, 563
George N. Briggs, 272
George S. Boutwell, 161
Stephen C. Phillips, 130

For Lieutenant Governor.

Whole number of ballots, 563
John Reed, 273
Henry W. Cushman, 160
John Mills, 130

For Senators.

Whole number of ballots, 564
Lewis Hardin, 269
Marshall P. Wilder, 271
Lyndall Richards, 275
Ezra Wilkinson, 288
Charles F. Adams, 269
Malcolm Fisher, 259
Israel W. Munroe, 1

For Representatives.

Whole number of ballots, 558
Necessary to a choice, 280
George Marsh, 273
John T. Burrill, 261
Harsham Bartlett, 15
William B. Dugan, Joseph Field, H. Wood, and William S. Morton had one vote each.

No Representative having been elected, it was voted to reconsider the vote to send one and the meeting was dissolved.

SENATORS.

Middlesex, Worcester and Plymouth Counties have elected 'Cushman' Senators, and twenty one whigs are chosen from the other Counties. Norfolk has elected three whigs. The vacancies will doubtless be filled with whigs, so the Senate will stand—21 whigs to 12 coalition.

REPRESENTATIVES.

There are 160 whigs and 98 coalition men elected to the House, as far as heard from. The following is the result in this County:—

Bellingham—Rilla Scott, coalition.
Bridgewater—Caleb Stearns, coalition.
Brookline—Marshall Stearns, whig.
Cohasset—George Beale, whig.
Dorchester—N. F. Safford, Edwin Sharp, whigs.
Foxboro—Alfred Hodges, whig.
Milton—Jason Reed, whig.
Needham—H. Robinson, coalition.
Randolph—Jonathan Wales, whig.
Roxbury—J. N. Brewer, J. H. Billings, Daniel Jackson, whigs.
Stoughton—Rev Isaac Smith, whig.
Weymouth—Ashael Bigelow, whig.
Weymouth—J. C. Rhine, Noah Vining, coalition.
In nine towns there was no choice.
Hon Samuel Hoar is elected representative from Concord by one majority, having been supported by whigs and free soilers.

TOWN MEETING. At a meeting of the Town held on Monday at nine o'clock, William S. Morton, Esq. Moderator, it was voted to indefinitely postpone the subject of opening, warming and lighting the rooms in the Town House, free of expense, for the Lyceum.

NORFOLK COUNTY COURT OF COMMON PLEAS. At the adjournment of the September term, commenced on the 6th inst., present Hon. E. Rockwood Hoar, the following cases were disposed of:—

No. 39—John H. Collins vs Heights of Dorchester, verdict for defendants. F. Hilliard for plff, J. J. Clark and N. F. Safford for dft.

No. 40—John Murphy vs Moses Guild, verdict for dft. A. L. Cushing for plff, S. B. Boyce for dft.

No. 41—Ozias Field et al vs Hiram Field, verdict for dft. D. A. Simmons for plff, F. Hilliard for dft.

No. 45—William T. Austin vs Jefferson Jones, verdict for plff. A. L. Cushing for plff, Ellis Ames for dft.

FREEMAN HUNT. Well, the Election is over; and though our friend Freeman Hunt is not elected, yet he received a vote the most complimentary given to any other candidate, we venture to say in the State. He ran on the Democratic ticket where the Whigs boast 1,200 majority, and where Mr Fiske was elected last year by a plurality of 1,700 votes, and yet is defeated by less than 180 votes.

We call this a triumph, indeed; and think Mr Hunt may well feel proud of the appreciation in which he is held by his fellow citizens. It would have been better for them if they had laid aside mere party considerations, and elected Freeman Hunt to the Assembly.—New York Pathfinder.

NEW YORK ELECTION. The whig majority in the State is about 1700. In the Senate the whigs have a majority of two. The Assembly is probably tied.

FUNERAL CEREMONIES. Funeral solemnities in honor of General Worth, Col Duncan and Maj Gates, were attended in New York last Thursday. The funeral oration was delivered by John Van Buren.

ANOTHER DELEGATION FROM QUINCY. The schooner Lamartine sailed from Boston recently, for San Francisco, having on board Charles N. Brown, master, Ebenezer Underwood Jr, sailing master, and Thomas Connor, seaman, of this town, together with the following named passengers, who are also of this place:—Seth C. Bailey, Peter Clapp, Joseph T. French, William Cary, Monroe Perkins, George W. Cizzen, George Penman, James C. Goodhue, Samuel Goodhue, Henry Perkins, Edmund Hobbs, Charles Creswell, Joseph Colless, Samuel P. Wheeler, Parker Foron Granville A. Spear, John A. Post.

The ship Orion, which sailed from Boston for San Francisco the past week, had the following passengers from Quincy:—E. B. Hardwick, William L. Brackett, Chas. H. Packard, G. Cleaveland, and George W. Hersey.

TRANSFERRING. Editor Governor Anthony, of Rhode Island, has appointed the 29th inst. for Thanksgiving in that State—the day to be observed in all the New England States except New Hampshire, which is on the 15th.

FROM CALIFORNIA.

The Empire City arrived at New York last Sunday. The advices from San Francisco come down to Oct. 1st. The California convention for forming a State Constitution had been in session three weeks. A bill of Rights, of twenty three sections, had been adopted. The clause prohibiting slavery was unanimously adopted. All persons six months in the territory, and descendants of Africans, were to be entitled to vote. Banking corporations and lotteries are prohibited. Other provisions of the constitution, are similar to the older State constitutions. News at San Francisco from the gold diggings was somewhat contradictory. The Feather river deposits were being exhausted, while new discoveries were announced. Diggers are getting about as usual a day, and the place is healthy.

ACCIDENT FROM PATENT OIL.

Three of the students of Brown University have been recently severely injured by the explosion of a can of Marsh's Patent Oil. One of them was filling a lamp while it was lighted, when the fluid caught fire, causing an explosion, which burned his hands and arms very badly, and injured still more severely two young men who sat by the table. Had it not been for the prompt assistance of a gentleman who burst into the room on hearing the alarm, the accident might have entailed very serious consequences. Since this mishap the president has prohibited the use of any kind of patent fluid, as a safeguard against further accidents.—Prot. Transcript.

V B PALMER'S BUSINESS ALMANAC FOR 1850.

This work, besides the usual calendar, is very convenient to refer for statistics of agriculture, manufactures and commerce, postage tables, &c. It contains a great amount of matter in a small space, and is sold for 12 1/2 cents.

FIRE IN DEDHAM.

The barn of Col. Luther Eaton, together with 60 tons of hay, and all the stock, 15 to 18 cows and oxen 2 horses and several swine, were all consumed on the 9th inst.—presumed to be the work of an incendiary.

Gen Thomas Bates, the well known proprietor of the "Shades" in Boston, died on the 13th inst., aged forty seven years.

The Daily Republican, Boston, the organ of the free soil party, has been discontinued.

On and after the 15th of January next, a light will be exhibited from the New Light House on Minor's Rock, near Cohasset.

Nothing like success in this world—what dirty bread it will butter! Nothing so miserable as failure—what heroism it will blacken!

The Rhode Island Legislature despatches its business promptly. It adjourned after a four day's session, in which four acts and sundry resolutions were passed. A great amount of private business was transacted—and all in four days.

Gen Shields has been elected Senator to Congress by the Legislature of Illinois.

A self constituted physician in petticoat recently recommended "a dose of castor oil," as it would "grease the nerves."

Never interfere in other people's affairs until you have first learned to take care of your own.

A cocoa nut tree has been lately drifted ashore on the island of Valletta, near Kerry; another proof that the Gulf stream after running along the American coast, sets across the Atlantic.

The fashion has been introduced in New York of ladies wearing gentlemen's short bosoms of fine linen cambric, laid in broad plaits, and ornamented with three rows of rich French embroidery. It is somewhat expensive each bosom costing from ten to twelve dollars.

NOTICES.

A meeting of the "Union Bored" will be held in the house of Mr. Ebenezer N. Field, next MONDAY EVENING, at half past six o'clock precisely. A full and prompt attendance is important. JAMES M. WADE, Sec of the Board.

The next lecture before the Quincy Lyceum will be by Rev. Mr. Roiden, in the Town Hall, next THURSDAY EVENING, at 7 o'clock. Subject—The future school of American Philosophy. WILLIAM B. HUGBEE, Sec.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Charitable Society, (adjourned from the 5th inst. in consequence of foul weather), will be held on MONDAY EVENING next, at 7 o'clock, at the house of Alexander Richards, Esq. S. A. BENT, Sec.

CONSUMPTION.

This terrible disease is commonly attributed to our climate. But if the climate were to blame, the disease would have been inflicted on that, and not upon the people. We think the fault is in the people, and that if the people would keep the skins of themselves and their children properly washed, and abstain from glutinous, greasy, and illnesses for a generation or two, Consumption would be no more known.

How, ver, consumption prevails as matters are, and picks off the best and predest of us, in our prime. In this state of things we must do the best we can, piece and patch out the web of life, with journeys, voyages and medicines. Of all the medicines we know of, Dr. Wistar's BALM OF WILD CHERRY is what we first recommend. We have in our office a living proof of its efficacy, who, but for it, would have been beneath the sod long ago. The mystery of its remedy, Dr. Wistar, was a man of science, of humanity, and undoubtedly prepared the remedy in its best form and the public may rely upon Mr. Fowler for the genuine article.—Boston Chronotype, Jan. 18, 1847.

Be sure the article you buy is signed I. BUTTS, on the wrapper.

FURTHER EVIDENCE.

As to the great efficacy of Dr. Corbett's Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla.

Meers E. Brinley & Co.—

Gentlemen—I was brought, quite low in the summer of 1847, with the Dysentery. I sought a Physician several times and was dangerously sick, so much so as to believe I must die. I grew worse daily, and was so reduced and weak that I frequently fainted away. For many days I complied with the directions of my physicians. But obtaining no relief and hearing of "Corbett's Shaker Syrup of Sarsaparilla," I was induced to make trial of it.

My little boy about five years of age was also very sick of the same disease at the same time.

The first few doses I took revived me speedily. The pains were speedily allayed and the disease was so far checked that I was enabled to attend work in the course of a week. My little boy was also soon cured, and only part of a bottle was taken by both of us. Absent from home some time after, I returned from Montreal in 1848, with the same disease, which had been increasing on me many days. I resorted again to the "Shaker Syrup of Sarsaparilla," and took only a few doses, when again I was early and fully restored to health. I know this Syrup cured me, and I recommend it to all who may suffer as I have.

OBITUARY.

"We bloom to day to morrow die."

We were forcibly reminded of this truth last Sabbath, as we followed to the grave one who but a short time since, mingled with us in the active scenes of life. I refer to Emily H., daughter of Mr. Edward H. Page of this town, who died on the 10th inst., after a short illness of three weeks. Her disposition naturally was very amiable and affectionate. She exhibited many lovely traits of character, which will long live in the hearts of those who knew her best. Being very modest, and retiring, almost to a fault, she was somewhat reserved in her conversation, but by occasional remarks, made by her during her sickness, and previous to that time, we have reason to believe she was a subject of the grace of God, and that her exchange from this to another world, has been a happy one. She was constant in her attendance at church, and the Sabbath School, when circumstances would permit of her being there. Although she had been absent a few months from the school, she did not lose her interest, and expressed a desire to meet again in the class. Long shall we remember the sweet smile with which she always greeted us, as we met her in her place—but she has passed away, and the design of God in this dispensation is at present hidden from our view. Had we who suffer not a sparrow to fall to the ground without his notice, overrule the event to the good of all. And may we who remain, journey along the shining way, illumined by so many bright examples, until we meet with those "who slumber forever near their risen Lord."

"Why should we weep when friends depart, If they have found a brighter sphere? Dear as they were to each warm heart, Our wish should not detain them here."

What though our bosoms loved them well, And dreamed their life our brightest bliss? They find joy no words can tell. A joy full well exchanged for this.

Let sad tears cease to fall, Let the hope that faith alone can know; And God that treasure shall reveal, When time shall cease with us below.

Let those alone who never felt Devotion's glowing spirit, weep; But they who at Heaven's shrine have knelt, Their hearts from all deep woe would keep."

Quincy Hall Clothing Depot,

ON THE BRAINTREE AND WEYMOUTH TURNPIKE, IN QUINCY.

JOHN DINEGAN
 WOULD respectfully announce to the inhabitants of Quincy and adjacent villages, that he has just received a FULL ASSORTMENT of everything that is necessary for the FALL AND WINTER TRADE.

Gentlemen wishing to furnish themselves with a Fashionable and well got up GARMENT would find it to their advantage to call and examine his Unusually Large and Carefully Selected Stock of Goods.
 J. D. has just opened several CASES of

BROADCLOTHS,
 of English, French and German manufacture, embracing all the FANCY AND FAVORITE COLORS worn for Sack Coats, Dress, Frock or Over Coats, or any other kind of a Garment worn.

BOYS' CLOTHING.
 Special attention will be given to this branch of our business. Children of three years and upwards can have their Garments made to order, and at a SUPERIOR STYLE, and as cheap as in any Store that can be named.

OUR FURNISHING DEPARTMENT.
 Linen, Kid and Fancy GLOVES; Linen SHIRTS, BOSOMS and COLLARS; Flannel SHIRTS and DRAWERS, of every color worn, and at unusually moderate prices; new styles of FANCY CRAVATS, and

READY MADE CLOTHING.
 Those in want of any kind of a Ready Made Garment are invited to call, as they can be suited at any price. Parents wishing to purchase for themselves or children would do well to call and examine his extensive assortment of well made and trimmed Garments, suitable for all classes of society, from the mechanic to the independent gentleman.
 Every article is got up under his own superintendence, made by SUPERIOR WORKMEN, and WAR-RANTED to be as good as can be got at any other Store in the United States.

Take Notice.
 Every article is marked in plain figures, from which no statement can be made, and sold for CASH only;
 the purchase money refunded if every article does not PROVE to be such as they are represented to be.
JOHN DINEGAN.
 Proprietor of the Quincy Hall Clothing Depot, on the Braintree and Weymouth Turnpike.
 Quincy, Oct. 6

J. A. Holden, School St., Quincy,
 WOULD inform the inhabitants of Quincy and Braintree, that he has just received, and will be constantly receiving,

New and Suitable Goods for the Coming Season, his intention being to have always on hand a VARIETY OF FASHIONABLE GOODS, among which are to be found, a good assortment of German, French, English and American

BROADCLOTHS,
 of various Shades and Patterns, suitable for DRESS FROCK AND OVER COATS.
 FOR SACKS AND OVRECOATS,
 Pilot, Deronshire Kersey, Tweeds, Cording and Castor Coths, suitable for men's or boys' clothes.

FOR PANTALOONS,
 New DOESKIN FABRICS, and other denominations of FANCY WEAVINGS, which he offers as particularly acceptable

FOR FALL AND WINTER WEAR.
 He would also call attention to his AMPLE ASSORTMENT of VESTINGS,
 of the most RICH and BEAUTIFUL STYLES, both as regards quality and pattern.

FURNISHING GOODS,
 Consisting of Caps, Stocks, Cravats, Bosoms, Collars, Flannel Shirts and Drawers. Also, READY MADE CLOTHING, at very low prices.
 It will be found that he has adopted the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, a mode which is considered as a guarantee against the fraudulent devices of disreputable dealers, as also against the sometimes interminable process of making a bargain. Should there be any who disapprove such a system, they may, by calling at his establishment, find reasons to alter their opinion. Customers are allowed to return every article which on trial is found to have been misrepresented. But we doubt if they will find occasion to do so.

HE DOES HIS OWN CUTTING, which he flatters himself he has no need to boast of, inasmuch as it is now too well known to need any man's praise, and least of all his own.
 He invites the attention of such as expect

Punctuality and Good Workmanship, FOR CASH, such being his rule of business,—the REDUCED RATES at which he sells rendering any other mode impracticable. All who thus employ him, he is confident, will have good reason to be satisfied.
 Quincy, Oct. 13.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

TIME.

Swift forward rolls the wheels of time,
Onward! onward! quick as light;
Omniscience's hand alone can stay
Their lightning speed althwart flight.

O Time! what mind can scan your day!
Tell when first you drew your breath!
Say whether thou from chaos came,
When, if e'er, you'll taste of death?

Say, have your wings been always fledged,
Seen worlds rise and then expire?
Will you soar on eternity,
Spread wide your wings and never tire.

You glance on man, then, like a flash,
He springs forth into life!
Before he grovels half a span
Dies,—no ends the mortal strife.

Man tossed upon life's troubled sea
Always finds in you a friend;
For if no ray of hope appear,
His sufferings soon will end.

Relentless time! you onward soar,—
Heed not proud ambition's call
To clip your wings, that it may climb
Earth's lofty dome ere it fall.

THE DEATH OF THE FLOWERS.

BY W. C. BRYANT.

The melancholy days are come, the saddest of the year,
Of wailing winds, and naked woods, and meadows brown and sear;
Heaped in the hollows of the grove, the withered leaves lie dead,
They rustle to the eddying gust, and to the rabbit's tread.
The robin and the wren are flown, and from the shrubs the jay,
And from the wood-top calls the crow through all the gloomy day.

Where are the flowers, the fair young flowers, that lately sprung and stood
In brighter lights and softer airs, a beauteous neighborhood?
Alas! they are all in their graves, the gentle race of flowers
Are lying in their lowly beds, with the fair and good of ours.
The rain is falling where they lie, but the cold November rain,
Calls not from out the gloomy earth, the lovely ones again.

The wild flower and the violet, they perished long ago,
And the briar rose and orchis died amid the summer-glow;
But on the hill the golden rod, and the aster in the wood,
And the yellow sunflower by the brook in autumn-beauty stood.

Till fell the frost from the clear cold heaven, as falls the plague on men;
And the brightness of their smiles was gone, from upland, glade, and glen.
And now when come the calm mild days, as still such days will come,
To call the squirrel and the bee from out their wintry home:
When sound of dropping nuts is heard, though all the woods are still,
And twinkle in the smoky light the waters of the rill,
The south wind searches for the flowers, whose fragrance late he bore,
And sighs to find them in the wood and by the stream no more.

And then I think of one, who in her youthful beauty died,
The fair meek blossom that grew up and faded by my side;
In the cold moist earth we laid her, when the forest cast the leaf,
And wept that one so lovely should have a life so brief;
Yet not unmet it was that one, like that young friend of ours;
So gentle and so beautiful, should perish with the flowers.

ANECDOTES.

"I saw, landlord," said a fellow who was travelling out west, "I didn't pay you for my last night's lodging, as you said I should sleep alone."
"Well, didn't you?" inquired the landlord.
"Thunder and lightning! I had more than a thousand mosquitoes for room mates, and each one had a dab at me."
"I rather guess you can afford to pay for the reckoning, then, as each one gave you his share of the bill."

At the close of a temperance meeting, the total abstinence pledge was circulated, and a beautiful young woman solicited to append her signature to it. When asked, "Will you give me your name?" she replied, "No sir, I have already promised my name to another gentleman."

A countryman was offered a glass of soda water, the other day, and rejected it with the greatest indignation. "Do you think I am a salamander?" said he, "to drink water boiling hot?"

"Father, what you opposed to monopoly?" said a little fellow, as his parent took up the brandy bottle. "Yes, my boy." "Then give me a drink too." The father broke the bottle on the floor.

"I'm not afraid of a barrel of cider!" said a toper to a temperance man. "I presume not from your appearance, but I should think a barrel of cider would run at your approach," was the reply.

Another Wonder ADDED TO THE BOSTON MUSEUM.

Cold Weather is Coming !! GET A STOVE !!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook,—as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven,—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

It is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons, with certainty and dispatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS

is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.
If its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.
A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

MISCELLANY.

HONESTY.

"An honest man's the noblest work of God."
What is honesty? "To pay one's debts." Exactly so. No definition could be nearer correctness. Always minding, however, that there are other ledgers than the trader's, that a man's debts are not to be calculated in pounds, shillings and pence. "Thou shalt not accumulate debt" is but another version of "Thou shalt not steal." The debtor—that is, he who does not pay to the utmost of his ability—is a robber. Honesty pays all debts.

And what does a man owe?
One John Sharp has just called in his accounts; finds himself indebted—to his tailor so much, his baker and butcher so much, his wine merchant, &c., &c., so much more. He is going abroad, and wishes to settle every thing. Tailor, baker and company, sign receipts, and depart well satisfied. Honest John Sharp!

John's brother, Ernest, calls a meeting of his creditors, and shamefully offers them a dividend of one shilling in the pound. He shall pass through the Insolvent Court; branded as a knave.

Yet which of the brothers is the most honest?

Truly, if there is no further inquiry, the world's judgment is right enough. But, if payments may not always be made in the coin of the realm, if for some debts stamp receipts avail not—wait awhile before you pronounce John honest or Ernest a knave!

John did not pay everybody; Ernest, in fact, declared a larger dividend than John.

John owed much to God—to himself; though bankrupt commissioners and legislators for credit may sneer at such a claimant. Did he pay that debt? Alas, no! He threw down health of body, mind and heart, at the feet of the idol Money. He owed a duty to his own soul—for it was his duty to keep that undefiled; to his conscience—for he was bound to maintain the sovereignty of that against all rebels and usurpers; and he deposited his conscience—because that conscience prohibited certain unfair dealings, and buried his conscience in a dungeon, the same place, indeed, wherein was his 'soul,' his money-box; and his soul (which was once pure as that of a little child) he dragged through all manner of sordid and so-phistical filth, till it became no cleaner than a chandler's shop. For it happened that his soul could not grow in the atmosphere of a counting-house, that the delicate flower of thought withered and put forth no bloom there; and he forgot his duty and paid no regard to either heart or mind; he must needs make money. But all his money would not pay the debts he owed to his own life; neither is there any Insolvent Court to clear him of that debt. Thus daily robbing himself, no wonder that John Sharp forgot his duty to his neighbors, the debts he owed to him; for indeed there are other debts beside those to the tradesmen who 'supply' you. He owed a manly conduct to the world; he had degraded himself so that no manhood was in him. That debt he was not paid, and so he robbed the world. He had borrowed love and kindness from others, and he had no love or kindness to return; such borrowing is theft. He owed a duty to his country; he was too fearful to be a patriot; so he defrauded his country, and the great debt of liberty was not balanced in his year's account.

He owed a duty to his children; but when he made himself a selfish thing, a thing of craft and guile, of over-reaching and veriest worldliness, it was no longer in his power to be an example to them. Tenderly draw up his schedule; and see for how much his children are creditors, of what he has robbed them.

John Sharp had a man's duties to perform, a man's debts to pay; and he gave certain moneys to certain trades-people who had done but little for him, and thought all settled—the greatest of his debts, his life's debts being unpaid. Was this man solvent? His dividend was scarcely a shilling in the pound. John Sharp was no solvent man, but a thief; though courts of law could not issue judgment against him. Miserable bankrupt, with thy ten thousand a year to pay what money pays not! thy own life is petitioning creditor against thee; and thou art not honest. Certainly Jacob was a knave; but Esau was not honest, when he sold his birthright, bribed by a mess of pottage to rob himself and all that had claim upon him.

His brother Ernest—we said—paid more than John. Ay, did he! For he cherished his own soul; paid his debts to that, not burying his talent in a napkin, but putting it out to interest; and his heart grew like a mighty tree under whose shadow in the sunny hours many loved to linger—under whose strong shelter, when the storm strode through the world, many poor had refuge. And his mind had its dues respected; and brought him wealth in return—the royalist coin of thought, which scattered, seed like, over the world. He rendered to God, too, the real worship of deeds; and so ever paid the great debt of Nature (which is life, not death), and had no claims uncanceled save some charges for food and clothing, nothing comparable to the magnificence he had bestowed upon the world, paltry sums, for which his great-heartedness (the great-heartedness of an apostle; 'Take no thought for food' &c.) had not cared to provide. Ernest did not pay all debts; for no man is perfect; and a man cannot rob another of even yellow dirt without offending. But of the two brothers which was the worthiest, which the honestest?

Stare not so, good tradesman! we are not teaching thy customers to defraud thee; we are not arguing for any kind of shop-lifting. We would have all men paid to the veriest fraction. Pay little of mint and anniseed; but forget not the weightier matters! It is not honest to defraud thy tailor. Pay thy tailor's bill! But pay God's first. Real honesty is a far more comprehensive thing than the honesty of police magistrates or bankruptcy commissioners. Your felons' and debtors' jails are not wide enough, if dishonesty is the prisoner's qualification. Worldliness, self-debasement, is the veritable prison wherein the dishonest are confined, whence the soul's delirium may not depart to wander through the green fields, under the cheering smile of Heaven. Honesty is to pay one's debts—to one's self first, for a man is his own chief creditor. Live well!—that thou oweest to God. Pay for thy dress-coat, also!—for honesty cares for the nearest things while its gaze is upon the highest. This is honesty: to fulfil the requisitions of thy own nature, to render to the Eternal full interest for the genius, the aptitude, or even the single talent which has been lent thee. It is not honest for a man to deteriorate his own nature, to blight his own heart, to enfeeble his mind, or even to neglect his physical culture. It is not honest for men to compel or to allow their free souls to bow down to circumstances. An honest man carries his head above circumstances, looking heavenward. It is not honest in traders to overreach, in statesmen to prefer power to well doing, in lawyers to plead for dishonest clients, or in poets, prophets, or artists, to seek fame rather than truth and beauty.

It is not honest to wear a welcoming smile upon the lips while the heart is full of hatred, indifference, or distrust. Better even surliness than a civil lie. It is not honest to be 'charitable' out of the superfluity of that of which thou hast robbed thy neighbor. It is not honest to shed blood for shame, when thy soul aspires to glory; neither is it honest to buy kindness at the price of wrong. It is not honest in a woman to swear to love a man when she only loves his house and equipage; nor any honest for a man to purchase a woman as he would purchase a beast. For every thing has its certain value; and to pay that which is fairly due is the prerogative of honesty. It is not honest to make a poet an executive officer; any more than it is to steal a legislator's robes to throw them over the shoulders of a fool. It is not honest to preach one thing and practice another. It is not honest to impoverish one man in order to enrich another. For honesty has the utmost respects for the rights of all.—"He who robbeth even the least of these little ones," said Honesty, once speaking to men—"is not my disciple." There is also an honesty of kindness. Love thy neighbor! devote thy life for the good of others! so fulfilling that most excellent bond of charity—love's true bondman.

Honesty, God's Word, is the first-born of love; ay! and love itself. For when thou hast obeyed the requisitions of Honesty, when thou hast paid all dues to heaven and to earth, and to thine own soul which hangeth midway between God and the world, what else wilt thou have to do? Wilt thou not be in communion with God? Be thou as Godlike as thy nature will allow; paying due homage to the eternity within thee. Nor think thyself ever absolved from that duty? Honesty is no pope to grant indulgences. Be honest though thou stand in the throng of knaves! Even toward them thou hast a duty. Be honest! Honor among thieves. Happily, imitating and strengthened by the great Exemplar hanging between thieves, thou, strong and enduring in thy integrity, mayest have power to say unto some penitent soul—"This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise!" anyhow, though men with never so fierce persecution and crossing of God's life may thrust the honest into hell, he shall arise again, and coming in the clouded future with power and great glory, shall judge the world that condemned him. He doth daily judge the world; and in judging saves it, for the world's Savior is Honesty. What a fool's bedlam it were else.

Honesty is the truth of the heart and the truth of the lips. It is true heart feeling poured forth in true utterance, whether of word or deed. The life of an honest man is harmonious. The honest, integral heart is a strong and sound rock, on which men may build securely, out of which great monumental deeds are sculptured.

Yet again! It is not honest to feel one thing and to say another, or to say one thing and do another. Alas! for our daily custom! Do we not continually, bribed with the hope of some paltry money-gain, or fearful offence-giving, put on a pleasant smirk, and grasp with friendly zeal the hand which we despise? This is not honest. Do we not lie daily for the sake of half-pence, and so pick men's pockets; and look lies for the sake of empty smiles and compliments? This is not honest. Do not some of us go about with cold sneering lips, as if we were of custom's frost-work, when our hearts are burning within us; making conventional grimaces, and repeating formal catechisms, when our inmost thoughts are struggling for utterance? But we should displease this friend, give advantage to some foe, be laughed at by some fool, be deemed rude by the world; and so we sell our hearts for the rewards of worldliness, and live, not like true men made in God's image, but rather like automatons manufactured by custom's pestle.

O! Truth, Truth! where are thy honest children? To lie is not honest: yet many have never reach the Old Bailey. There are men who look lies, though they speak none; there are smooth-faced, honest looking men, with truth ever on their lips, whose deeds are lies—blasphemies against the Holy Spirit. Lend us thy lantern, cynic, that we may find an honest man.

It is not honest, in any time or place, by deed, or word, or look, to prefer expediency to right, to rob the Eternal for Time's sake.

HOW THE GIRLS 'CUT UP SHINES' TWO HUNDRED YEARS AGO.

[The following extracts are from a recent publication entitled "Leaves from Margaret Smith's Journal," purporting to have been written by one of the first settlers, and said to be from the pen of Whitmer.]

NEWBURY, Dec. 6th.

We got back from Haverhill last night, Doctor Clark accompanying us; he having business in Newbury. When we came up to the door, Effie met us with a shy look, and told her Mistress that Mrs. Prudence (Uncle's spinster Cousin) had got a "braw laid Wooer" in the East room; and surely enough we found our ancient kinswoman and Deacon Dole, a Widower of three years' standing, sitting at the supper table. We did take note that the Deacon had on a new stiff Coat; and as for Aunt Prudence, (for so she was called in the family,) she was clad in her bravest, with a fine cap on her head. They both did seem a little disturbed by our coming, but plates being laid for us, we sat down with them. After supper Rebecca had a fire kindled in Uncle's room, whither we did betake ourselves, and being very merry at the thought of Deacon Dole's visit, it chanced to enter our silly Heads that it would be no harm to stop the Clock in the entry a-while, and let the two old folks make a long evening of it. After a time Rebecca made an errand into the East Room, to see how matters went, and coming back said the twain were sitting on the same settle by the fire, smoking a pipe of Tobacco together. Moreover, our foolish trick did work well for, Aunt Prudence coming at last into the entry to look at the Clock, we heard her tell the Deacon that it was only a little past 8, when in truth it was near 10. Not long after, when there was a loud knocking at the door, and as Effie had gone to bed, Rebecca did open it, when, whom did she see, but the widow Hepsy Barnett, Deacon Dole's housekeeper, and with her the Deacon's son, Moses, and the Minister, Mr. Richardson, with a lantern in his hand! "Dear me says the Woman, looking very dismal, 'have you seen anything of the Deacon?'" By this time we were all at the door, the Deacon and Aunt Prudence among the rest, when Moses, like a great fool as he is, pulled off his woollen cap and tossed it up in the Air, crying out, "There, Goody Barnett, didn't I tell ye so? There's Father now!" and the Widow, holding up both her hands, said she never did in all her born days see the like of this. A man of the Deacon's years and station stealing away without letting folks know where to look for him; and then turning upon poor Mrs. Prudence, she said she had long known that some folks were sly and artful, and she was glad Mr. Richardson was here to see for himself. Whereupon Aunt Prudence in much amazement said it was scarce past 8, as they might see by the clock; but Mr. Richardson, who could scarcely keep a grave face, pulling out his watch, said it was past 10, and bade her note that the Clock was stopped. He told Deacon Dole that seeing Goody Barnett so troubled about him, he had offered to go along with her a little way, and that he was glad to find that the fault was in the Clock. The Deacon, who had stood like one in a maze here clapped on his Hat, and snatched up his cane and went off, looking as guilty as if he had been caught a house-breaking, the Widow scolding him all the way. Now as we could scarcely restrain from laughing, Mr. Richardson, who tarried a moment, shook his head at Rebecca, telling her he feared by her looks she was a naughty Girl, taking pleasure in other folk's trouble. We did both feel ashamed and sorry enough for our mischief, after it was all over; and poor Mrs. Prudence is so sorely mortified, that she told Rebecca this morning not to mention Deacon Dole's name to her again, and that Widow Hepsy is welcome to him, since he is so mean-spirited as to let her rule him as she doth.

A little further along the following paragraph occurs:

Mr. Sewall tells me that Dea. Dole has just married his house-keeper, and that Moses says, he never knew before his father to get the worst in a bargain.

FLINT SOUP.

"Now Mary," said my husband when we were first married, "I must lay by for—rent, and for—firing, and for—clothing; and here is the remainder for you to make the best of for our supply thro' the week. But mind! you do not run in debt; and have always a fresh loaf in the house before you cut the last. We cannot afford to eat new bread!" I got things very comfortably, and as I thought very frugally; but the next Friday evening, after supper, I had to say to my husband, "What must we do? the money is all gone, and we have nothing in the house for to-morrow's dinner. I am sure I have made it go as far as I could." My husband was very kind; he found no fault, but said we could have some flint soup for dinner. He asked, if there was bread in the house. "Yes," I said, "a whole loaf and a piece." "That's well," he said, "and, perhaps, you have a little oatmeal or flour?" "There is a little." "Good again, and plenty of herbs in the garden; we shall do." So he washed a couple of flints very clean, and set them on with some water and onions, and a carrot or two. When the roots were tender he put in the meal, and some pepper and salt, and parsley and thyme, and the piece of stale bread, and I assure you we had a good dinner. "But what was the use of the flints? Why not leave them out and call it herb porridge?" That is what I could not understand at first. Well next Saturday matters were much the same, so we again contentedly dined on flint soup. In the course of the week, having picked some bones of meat, I was going to throw them away, when the thought struck me, that if they were hashed up and put in the soup, they would give at least as much goodness as flint. My husband thought so too; so we tried, and found they greatly improved the soup, and from that time we never wasted a bone; and in the course of a few weeks we found the money held out for Saturday's dinner, and even allowed a trifle to lay by. My husband was pleased when we got into this course; and we were thoroughly settled in frugal habits, and not before he told me the real use of flints in the soup. "There are two things," said he, which I have always resolved against, as being the ruin of many poor people—debt and waste. So, from the day I took to providing for myself, I determined always to keep bread in the house, and to live on bread and water, rather than run in debt. But instead of eating dry bread, and drinking cold water, I set myself to make it into soup! for I thought, if I tried to boil down the flints, which could not enrich the liquor, it might sharpen my wits to make the best use of anything that could." "I believe," continued the good woman, "it was to sharpen my wits rather than his own; and I can truly say, that making flint soup has taught me to turn to good account many things that are often thrown away as if they were as worthless as stones."—Family Economist.

IRISH EMIGRANTS.

"For myself I feel a sympathy for the Irishman, I see him as the representative of a generous, warm hearted, cruelly oppressed people. That he loves his native land—that his patriotism is divided—that he cannot forget the claims of his mother island—that his religion is dear to him—does not decrease my estimation of him.

"A stranger in a strange land, he is to me always an object of interest. The poorest and roughest has a romance in his history. Amidst all his gawdy of heart and national drollery and wit, the poor emigrant has sad thoughts of the 'old mother of him,' sitting lonely in her solitary cabin by the bog side—recollections of a Father's blessing and a sister's farewell are haunting him—a grave mound in a distant churchyard far beyond the wide waters, has an eternal greenness in his memory—for there perhaps, lies a 'darling child,' or a 'swate creature,' who once loved him—the New World is forgotten for the moment—blue Killarney and the Liffy sparkle before him—Glendalough spreads beneath him its still dark mirror—he sees the same evening sunshine rest upon the hallow alike with nature's blessing, the ruin of the seven Churches of Ireland's apostolic age, the broken mounds of the Druids, and the Round Towers of Phœnician sun worshippers—beautiful and mournful recollections of his home waken within him—and the rough and seemingly careless and light-hearted laborer melts into tears. It is no light thing to abandon one's country and household gods. Touching and beautiful was the injunction of the Prophet of the Hebrews. 'Ye shall not oppress the stranger, for ye know the heart of the stranger; seeing that ye were strangers in the land of Egypt.'—J. G. Whittier.

THE WIFE OF A CALIFORNIAN.

Various circumstances peculiar to the California enterprise—the length and perils of the voyage, the multifold character of the adventures, the anomalous condition of society there, the uncertain prospect as to individual success at the mines—ranging from great and sudden wealth down to flat disappointment—the conflicting reports that are constantly arriving, render every arrival from that country one of intense interest to the personal friends of the adventurers. A young wife, whose husband sailed from New York last February, has been anxiously looking for news of his arrival at San Francisco. Eight months had passed away, and she got no tidings of him except that he wrote her in April from Rio Janeiro, having put in there for repairs. As she was at the railroad office, to see a friend off in the cars, the other day a news boy approached with a bundle of extras. Her eyes, always on the lookout caught the picture of the steamer which headed the paper, as proclaiming some foreign mail arrival. "What vessel is that?" said she, to me, with a mixture of surprise and eagerness. "It is the Empire City," I replied. She snatched a paper from the boy, and begged me to show her at once the list of arrivals at San Francisco. She ran it half over, and throwing up her hands, Exclaimed—"Here it is! Here it is! Bark—Captain—Aug 21, 1849 days from New York!" Her dear husband had reached his Haven, or at least the vessel had, in which he sailed. A good Providence had been over him—he had been carried safely through the storms of the Atlantic, the perils of the Cape, the worse than "law's delay" of the Pacific, and was in port! She fastened her eyes on that little item, of commercial news, read and re-read it, wiped away the mists that gathered before her, and read it again, and twenty times more, as if to assure herself that it was not an illusion. The leaving bosom, the face glowing at one moment and pale at the next, the fluttering voice, showed the intensity of her emotion, and the depth of a young wife's devotion. I took the paper from her hand, and folded it up for convenience, but she immediately unfolded it again, and placed her finger on the interesting item, as if there were danger of its escaping from her. Had that paper been filled with accounts of fresh revolutions in Europe, or of the discovery of a continent, it would have been nothing to her. I walked home with her, she rang the bell vigorously, as if there were haste and urgency to enter, and as I turned down the steps, I heard her in the hall shouting the news up the stairway to her mother in the parlor above. —New York Journal of Commerce.

FEMALE DRESS.

Woman gains nothing by being reduced to the nudity of man; and the nearer she approximates to him, the greater hazard she runs of forfeiting those charms which she will find to be rather more advantageous than she sometimes thinks. She loses something by every neck that she approaches him in her aspect and adornments, in the one as in the other. It is her interest to remain as far separated as possible, to surround herself with every prestige that can make her a distinct sex, whether to that she add the ornaments over which she has the command or not. The petticoat is the essence of woman; and woe to her who, in more senses than one would wear the breeches. We know not how to approach a delicate female in woollen, the very idea of the touch of wool is unbecomingly masculine. Even the riding habit is scarcely justified by its apparent necessity (for it is not necessary) and when combined with beaver hat and Hessian boots we would as soon think of making love to an officer of dragons. We doubt the whole invention, riding and all; and let the equipt be assured that they lose much more than they gain by this "vaunting ambition."

There is not an atom of male attire, in which the charming sex does not suffer, in male estimation; and if dress is to be the labor and object of their lives if it is the primum notus and the ultimum notus, the end and purpose of their lives here below, that end is to elate man, to gain his approbation and excite his love. The sex is to tempt to dress to itself, and to forget him to whom alone it ought to dress; and let it be assured that man is the true judge and critic, that critic, which it ought to study and please.

A SINGULAR PHYSIOLOGICAL FACT.

The transference of vitality which appears to take place when young persons are habitually placed in contact with the aged, is not a nursery fiction. It is well attested by very competent authorities. A not uncommon cause, observes Dr. James Copland, of depressed vital power, is the young sleeping with the aged. This fact, however explained, has been long remarked, and is well known to every unprejudiced observer. I have on several occasions met with the counterpart of the following case: I was, a few years ago, consulted about a pale, sickly and thin boy of about four or five years of age. He appeared to have no specific ailment, but there was a slow and remarkable decline of flesh and strength, and of the energy of the functions—what his mother very aptly termed a gradual blight. After inquiry into the case, it came out that he had been a very robust and plethoric child up to his third year, when his grandmother, a very aged person, took him to sleep with her; that he soon afterward lost his good looks and that he had continued to decline progressively ever since, notwithstanding medical treatment. I directed him to sleep apart from the aged parent, and prescribed gentle tonics, change of air, &c.; the recovery was rapid. But it is not children only that debility is induced by this mode of abstracting vital power. Young females married to very old men suffer in a similar manner, although seldom to so great an extent; and many instances have come to my own knowledge where they have suspected the cause of their debilitated state. These facts are often well known to the aged themselves, who consider the indulgence favorable to longevity, and thereby illustrate the selfishness which in some persons, increases with their years. Every medical practitioner is well aware of the fact, and parents generally are advised not to allow their infants to sleep with aged persons.

Economy. Tobacco which has been chewed once, may be rendered fit for chewing a second time, by dipping it in vinegar and water and drying it in the sun. A colored gentleman in the city sells hundreds of pounds per week, which has been renewed in this manner. He can safely recommend it as he has chewed all of it himself, and knows it to be genuine.

HOW A MAN FEELS WHEN HE IS HUNG.

Hanging, though a death which has prevailed more universally than any single mode of execution, is a death from which the imagination revolts. This is a vulgar error. Louis, the eminent French professor, seeing that the Paris criminals were some instances in dying, while those at Lyons hung a lifeless mass the moment the rope was strained by their weight, learned from the executioner the trick of the trade which spared his victims a struggle. In flinging them from the ladder, he steadied with one hand the head, and with the other imparted to the body a rotary movement, which gave the neck a wrench. The veritable Jack Ketch, of the reign of James II., who had transmitted his name to all imitations of his office, was said by his wife alone to know how to make a culprit "die sweetly," though his assistants could manage to get through the business tolerably well too. An immense number of persons, recovered from insensibility, have recorded their sensations, and agree that an easier end could not be desired. An acquaintance of Lord Byron's who meant to hang himself, was cut down by the last executioner, and declared that he felt no pain, his only sensation being that of fire before his eyes, which changed first to black and then to sky-blue, following a source of pleasure. Montaigne, hanged in France during the religious wars, and rescued at the intervention of Tiberius, complained that having lost all pain on the instant, he had been taken from a light of which the charms defied all description. Another, who escaped by the breaking of the cord, said that after a second suffering, a fire appeared, and across it a most beautiful avenue of trees. Henry IV., of France, sent his physician to question him, and when a parson was talked of, the man answered coldly that it was not worth the asking. The uniformity of the descriptions render it needless to multiply instances. They fill pages of every book of medical jurisprudence. All agree that the unconsciousness is quite momentary, that a pleasurable sensation immediately succeeds, colors of various hues start up before the sight, and these having been gazed on for a trivial space, the rest is oblivion.

WHAT THE STRAP ENGINE DOES. It propels, it tows, it sculls, it screws, it warps, it elevates, it lowers, it pulls, it pushes, it drains, it irrigates, it draws, it fills, it empties, it carries, it brings, it scatters, it collects, it condenses, it extracts, it exerts, it plows, it threshes, it winnows, it washes, it dries, it crushes, it sifts, it boils, it mixes, it kneads, it moulds, it stamps, it punches, it beats, it presses, it picks, it hews, it cuts, it slits, it shares, it saws, it planes, it turns, it bores, it mortises, it drills, it heads, it blows, it forges, it rolls, it hammers, it rasps, it files, it polishes, it rivets, it sweeps, it brushes, it scutes, it cards, it spins, it winds, it twists, it weaves, it shears, it coils, and—it PRINTS.

AN ARGUMENT FOR MARRIAGE. Powers, the sculptor, writing to a friend of what people call the folly of marrying without the means to support a family, expresses frankly his own fears when he found himself in this position; but he adds with characteristic candor: "To tell the truth however, family and poverty have done more to support me than I have to support them. They have compelled me to make exertions that I hardly thought myself capable of; and often, when on the verge of despair, they have forced me, like a coward in a corner, to fight like a hero, not for myself, but for my wife and little ones. I have done so much work to do as I can execute, unless I can find some more assistance in the marble, and I have a prospect of further commissions."

The truth, as expressed above by the gifted sculptor, is like a similar remark we heard not long since by a gentleman from Boston, who told matrimony in the same way, and found afterwards that the loose change in his pocket, which he had before squandered in a foolish notion—"Young men, whine, as he called them—was enough to support a prudent wife, who, by economy, has proved a fortune in herself, and had saved a sum of money for her once careless husband. "A wife to direct a man toward a proper ambition, and to a general economy," he said, "was like timely succor at sea, to save him from destruction on a perilous voyage."

NEVER SAY DIE. An English paper has the following: "Neither birth, marriage, sickness, nor persons, are known to editors in this country: death itself is no apology. They may die, but their paper must come out."

BOSTON TRADE WITH THE WEST IN LIVE HOGS. Few have any idea of the extent of the trade at this point in live hogs. One firm, has been receiving at the rate of 1500 head per week, and has contracted, we understand, for the delivery this fall of fifteen thousand, corn and stall feed. Two other firms have also contracted for equally as large a number, and the great bulk goes forward the Boston market. There are buyers here per hundred, live weight. The sales in this market this season will exceed one hundred thousand dollars.—Buffalo Com. Ad.

CALIFORNIA. Two years ago California was a wilderness, belonging to Mexico, which it took six months to reach by the shortest route. Now it has thronged cities which can be reached in six weeks. It has Churches, theatres, newspapers, steamers running to and fro, and express agents are passing along the route, as easily as between New York and Boston. Perilous depots are established—in a word it has become one of the great marts—as Panama is one of the great thoroughfares of the world! What a change in a short period. What was almost a Mexican Desert has become an American Empire! How truly, Bishop Berkeley sang—"Westward the Star of Empire takes its way."

THE PURITAN PROLIFIC RACE. According to Bancroft, the first Puritan settlers of New England are the parents of one-third of the population of the United States. In the first fifteen years—the time when most of the immigrants from England took place—there came over twenty-one thousand persons. Their descendants in 1840 were estimated at four million. Each family has multiplied on the average to a thousand souls. So that a little one has become a thousand, and a small one a strong nation.

WOMEN STRONGER THAN MEN. A distinguished physician says: "Antiquity, the period when the fairest portion of the fair creation will step forth unembarrassed with slabs of walnut and tiers of wickerbone. The constitution of our females must be first rate to withstand in any tolerable degree the terrible inflictions of the corset eight long hours every day. No animal could survive it. Take the honest ox, and enclose his sides with hoop poles, and put an oak plank beneath him and gird the whole with a bad cord, and demand of him labor, he would labor indeed, but it would be for breath.

A NUMEROUS ANCESTRY. Fowler, the Philologist, in his work entitled, "Hereditary Descent," says that every human being on the face of the globe, is compelled, from a demand in Nature, to have two parents, four grand parents, eight great-grand parents, sixteen ancestors of the fourth generation back, thirty-two of the fifth, two hundred and fifty-six of the sixth, thirty-two thousand seven hundred and eighty-eight of the seventh, almost one million and fifty thousand of the twentieth, and nearly one thousand seven hundred million of the thirtieth generation. The whole number of every one's ancestors for fifty generations, amounts to two thousand three hundred and sixty-two billion, seven hundred and forty-nine thousand nine hundred and fourteen million, two hundred and fourteen thousand and forty-six (2,362,749,214, 214, 046)—a multitude, verily, which no man can number, no mind conceive! The blood of this vast host is running in the veins of every living mortal, and that reckoning back only fifty generations!

NOVEMBER. Here we are, in the middle of November, with a mild sun above us, a bracing, dry air about us, a long dismal winter behind, and the ruddy fires of a Yankee Thanksgiving blazing cheerily ahead. Goodness, good times, and—good gracious! almost every thing good. A few more days, and the poor girl at service, and the hired man, and the little parson clerk, and the newly married pair and their new baby will all go home, and sit down at the old table, tell long yams, and call up old times; and all will feel that once a year at least, there is some fun, and some comfort in being alive. Give us New England for a home. There is no place like it in all God's great earth. Give us the Yankee Thanksgiving. The old story heathenisms up in its cheerful fires. It is the most precious gem set in the golden circle of the year. Fancy brings before us its pleasant scenes and sounds. "I smell the pine of roasted meat," the last wail of the expiring pig comes to the far-reaching ear, and the old gambler bestows his name upon his eager consumers. Springfield Republican.

WORDS ARE THINGS. Yes and sometimes very dangerous things, too. They are like fire arms, and should be handled very carefully. Have a care of your words or you may hurt somebody when you do not mean to. A man's "grit" may depend upon his neighbor's grammar, and accusations of horrible sins may grow out of nothing but syntax. A worthy clergyman once came near losing his "living" in this way—and a man's living is the next thing to his life. It happened thus: The Ministers name was mentioned in terms of eulogy one evening at a social gathering in his parish, when a person present, a solemn-faced, waggish fellow of convivial habits, observed that he quite agreed with the rest in his praise of Mr. A.—"We have often drank brandy and water together," said the bon-vivant, "and I consider him one of the pleasantest fellows I ever knew."—A pretty compliment to a clergyman and a taster! The story got to the deacons and the deacons brought it up in the church. The parson was arraigned and confronted his accuser, who declared that what he had said was strictly true, but was obviously misunderstood. "It is a solemn fact," said the witness, "that your excellent minister and myself have drank brandy and water together—but then I drank the brandy and he the water." And that was the whole story that had well nigh ruined the parson.—Boston Post.

A WIFE IN TROUBLE. "Pray tell me, my dear, what is the cause of those tears?" "Oh! such a disgrace!" "What! what is the matter, my dear? Do not keep me in suspense!" "Why, I have opened one of your letters, supposing it addressed to myself. Certainly it looked more like Mrs. than Mr.!" "Is that all? What harm can there be in a wife's opening her husband's letters?" "No harm in the thing itself. But the contents! Such a disgrace!" "What! how any one dared to write me a letter unfit to be read by my wife?" "Oh, no. It is couched in the most chaste and gentlemanly language. But the contents, the contents!" Here the wife buried her face in her handkerchief, sobbing aloud, while the husband caught up the letter and commenced reading the epistle that had been the means of nearly breaking the wife's heart. It was a bill from the printer, for seven year's subscription.—Sandy Hill Herald.

CHARACTER OF ENGLISHMEN. Lords and Commons of England, consider what a nation it is whereof ye are, and what of ye are the governors; a nation not slow and dull, but of a quick, ingenious, and piercing spirit; acute to invent, subtle and sinewy to discourse, not beneath the reach of any point, the highest that human capacity can soar to. What wants there to such a hardy and prompt soul, but wise and faithful laborers, to make a knowing people, a nation of prophets, of sages, and of Worthies?

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, NOV. 24, 1849.

MR. QUINCY'S LECTURE.

The sixth lecture before the Lyceum was given by Edmund Quincy, Esq. of Dedham, upon the subject of "George Fox and the early Quakers." This address was remarkable neither for its style nor delivery. It was a simple narration of historical detail and an honest compilation of acknowledged authorities in reference to the peculiar and very interesting sect called "Quakers."

The bold, blunt, and rigorous character of George Fox, was very fairly portrayed and it contrasted strangely with the lives of the pompous and crafty clergy of his age.

Claiming no originality, avoiding all speculation and denying sanction to the peculiar views of the Quakers, the lecturer aimed to tell a —"round unvarnished tale."

In the character of the Quaker we see much to admire, and the lecture in presenting faithfully many of their peculiar characteristics, did not prove wholly useless or entirely devoid of interest.

BOSTON PATHFINDER. Silas W. Wilder, Esq. has become associated with George K. Snow in the publication of this paper, and will have charge of editorial department.

THE ELECTION IN THIS STATE. The whigs have chosen Senators in Suffolk, Essex, Bristol, Nantucket, Norfolk, Barnstable and Hampshire,—no choice in Berkshire, Hampden and Franklin. The coalition ticket is chosen in Middlesex, Worcester and Plymouth. The whigs have elected one hundred and sixty one representatives, and the coalition one hundred and thirteen.

TENNESSEE. Parties in the Tennessee Legislature are exactly equal. The democrats have three majority in one house, the whigs have three in the other, on joint ballot there is a tie.

WISCONSIN. The democrats have carried the State by a decided majority.

MISSISSIPPI. Gen. Quitman, (dem.) is elected Governor by a large majority. The democrats claim the election of four Congressmen.

NEW YORK. Each party has four of the State officers; the whigs have a majority of two in the Senate, and the democrats a majority of two in the Assembly.

MICHIGAN. Barry, democrat, is elected Governor by four thousand majority. The Legislature is also democratic.

LOUISIANA. Walker, democrat, is elected Governor. The whigs have small majorities in the Legislature; three democrats and one whig elected to Congress.

VIRGINIA. The whigs have gained a member of Congress.—Col. Haymond in place of Mr. Thompson, the democratic candidate.

EXPERIENCE IN WATER-CURE. Messrs. Fowler & Wells of New York, have issued a familiar exposition of the principles and results of water treatment in the cure of acute and chronic diseases, by Mrs. Mary S. Gove Nichols. Mrs. N. is a lady of some celebrity as a lecturer on anatomy and physiology, and her 'experience in water-cure,' as set forth in the work before us, must be exceedingly valuable to females,—mothers especially. The book contains upwards of one hundred pages, and is sold for twenty five cents.

THE BOSTON ALMANAC. The advertisement of this almost invaluable little work, for 1850, will be found in another column. The almanac is now published for the benefit of the widow of Mr. S. N. Dickinson who established it, and each purchaser will thus contribute to a very worthy object. No one in the vicinity of Boston, or who visits it on business or pleasure, will be without this useful little volume.

ABSTRACTION OF GOLD DUST. Ten thousand dollars worth of gold dust was abstracted from boxes forwarded from San Francisco, via the Isthmus, in the Empire City. The robbery was not detected until the boxes were delivered at the mint in Philadelphia. Four thousand dollars reward has been offered for the detection of the robber and the recovery of the dust.

A WISE APPROPRIATION. The city council of Salem, have appropriated three hundred dollars to assist in paying the expenses of an evening school for adults.

THE FARMER'S ALMANAC. Phillips, Sampson & Co. have published the Farmer's Almanac for 1850, with strong paper covers, interleaved Calendar, valuable tables of statistics, miscellaneous reading, etc., edited by A. Maynard, Esq. It almost rivals the Old Farmer's Almanac by Robert B. Thomas.

BROWN'S ALMANAC. Messrs. Caleb Gill & Co. have this very convenient little pocket memorandum and account book for 1850. Every mechanic should have a copy.

V. P. COOLIDGE. A letter from California, dated Sept. 3d, has been published in which the writer inquires how it is that Valerius P. Coolidge has escaped hanging. He states that Coolidge has made his appearance there under an assumed name; that he formerly knew him and could not be mistaken.

CONFLAGRATION. The mansion of Mrs. Anna A. Jenkins, a Quaker lady of Providence, (R. I.) was destroyed on the 20th inst., and Mrs. J., her daughter and three servants perished in the flames. The loss of property is estimated at twenty thousand dollars,—every thing having been burnt.

DISTRESSING DEATH. On the 12th inst., Mr. Sylvanus Roberts of North Adams, a paper maker, fell into a cauldron of boiling liquid prepared for bleaching purposes, and scalded so that he died the next day.

FIRE. A carpenter's shop on the Dedham Turnpike in Roxbury, was consumed on Saturday night of last week.

CAUTION. A man in Boston recently made an ineffectual attempt to rob a lady in the street by seizing hold of a purse which she carried. It was wound around her finger, and in the attempt the purse was torn and the lady's finger injured.

POULTRY. The Boston Transcript says, that the amount of sales of poultry in one market in that city, for the year 1848, was six hundred and seventy-four thousand and twenty-three dollars. The amount of poultry sales for the whole city of Boston, for the same year, was over one million of dollars! The amount of sales of eggs for the whole city of Boston, for the same year, was a fraction short of a million of dollars.

A fashionable journal thus lays down the etiquette of a dinner-party.—"Married ladies precede the single. The lady of the house is the last to enter the dining-room. People who are engaged walk in together. Ladies do not dine with gloves on, and are not asked to take wine by gentlemen. There must be a salt-cellar for every two persons."

When the crowd was passing out of the Boston Museum, the other evening, a man deliberately cut off several ringlets from a young lady's neck, her long silken tresses having probably excited his admiration.

Quincy, Nov. 24.

DR. CORBETT'S Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla. This singularly efficient Preparation may be relied upon as being pre-eminent in cases that have before resisted all other applications whatsoever. The distinguished professor Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says:

"I should have a preference over all others for cures in which the medicinal qualities of the Sarsaparilla are sought."

But what say others who stand as the ablest in the healing art?

[From Dixie Crosby, M. D., Professor of Surgery and Obstetrics, etc., at Dartmouth College, N. H.]

HANOVER, N. H. Feb. 22, 1847.

Dear Sir—In answer to your inquiries concerning the Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, as prepared by the Society of Shakers in Canterbury, N. H., I would say that I have long been familiar with the preparation, and have always recommended it, from my personal knowledge of those concerned in its preparation which to me is proof that it is just what it purports to be.

DIXIE CROSBY, M. D.

Dr. Thomas Corbett, Shaker Village, N. H. Bristol, N. H. Jan. 20, 1847.

Having directed and used the Compound Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla, prepared by the United Society of Shakers in Canterbury, I confidently recommend it to the profession as a valuable auxiliary in the treatment of scrofula, and diseases of the Liver. I also consider it an efficacious remedy for the cure of a variety of cutaneous diseases. Knowing something about the formula of this Syrup, and watching its effects on the system, I can safely recommend it to the suffering parts of humanity.

M. C. SAWYER, M. D.

The subscribers therefore place this before the public as the most effective remedial agent known to the age. Testimonies as to its wonderful cures in general Diseases of the System, Impure Blood, Affection of the Lungs, which daily are given, (by those who believe it a duty to render them) prove it the great cure of disease and restorative to health ever known.

INFLUENZA AND CONSUMPTION.

It is indeed, a melancholy truth, that thousands fall victims to consumption every year from no other cause than neglected colds; yet we find hundreds, nay, thousands, who treat such complaints with the greatest indifference, and let them run on for weeks, and even months, without thinking of danger. At first you have what you consider a slight cough or cold; you allow business, pleasure, or carelessness, to prevent you from giving it any attention; it then settles upon your breast, you become hoarse, have pain in the side or chest, expectorate large quantities of matter, perhaps mixed with blood; a difficulty of breathing ensues, and then you find your own foolish neglect has brought on this complaint. If, then, you value your life or health, be warned in time, and don't tarry with your cold, or trust to any quick nostrum to cure you; but immediately procure a bottle or two of that famous remedy, Dr. WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY, which is well known to be the most speedy cure ever known, as thousands will testify, whose lives have been saved by it. For influenza it is the very best medicine in the world.

None genuine, unless signed I. BUTTS on wrapper.

Agents—Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy; Oliver Perkins, Braintree.

A sure cure for Dyspepsia and Costiveness.

HARRISON'S PEPERIALGICS have had 12 years' trial by the Medical Faculty and the public generally. This medicine is a Laxative, pleasant to the taste, and may be given to children. The Pepsitics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Costiveness, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Liver Complaint, Diarrhoea, Piles, Dropsy, Debility, Fatness, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation, Rheumatism, Pains in the Bones, Scrofula, Tic Douloureux, Worms, etc.

These Laxatives are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspeptic symptoms, Female Suppressions and Irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and no ingredient which may not safely be given to the most delicate female and under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for sealing persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Pepsitics prevents Fevers, Bilious complaints, and chronic or Acute Indigestion. They are admirably adapted to the complaints incident to the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.

These Laxatives are recommended by some of the best Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All afflicted with oppression after eating, or rising of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known to the world.

For sale in Quincy by Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Seth W. Foxall, 133 Washington street, Boston, General Agent.

The Boston Almanac for 1850.

THIS popular Annual, beautifully embellished, bound in cloth, and gilt, surpassing any previous number in the elegance of its style, and the value of its contents, will be published about the middle of November.

IT WILL CONTAIN

A NEW RAILROAD AND TELEGRAPH MAP OF NEW ENGLAND and the greater part of the State of New York. Over sixty Railroads are exhibited, and all the important places on the coast. It is finely engraved on Steel, and is alone worth the price of the whole work.

Calendars and Memoranda Pages, embellished with vignettes of THE TWELVE PRESIDENTS OF THE U. S., with brief Statistical Sketches imparting new information.

A complete CITY RECORD, being a systematic compilation of the various Departments of the Government, Recent Laws, Finances, PUBLIC IMPROVEMENTS, including the WATER WORKS, (with fine Engravings), a BUSINESS DIRECTORY of Boston, tables of Streets, Wharves, Bails, Buildings, Offices, Schedules, Railroads, Telegraphs, Expresses, Omnibuses; Maps and Postages at all parts of the world; Rates of Warfarage; Weather Tables; Local Events, &c.

State Government, Probate Courts, and Commissioners of Insolvency, in Mass.; U. S. Government, with members of Congress politically designated; General Events, during the past year of tumult and change; and many other useful Statistics.

This Almanac has 220 closely printed pages, and contains more than an ordinary one of 500 pages, which would sell for two or three dollars. For the Almanac, the price is only TWENTY FIVE CENTS, with a liberal discount at wholesale. It is retained at the Stores in New England, and the cities of the South and West.

The work will in future be conducted by the undersigned, agreeably to arrangement with the late S. N. DICKINSON, its former proprietor.

Orders sent immediately to Messrs E. B. MESSEY & CO., 29 Cornhill, or to Mr. THOMAS GROOM, 82 State Street, Publishers, will be easily answered.

POETRY.

THANKSGIVING SONG.

I remember, I remember, when I was a little boy,
How the last week in November always filled my heart with joy;
For then Thanksgiving always came with every kind
of pie,
And I for once could eat my fill, though father did sit by.

I remember, I remember, how on Monday they began,
With rolling paste, and chopping meat, and buttering
patty-pan;
And proud was I to pound the crackers, or to stone
the plums,
Or crack the shagbarks with flat irons that often cracked my thumbs.

I remember, I remember, how the two next busy days
Kept the kitchen in an uproar, and the oven in a blaze;
Till all was done and cleared away by Wednesday's evening skies,
And the proud tea-table smoked with four premoni-tory pias.

I remember, I remember, when the morning came at last,
How joyfully at breakfast I perceived it was not Fast;
But loaded plates and smoking bowls assailed our winking sight,
With "Johnny cakes" and chocolate hot, to whet
the appetite.

I remember, I remember, when the dinner came at
last,
How, like the kings of Banquo's race, the dishes
came and passed;
The exhausted line seemed threatening to run on till crack of doom, While still a voice from every stomach cried, "there yet is room."

I remember, I remember, how those lessons in geometry
Were sometimes mixed with questions upon Latin
and astronomy,
And in geography how John did once, in accents
murky,
Reply that Canaan was in Ham, and Paradise in Turkey.

I remember, I remember, then, how tight my jacket grew,
As if 'twould burst a button off with every breath I drew;
And so, to settle all, we boys kicked foot-ball down
in town,
Or went to see the marksmen try to shoot the tied hens down.

I remember, I remember—now—what happened after tea,
For we had then no grandfather whom we could go
and see;
I only know we went to bed when nine o'clock was rung,
—And you had better do the same now that my song
is sung.

SHAGBARKS

The barber shaves with polished blade,
The merchant shaves in constant trade,
The broker shaves on twelve per cent,
The landlord shaves by raising rent,
The doctor shaves in patent pills,
The taster shaves in pints and gills;
The farmer shaves in hay and oats,
The banker shaves on his own notes,
The lawyer shaves both friends and foes,
The pedlar shaves wherever he goes,
The official shaves the nation,
The parson shaves in man's salvation,
The wily churchman shaves his brother,
The people all shave one another.

ONE OF THE BOYS TO HIS LADY-LOVE

And when the reverend air shall say,
"My son take thou this daughter!"
I'd answer him in a fearless tone,
"I shan't do nothin' shorter!"

"Will you, my son, support and nourish
This flower I give to thee?"
I'd give my white kid gloves a flourish,
And answer, "Yes Sir-ree!"

ANECDOTES.

A lawyer built him an office in the form of a hex-agon or six-square. The novelty of the structure attracted the attention of the passers by, some of whom made a full stop and viewed the building very critically; the lawyer, somewhat disgusted at their curiosity, lifted up the window, put his head out and addressed them: "What do you stand there for like a park of sawy blockheads, gazing at my office; do you take it for a church?" One of them replied,
"Why, indeed, I was thinking so till I saw the devil poke his head out of this window."

"I think," said an old toper, commenting upon the habits of a young man who was fast making a beast of himself, "when a man reaches a certain point in drinking he is apt to stop." "Well, I think," said old Breeswax, dryly, "he is apt to stop before he reaches a pint."

"Well, Tom, does your girl continue to love you?"
"Yes, more than ever."
"Indeed! what evidence have you of that?"
"Why, she makes me presents."
"What has she given you lately?"
"Oh, she has a present of my picture which I paid five dollars for before I gave it to her."

"I once dreamed," said Pat, "I was with the Pope, and he said to me I drink? I think I, was a duck swim?—and seeing I was not, and the lemons, and the sugar on the sidewalk, I told him I didn't care if I took a drop of punch. Could or hat? and the Pope? Hat yet holiness, and he that he stepped down into the kitchen for the bilts' water, and before he got back I woke state up, and now it's distressing me that I didn't take it could."

A toper trying to persuade a bar-keeper to trust him for a threepent 'nup, is called pleading at the bar.

The Globe:
A Congressional, Agricultural and Literary NEWSPAPER.

THE approach of Congress calls out the Annual Prospectus of the Globe Establishment.
The time is full of interest. The coming in of a new Administration—the consequent broadening of a new policy touching the internal concerns of the country—the new and most important issues arising from the late vast accession to the public domain, and the great national objects associated with it—the impending difficulties in our relations with France, and the possible complication of our affairs with the troubles of Europe,—conpire to create great expectations as to the proceedings of the next Congress. The approaching Session will probably continue till late in the summer of 1850. The debates, from the agitation of so many questions of vital interest to the Republic, will draw forth all the talent of the National Legislature.
To bring its deliberations home to the people, on each succeeding day, while measures are maturing, it is effect, to bring the whole nation into council. The discussion, spreading from the Capitol to the remotest parts of the Union, forms a public opinion which results upon Congress, and controls its action.

To become a useful instrument, however humble,
to assist the working of the admirable machinery of our popular institutions, is the ambition of the conductor of the Globe. Extraordinary preparations have therefore been made to meet the increasing demands of our rapidly-improving and growing country for Congressional intelligence.

The Globe Press has already enlisted the ablest Reporters yet known to Congress; its materials and machinery are of the best sort; and the exclusive disposition of the individual who for so many years has made it his study to embody and publish the labors
of Congress, gives reason to hope that an advance will be made in the accomplishment of this undertaking commensurate with its increased importance. But the accumulation of expense, consequent on the additional number of Reporters required—the extra charge incurred in printing at night the debates of the preceding day—the vast addition made to the mass
published by the projected sessions and the fuller reports given—will render our enterprise a failure, unless Congress shall, for patronage, use to become a purchaser of such portion of the daily sheets issued,
as shall contribute to make the reports that fill them.
The undersigned has ventured on the preparation he has made for the next session, in the expectation that Congress will subscribe for as many daily sheets for each Member, at the subscription price, as will, in part,
defray the expense of reporting, and give them circulation as Congressional documents in their several districts. This will enable the Publisher to bear the charge of reporting, and it will give an impulse to the circulation of the Congressional Print, which, although the cheapest in the Union (the expense of preparation considered) will yet yield sufficient profit to make the system permanent.

John C. Rives having purchased the interest of F.
P. Blair in Jackson Hall—the printing office, manufacture and materials—becomes the sole proprietor thereof, and will give his exclusive attention to the Congressional Department of the Newspaper. F. P.
Blair retires from both concerns, with prayers for their permanent usefulness and prosperity.

The Globe will be published daily during the session of Congress, and weekly the remainder of the year, and will undergo distribution in the form of a Weekly Globe, a Congressional Globe, and an Appendix.

The Weekly Globe will contain Agricultural and miscellaneous articles; and will occasionally give debates of such importance as command universal interest.

The price of the Weekly Globe is reduced to one dollar, with a view to obtain a more general circulation. Subscribers who have hitherto paid $2 per annum, will be charged only $1 after the expiration of the first year.

The Congressional Globe will embody, as it has done for the last sixteen years, Congressional proceedings and debates exclusively.

The Appendix will embrace the revised speeches separately, and the messages of the President of the United States and the reports of the Heads of the Executive Departments.

The Congressional Globe and Appendix will be published as fast as the proceedings of Congress will make a number. Subscribers may expect one number of each a week during the first weeks of a session,
and two or three numbers of each a week afterwards
until the end of the session. Each volume will probably comprise two thousand royal quarto pages, of small type.

Complete indexes to the Congressional Globe and Appendix will be sent to subscribers soon after Congress adjourns.

Nothing of a political party aspect will appear in the Globe save that which will be found in the Congressional reports. A paper assuming to be an impartial vehicle for all sides, cannot maintain its character if the editorial columns reflect a party hue.

TERMS.

For one copy of the DAILY GLOBE (daily during the session of Congress, and weekly during the recess)
a year, $5 00

For the DAILY GLOBE for less than a year, at the rate of $4 cents a copy.

For one copy of the WEEKLY GLOBE for one year, 1 00

For one copy of the CONGRESSIONAL GLOBE
during the session, 3 00

For one copy of the APPENDIX during the session, 3 00

For four copies of either, or part of both during
the session, 10 00

For ten copies of either, or part of both during
the session, 20 00

The prices for these papers are so low, that advance payments are not indispensable to carry them on.
Postmasters who wish to obtain subscribers will be allowed twenty per cent, on the subscription prices for single papers, which they may retain when they send on the names of subscribers and the subscription money. The price for the Congressional Globe and Appendix to Clubs who take the copies, is so low, that no deduction can be afforded. Subscriptions may be remitted by mail, at our risk, in money or part in the section of the country where subscribers reside.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR
Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,
it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS
is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleas-
ing effort and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient
Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.
A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis,
to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory
of the Agent in this town.

E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECON-OMIST'S, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

—ALSO—
SHEET IRON, TIN AND COPPER WORK done to order,
Of the best Materials, and in a workmanlike manner?
Quincy, Sept. 1.

Cold Weather is Coming !!
GET A STOVE !!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE" is a remark on a mode, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook,—as all will bear
me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

New England Air-Tight Cooking Stove,
both by myself and many of my friends, for the past two years, I can, with the greatest confidence recommend it to my numerous customers, with the full assurance that they will find in its use every thing they could desire, and I agree that if any use this and do not find full satisfaction, I will take them back and refund the purchase money. I would invite all who are about purchasing this desirable article to call on the subscriber, (who is sole agent for this town) and examine the above mentioned Stove; where will also be found a GREAT VARIETY of other Stoves, both

COOK, PARLOR, OFFICE & SHOP STOVES,
among which is a new and elegant
Parlor Stove, for Wood or Coal, with or without Ovens.

—ALSO—FURNACES, BAKERS, BRITANIA & JAPANNED WARE; TIN AND SHEET IRON WORK Made to Order,
As good as the Best.

SATURDAY, DEC. 1, 1849.

"THE FUTURE SCHOOL OF AMERICAN PHILOSOPHY."

The Rev. Mr. Roddan of this town, delivered the seventh lecture before the Lyceum, selecting this novel and important theme for investigation. The subject implied an extensive and accurate acquaintance with the past, a lively experience and thorough knowledge of the present, and a deep forecast and vivid perception of those "coming events" which are beginning to "cast their shadows before" from the future. Where is the past school of American Philosophy? Where the present event, to which this young and vigorous Republic may point her aspiring scholar and her envious European neighbor? It is yet in the dim distance of the future. Is "day-spring" has not yet descended from on high, but its coming is foretold, and a new era will soon dawn upon this happy people's glorious past that sacred and happy hour recorded in scripture narration: "When the morning stars sang together, and all the sons of God shouted for joy." We need a pure, elevated and Christian "School of Philosophy." A school which shall elevate, ennoble and Christianize mankind, not a school of science, not a school of epics, but a school of refined morals, of intellectual health, and of Christian virtue. A national school of physical, mental and moral philosophy, which may explain not only what may be, but also what is at present. To teach what man should be upon the earth, and also what he may be in the enjoyment of heaven. To lead him, through nature, up to nature's God.

A philosophy not mysterious and unintelligible, but plain, comprehensive and rational; a philosophy fit to live with and fit to die with;—practical and liberal, which shall teach man to harmonize the facts and teachings of science with the principle and spirit of the bible. Which will teach him not to sneer at and persecute, but rather respect and emulate those gifted sons of science who can explain to us the mighty motions and harmony of the solar system, notwithstanding the prophet of ancient days "commanded the sun and moon to stand still and they obeyed."

Such was the character of the "future school of philosophy" which the lecturer portrayed in eloquent anticipation for America. We have materials sufficient, and artists abundant competent to lay ponderous foundations, and to erect stupendous columns of national philosophy, whose glorious summits shall tower far above the level of all surrounding edifices.

The comparison between different schools or sects of ancient philosophers was truthful and instructive, and the amount of historical research, and familiarity with the great principles of a sound philosophy, won for the lecturer "golden opinions from all sorts of men." We are at loss to say, which is most admirable, the solution of so important a theme, or the interesting, able and liberal manner of illustrating it which the lecturer exhibited. Such lectures as Mr. Roddan's are well calculated to gratify the taste and stimulate the intellects of such large, refined and discriminating audiences as our thriving Lyceum presents.

The value and importance of institutions of this character were noticed in the conclusion of the lecturer's remarks with peculiar truth and significance. A public school for lectures and debates offers many advantages for the improvement of its members and imparts a happy influence upon the community at large. Experience verifies this fact.

THE LARGEST HOG. Adam Curtis, Esq. of this town, had slaughtered on Tuesday last, by Jonathan Cook a hog, the neat weight of which was seven hundred and sixty-six and three quarters pounds. This hog was seven and a half feet in length, girthed seven feet and four inches, and measured twenty three and a quarter inches in thickness over the shoulders. The solid pork cut eight and a half inches.

The head and ears were quite small, the color of the pork exceedingly good—very fine mottled, and the skin extremely thin.

The hog was purchased from a drove of John Holbrook, on the 28th day of last April, and then weighed two hundred and twenty eight pounds. There was nothing at that time to distinguish it from other ones in the lot.

When this hog can be beat, we should like to know it.

SERIOUS ACCIDENT. On Monday of the present week, three boys of Mr. Alden French of this town, were very seriously injured by the accidental discharge of a pound of powder with which they were playing. Two of them are in a critical condition.

On the same day, an older son of the above gentleman, was much injured while at work by a stone which struck him under the eye.

Mr. French is a worthy and industrious citizen and with so great a calamity as has befallen him, he is deserving of the generous sympathy of his fellow townsmen.

OLD COLONY RAILROAD. The Board of Directors have decided that after the 1st inst, an advance of five cents will be made on all the fares established on the Old Colony Railroad and its Branches, excepting only fares from Station where no tickets are sold. An abatement of five cents will be made to all persons who shall purchase tickets at the at the Station before entering the Cars.

LEAD MINE. Workmen sinking a well in Mansfield, have discovered a vein of lead, of which specimens have been submitted to chemical analysis. The ore was discovered about fourteen feet below the surface.

AMERICAN ART UNION. This incorporated institution for the promotion of the Fine Arts in the United States is located in the City of New York and is one of the best societies for its objects ever established. The subscription is five dollars, and for this the subscriber is entitled—1st, to a copy of the engraving of YOUTH, from Cole's series of the Voyage of Life,—2d, to a copy of Darley's Outlines—universally admired,—3d, to a copy of the Illustrated Monthly Bulletin of Art, while he will also have a chance of drawing one of the many valuable paintings and statues which are to be distributed. Subscribers are therefore sure to receive an equivalent for their subscription money, and have a fair chance of obtaining a work of art worth many times that amount. The number of paintings is much larger than ever before, and includes some very valuable ones.

The paintings will be distributed on the 21st of December; those who intend to subscribe should therefore do so without delay, as an early subscription will facilitate the business of the institution. Subscriptions received by the authorized Secretary, at the office of the Quincy Patriot, who will furnish the engravings, etc., when distributed.

WILSON & CO.'S GREAT CHRISTMAS AND NEW YEARS BROTHER JONATHAN. This first sheet of pictorial illustrations for the coming Holiday has come to hand, and we must say that its merits are not over-estimated by the publishers. The large engraving of "General Taylor and his Cabinet," and the "Pleasures, Follies and Miseries of Christmas in New York," are valuable and spirited pictures, which will do credit to American Fine Arts. We understand that the designing and engraving of these two grand features of the paper cost over one thousand dollars. Altogether this number of the Pictorial Holiday Brother Jonathan outstrips any of its predecessors by great odds. The price remains as usual, twelve cents, or ten copies for one dollar.

WATER CURE JOURNAL. The December number has been received, and it is, as usual, filled with matter highly interesting and instructive. We cordially commend the work. The next number commences a new volume,—now is just the time to subscribe. The price is only one dollar a year.

VANITY. A young wife in Cincinnati lately received a draft for five hundred dollars from her husband who is gold digging in California, and before light she had spent half the sum in splendid dresses!

SHOOTING. The almost lifeless body of a man aged about sixty, belonging to Haverhill, was found in Lawrence, last week, having laid out all night in a terrible storm. He died before he could be carried to a shelter. Two empty rum jugs were found with him.

A COQUETING AFFAIR. The wife of Hon. Lewis C. Levin, of Pennsylvania, has just been tried in Baltimore for assault on a young merchant named Fite, and fined thirty dollars and costs. Fite wanted to marry a daughter of the lady, but was opposed by her. Fite was riding in a buggy, a short time since, on the public road, and overtaking the carriage of Mrs. L., drove up by the side of it and looked in, thinking that the young lady might be inside; not finding her there he held up and let the carriage pass. Mrs. L. took this as an insult, and ordered the footman to seize Fite, and he held him while she cowdled him. The man was fined ten dollars.

MYSTERIES. Dr. George Parkman, a person of great wealth, and advanced in years, has been missing from his house in Boston since Friday of last week. As he had with him a large sum of money it is feared he may have been foully dealt with. A reward of one thousand dollars has been offered for the discovery of his body.

CONGRESS. The first session of the new Congress will commence on Wednesday next. It will, in all probability, be one of unusual interest, in which questions of momentous character will be acted upon.

HOLDEN'S MAGAZINE. This publication for the month just commenced, maintains its former standing. We invite attention to the prospectus for the next volume, published in to-day's paper.

FROM EUROPE. The Caledonia arrived at Boston on Saturday last. The news is not of special interest, and nothing of importance has occurred in any part of Europe. Sir James Ross has returned from his Arctic expedition, with such information as leads him to believe in the safety of Sir John Franklin. The difficulty between Russia and Turkey remains as at the last accounts.

The steamer Canada arrived at Halifax on the 28th, and the news by her telegraphed to Boston. It is later, but nothing of much interest has transpired. Mr. Rives, the new American Minister, had an interview with the President of France, which passed off very satisfactorily.

BOSTON ALMANAC. This work for the ensuing year has been issued from press. The Boston Almanac has become an indispensable assistant to the business man, and the number for 1850 will compare favorably with those issued under the supervision of the late Mr. Dickinson. It contains a Map of New England, exhibiting the Railroad and Telegraphic lines now in operation, compiled and engraved expressly for the work. Call Gill & Co. at the Quincy Bookstore, have it for sale.

The Massachusetts Humane Society have expended about five thousand dollars for life boats and life preservers, along the coast.

It is hard for a man to amass riches by toiling in his shop while there is a leakage at home in his kitchen.

The Postmaster General has issued a circular regarding the transmission of letters and papers to California outside the mails, which subjects the persons sending them to a penalty of fifty dollars in each instance.

Hon. Willie Patton left New Orleans on the 13th ult. for Valparaiso, to assume the duties of Minister to the Republic of Chili.

It is a mean thing to ridicule an editorial when you have not two atoms of brain in your own skull.

A letter from California says, if men expect to make money out of the earth without severe labor they are woefully mistaken; of all classes of men those who pace streets and quarry alone are best adapted for gold diggers.

Arrangements have been made by the Post Master General, to express the President's Message east as far as Boston.

A woman recovered $4,500 from injuries received from being run over by a dray, in Philadelphia, a short time since.

A company of Germans have bought sixteen thousand acres of land in South Carolina, with the intention of establishing a settlement.

Some Yankee sailors, who landed in a boat on the coast of Tartary, were taken by the natives, exhibited through the country, and then set free.

Hon. John P. Bigelow has been re-nominated as the whig candidate for Mayor of Boston, at the approaching municipal election.

Among the passengers for California, on board a brig which sailed recently from Bath, (Me.), was a youth named Roger Northin, aged eighty four years.

The daughter of the Queen of Sweden, who is about to marry Louis Napoleon, has a dowry of four million pounds sterling.

The store of Royal W. Turner of Randolph was entered on the night of the 23d ult, and sundry articles of hardware and dry goods, with about three dollars in cents, taken.

A new barn, near the Old Colony House in Hingham, filled with hay, was destroyed by an incendiary fire on Tuesday night.

Eighty six persons, of both sexes and a variety of colors, manumitted by a family in Virginia, are on their way to Pennsylvania.

According to the Merchants Magazine, the banking capital of New York city is $24,000,000; of Boston, $14,000,000; of New Orleans, 17,500,000; of Philadelphia, 10,000,000; of Charleston, 5,000,000; of Providence, 8,000,000; of Baltimore, 7,000,000; of Nashville, 6,000,000; of Hartford, four, and Louisville, three millions of dollars.

The House of Assembly of Vermont, have passed a bill exempting the homestead from sale under an execution.

NOTICES

Henry D. Rogers, of Boston, will deliver the next lecture before the Lyceum, upon THURSDAY EVENING, Dec. 6, at the Town Hall, commencing at seven o'clock. Subject: "The origin of Volcanoes." The question for discussion will be—Ought Quincy to have a High School?

WILLIAM B. BURGEE, Sec.

A meeting of the "Union Board" will be held in the house of Mr. Joseph B. Baker, next MONDAY EVENING, at half past six o'clock, precisely. A full and prompt attendance is important.

JAMES M. WADE, Sec. of the Board.

The annual meeting of the Quincy Charitable Society, will be held at the house of Alexander Richards, Esq., on MONDAY EVENING next, at seven o'clock. It should be stormy, the meeting will be held the first fair evening afterwards.

S. A. BENT, Secretary.

The regular meeting of the Niagara Engine Company, No. 1, will be held at the Engine House, on MONDAY EVENING next at 8 o'clock.

JOHN F. PIERCE, Clerk.

INFLUENZA AND CONSUMPTION.

It is indeed, a melancholy truth, that thousands fall victims to consumption every year from no other cause than neglecting colds; yet we find hundreds, nay, thousands, who feel such complaint with the greatest indifference, and let them run on for weeks, and even months, without thinking of danger. At first you have a cold you consider a slight cough or cold; you allow business pleasure, or careless neglect, to prevent you from giving it any attention; it then settles upon your chest, you become hoarse, have pains in the side or chest, expectorate large quantities of matter, perhaps mixed with blood; a difficulty of breathing ensues, and then you find your own foolish neglect has brought on the complaint. If, then you value your life or health, be warned for time, and don't tattle with your cold, or trust to any quack nostrum for cure; but immediately procure a bottle of WILD CHERRY remedy, Dr. WISTAR'S BALM OF WILD CHERRY, which is well known to be the most speedy cure ever known, as thousands will testify, who have been saved by it. For influenza it is the very best medicine in the world.

None genuine, unless signed BUTES on wrapper.

The Peristaltics are gently laxative, and by their tonic qualities improve the digestive organs and invigorate the whole system. They cure Colic, Constipation, Headache, Dizziness, Sleeplessness, Jaundice, Oppression after Eating, Liver Complaint, Biliousness, Flatulency, Debility, Fatigues, Weak Stomach, Heartburn, Palpitation, Rheumatic Pains in the Bones, Scirrhus, The Bile, Leucorrhoea, Worms, etc., etc.

These Lozenges are excellent in all Nervous complaints and Dyspepsia symptoms. Female Suppressions and Irregularities, especially in the young. This medicine contains no preparation of Mercury whatever, and is the most delicate and safe under any circumstances.

This preparation is also put up in bottles for scolding persons, who should always have a supply. An occasional use of the Peristaltics prevents Fevers, Biliousness, and chronic or East India Diarrhoea. They are admirably adapted to the complaints attendant on the coast of Africa, Sumatra, West Indies and South America.

These Lozenges are recommended by some of the best Physicians in Boston, who use them in their families and general practice. All ailments with oppression after eating or rising of food will find great relief. They are the best medicine for children known.

This singularly efficacious Preparation may be relied upon as being pre-eminent in cases that have before revealed all other applications whatsoever. The distinguished professor Hayes, State Assayer of Massachusetts, says:

"I should have a preference over all others for cases in which the medicinal qualities of the Sarsaparilla are sought."

But what say others who stand as the abtest in the "healing art?"

[From Dixi Crosby, M.D., Professor of Surgery and Obstetrics, etc., at Dartmouth College, N. H.]

HANOVER, N. H. Feb. 22, 1847.

Dear Sir—In answer to your inquiry concerning the Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, as prepared by the Society of Sarsaparilla in Canada, N. H. I would say that I have long been familiar with the preparation, and have always recommended it from my personal knowledge of those concerned in its preparation, which to me is proof that it is just what it purports to be.

Dr. Thomas Corbett, Sarsaparilla, N. H. Jan. 20, 1847.

Having directed and used the Compound Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla, prepared by the United Society of Sarsaparilla in Canada, I confidently recommend it to the profession as a valuable auxiliary in the treatment of scirrhus, and diseases of the Liver. I also consider it an efficient remedy for the cure of a variety of cutaneous diseases. Knowing something about the formula of this Syrup, and watching its effects on the system, I can safely recommend it to the suffering parts of humanity.

The subscribers therefore place this before the public as the most efficient remedial agent known to the age. Testimonies as to its wonderful cures in general Diseases of the System, Impure Blood, Affection of the Lungs, which daily are given, (by those who believe it a duty to render them) prove it the greatest cure of disease and restore us to health ever known.

Revolution in Periodical Literature.

HOLDEN'S

Illustrated Dollar Magazine.

SINCE the death of the proprietor of this popular Magazine, the property has passed into the hands of the subscriber who will continue to publish it at the Publication Office, No. 109 Nassau St., New York.

THE NEW VOLUME.

To be commenced on the 1st of January, 1850, will comprise many important improvements, which, it is believed, will render the Magazine one of the best periodicals published in the country, as it certainly is the cheapest. Among these improvements will be new and beautiful type, fine colored paper, a lighter or doer of illustrations than those heretofore given, and contributions from some of the most noted writers in America. It is the aim of the proprietor to publish a Popular Magazine, adapted to the wants of all classes of reading people in the Republic, which shall be both instructive and amusing, and free alike from the grossness of the day, and from the vapors of the past. Ladies' Magazines. The new volume will consist of Original Drawings engraved on wood by the best artists, and of the most beautiful and valuable PERMANS and VIEWS OF REMARKABLE PLACES, illustrated by pen and pencil. A strict revision will be exercised, so that no inferior article, or word, shall ever be admitted, so that it may be solely the province of the most refined and useful literature. From the business and literary connections already established, the best assistance that the country can afford will be secured for completing the plans of the publisher, and nothing will be wanting that simple economy, resources and watchful industry can obtain to make the Magazine the

Leading Literary Periodical of America.

The extremely low rate at which it is published precludes the hope of profit, except from a circulation greater than that which any literary periodical has ever yet attained; but, with the new volume daily opening for the circulation of works of merit, its constantly increasing popularity, and the superiority of its literary and artistic attractions to those of any other work now issued, the proprietor fearlessly engages in an enterprise which will be sure to benefit the public, if it should not be a home for him.

The Magazine will be under the editorial charge and supervision of CHARLES F. BRIGGS, who has been connected with it from the beginning.

The "Patriot" contains a series of Biographical Sketches, accompanied by well engraved Portraits of prominent Divines of the American Church, which have formed a conspicuous feature of "Holden's," and will render it of peculiar value to religious people of every denomination.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

STOP AND PAUSE.

An old man sat in his easy chair,
In his easy chair, in his easy chair,
An old man sat in his easy chair,
A trying to drive away dull care,
With his tankard by his side.

Says he—my son, will you take a nip?
Will you take a nip? will you take a nip?
Says he—my son, will you take a nip?
I'll warrant it prime—'tis the best of flip—
Then pass it round to your bride.

The young man did as his father said,
As his father said, as his father said,
The young man did as his father said,
Then off in haste he shuffled to bed,
For his tankard and he got drunk.

They went to bed and scratch'd and fought,
And scratch'd and fought, and scratch'd
and fought,
They went to bed and scratch'd and fought,
And scratch'd away as nobody ought,
And show'd their flip-pant punk.

The morning came, they were half asleep,
They were half asleep, they were half asleep,
The morning came, they were half asleep,
The wife got up to mutter and weep,
The man got up to drink.

Says she—my dear, you had better not,
You had better not, you had better not,
Says she—my dear, you had better not,
If you don't quit now you may prove a sot,
Before you touch it—think.

He stop'd to think—'tis a precious rule,
'Tis a precious rule,—'tis a precious rule,
He stop'd to think—'tis a precious rule,
Says he—your're right, 'tis playing the fool,
For drink makes me vile and poor.

'Tis plain if a man would stop and pause,
Would stop and pause, would stop and pause,
'Tis plain if a man would stop and pause,
He'd see that effort must follow the cause,
And would vow to drink no more.

F. M. ADLERSON, Weymouth.

ON LEAVING A SCHOOL.

And now, fond schoolmates, I must bid adieu!
No more to tread this pleasant walk with you;
No more together shall we hail the morn,
In this fond place, which soon will be forlorn.

Till many a sun shall rise and disappear,
And time roll on another welcome year,
May we remember well what we've been taught,
Nor let our time be wholly spent for naught.

Our youth is like a meteor of the night,
Which spins and glides, but soon evades our sight,
Should we let slip the hours of youth away,
Age unimproved, will bring a dismal day.

O let these thoughts within our hearts long dwell,
And once again I'll bid you all farewell!

ADDIE.

THE FARMER.

Who makes this barren earth
A paradise of wealth,
And fills each humble hearth
With plenty, life and health?
Oh! I would have you know,
They are the men of toil—
The men who reap and sow—
The tillers of the soil.

ANECDOTES.

Be careful how you drink, or you'll wash the color from your cheeks," said a gentleman, at a fashionable party, as he handed a glass of water to a lady. "There is no danger of your ever taking water enough to remove the color from your face," was the good-natured retort. She rather had him, there.

"Willey," said a dozing parent at the breakfast table, to an abridged edition of himself, at a fashionable party, as he handed a glass of water to a lady. "There is no danger of your ever taking water enough to remove the color from your face," was the good-natured retort. She rather had him, there.

A boy having been praised for his quickness of reply, a gentleman observed, "when children are so keen in their youth, they are generally stupid when they advance in years." "What a very sensible boy you must have been, sir," replied the child.

A Scotch pupil being asked "who David was that killed the muckle giant?" replied that he was the son of Jesse, and that Jesse was the flower of Dumbland.

"What's that air thing?" inquired Ephraim Gould of the conductor of the railroad train in which he first came to Boston. "It's a snow shovel, to clear off the track in winter." "Why, you don't mean to say that you shovel all the snow off from yer trons, dew ye?" "Why don't you put yer lokerrotiv and your carriages on runners?"

A young lady was told by a married lady, that she had better precipitate herself off the Niagara Falls, into the basin beneath, than marry. The young lady replied: "I would if I thought I could find a husband at the bottom!"

"Who can paint like nature?" exclaimed a young lady as she held a copy of "Thompson's Seasons" in one hand, while the other was clasped by her enraptured lover. "Ah! what soul there is in that passage!" who indeed can paint like nature? "You can!" shouted her young brother, who had been peeping in at the window, "you're just the girl that can; you're painted like all nature now!"

A poor cornet having got his skull severely fractured was told by the doctor that the brain was visible, on which he remarked, "Do write to tell my father, for he always swore I had none."

Cold Weather is Coming !! GET A STOVE !!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE" is a remark once made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook, as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

MISCELLANY.

THE LION HUNTER.

"Dear father, you had better let me write for Harry; I know he will come, and you have been so much out of spirits lately, that his presence is really necessary. Do let me send for him."

"No, Alice, your mother dislikes him so much that I fear she would scarcely allow him to enter the house; we must wait till the fall, and then I shall visit Boston myself."

All her persuasions were vain. Alice could not gain her father's consent, and Harry was not invited to visit "Mount Pleasant."

Alice Roberts was an only child—her mother had died in giving her birth, and after many years her father had married again. His second wife was a shrewd woman, and a soi-disant blue—which fact is sufficient to explain to the reader the state of Mr. Roberts's household—he was hen-pecked!

I don't know why it is, but it seems almost impossible to find a woman who is a "literary lady," who has not some tinge of the virago in her disposition. When I say that this is the case with literary ladies, I wish to be understood as not meaning the really educated female, but the so-called blue stocking. The lady who prides herself upon writing sonnets and tales, and whose servants must be conversant with the novels of the day—that is the "genius" to which I allude.

Such was Mrs. Roberts, she ruled her husband with a rod of iron; her step daughter was continually exposed to insult and mortification. Henry Jones, the accepted lover of Alice before her father's second marriage, was driven from the house; his name was even interdicted in her presence.

Henry was a noble fellow. He had received a collegiate education, and was now engaged in the practice of law in his native city. Alice was idolized by him; she had been his playmate in childhood, his "sweetheart" in ripening youth, and his intended wife when he was nineteen years old. No one regretted Mr. Roberts's unfortunate marriage more than Harry, and when he learned that Mrs. Roberts had prohibited his presence, his grief and anger knew no bounds; but it was no easy task to prevent the lovers from meeting, and until Mr. Roberts left Boston, to reside in his pretty "cottage orne," Harry and Alice found numerous opportunities for holding "sweet converse" together. They parted, promising to remain constant to each other, and to write often. Need I say how well the promise was kept?

Mount Pleasant was a beautiful place. The cottage was situated on the summit of a hill which overlooked a large tract of country, with fields, meadows, and woods intermingled. A little stream wound its way amongst the green meadows, and passed within a few rods of the foot of the hill; a large garden also, stocked with the rarest plants, surrounded the house, and a grove of old oaks cast their cool shade over the course by which you approached the dwelling of sweet Alice.

Alice and her father were returning from their usual evening walk, when the conversation at the opening of our story occurs. They soon arrived at the house, and had scarcely seated themselves in the parlor, when they were summoned to tea by Mrs. Roberts.

Mrs. Roberts was in excellent humor; she chatted so pleasantly that her auditors were really astonished, and wondered what could have happened to make her so good-natured. They were soon enlightened, for she was unable to hold back the good news, which she had to communicate, any longer, and told them that she had received an invitation from Mrs. Johnson, one of her "dear friends," to spend the evening with her, and that Count Fleurus, a French nobleman, intended to honor the "soiree" of Mrs. Johnson with his presence. Alice and her father readily expressed their sense of the

Mr. Johnson and his wife were great lion hunters; every man who came to the village in which they resided was, if he had any kind of a title, at once pounced upon and made a lion of; but a nobleman was a perfect god-send; they could have fallen down and worshipped him. It is true that Mr. Johnson had once been "bit" by a pretended German Baron, who borrowed a considerable sum of money from him, which he never repaid, and turned out after all to be nothing, but this only increased his taste for lions, and now he had, as he thought, met with great good fortune in the shape of the gallant Count Fleurus.

"Oh! my dear madam, I am rejoiced to see you; you look charming. Come in. The Count has come, and I want to introduce you to him," and Mrs. Johnson seized her "dear friend," and fellow "bas bleu" by the arm, and walked off with her to see the lion of the evening. The introduction was soon completed, and Mrs. Roberts and the Count were great friends.

The Count had heard of Mrs. Roberts, the charming authoress of the poems in the country newspaper; he had heard her much spoken of in his country, and could assure her that her great merit was duly appreciated.

"Indeed!" returned the lady, "I did not know I was so highly honored."

"Oh, yes, madame, you are far well known; I read your piece—what do you call it? oh, 'The Dying Sparrow.' Ver' fine! better than Byron; I never like anything so much. Oh, you great genius, madame; you have great deal of wit."

"Ah Count, you flatter me."

"No madame, I speak from my heart; I do flatter you; but why do you stay here? these people don't understand you; you hide your light under a bushel; go to Paris; there you will be a great person; you can never be appreciated here!"

"That's true, Count; but then I cannot go away. My husband is so ignorant, and as you say, these people don't understand me! Oh! I live a horrid life."

Mr. Roberts now came up to be presented to the Count, and the conversation was broken off for a time. The Count seemed to be well pleased with Mr. Roberts, and readily accepted the invitation to spend the next day with him.

The party broke up early on account of the Count's being much fatigued by his journey. Mrs. Roberts had the honor of being handed to her carriage by the "lion," and went home perfectly delighted with her visit.

The next day the Count appeared about dinner time at Mount Pleasant. He was received with open arms by the "literary lady," who ushered them into the drawing room where her husband and Alice was seated. And from that time the lion became the frequent guest of Mr. Roberts, borrowing money from him made love to the lady, and was soon the perfect ami de la maison.

About a week after his first visit, Mr. Roberts was walking in the garden with his daughter. They had reached a retired portion of it, near an arbor which had been covered by vines reared by the little hands of Alice, when they heard the sound of voices issuing from it. They approached and heard some one say:

"Why do you live with that old fool? Come with me to France; there you will find people of talent and rank can understand you—who can appreciate your genius."

"But, count, replied the other, 'Will it do for me to leave my husband?'"

"Why not? you tell me you have a thousand dollars a year settled on you—and then your jewels! why you will be a great lady in my country. We can go to the hotel, and you can write a letter to Mr. Roberts, and then we will start for la belle France."

"Ah, Count who can resist you? Yes! I'll leave this old curmudgeon and his mix of a daughter, and go with you."

"Come away, Alice, don't let them see us, or they may not keep their word. I declare, I'm so glad I wouldn't have missed this for a fortune."

They moved away accordingly, and soon after Mr. Roberts had the pleasure of seeing his wife leave the house with the Count.

Soon afterwards, Mr. Roberts went towards his wife's boudoir, to see if Alice was there. He found all of the drawers and closets open, and their contents gone.

"No matter," said he, "she might have taken everything in the house, so that she took herself off."

Not finding Alice in the house, he strolled through the garden towards the arbor in which the Count's short courtship had taken place. Imagine his surprise when he saw Count Fleurus kneeling at the feet of Alice! He rushed through the door, and was about to strike him with his cane.

"Confound you, sir!" he said, "couldn't you be satisfied with the old woman, you rascal, to try to make my daughter run away too, and he raised his stick."

"Oh, father!" exclaimed Alice, "don't strike him: it is Harry!"

"Yes sir!" said the Count, pulling off his false whiskers, wig, and mou-tache, "it is Harry Jones indeed. I have cleared your house of one trouble, and now I hope to see you enjoy many years of happiness."

"Ah, Harry," replied the old gentleman, seizing his hand, while tears of joy rolled down his cheeks, "I always said you were a true friend, and now you have proved it. But tell me how you managed all this for me."

"Why, sir," replied Harry, "the credit belongs entirely to Alice. She arranged the plot how I was to disguise myself as a Frenchman, how I should gain admittance to your house, and how I must make love to Mrs. Roberts. Thank Heaven, it all succeeded, and now you have nothing to fear from your wife. You will find a letter from her for you at the house, which will explain her intentions."

In a few weeks after the events just recorded, Henry Jones and Alice Roberts were married—of course.

SERVING A WRIT.

A good natured generous-hearted fellow was Sam Brown; a great favorite of the girls, and generally liked by his acquaintances. Diffident and bashful in his manners, he moreover, had a way of getting into any quantity of scrapes, and committing innumerable blunders. The faculty with which he involved himself in a difficulty, was only equalled by the awkwardness with which he extricated himself. Sam is not a professional man—far from it, yet he is well known as "the doctor."

The manner in which he attained that honorable prefix to his name, is a matter well worth the relation.

Some time ago, Sam was elected constable of a township somewhere in Missouri, and it appeared that his evil genius followed him wherever he went. He never did any thing right but by mistake, and then in attempting to rectify the mistake, he always got wrong again. Sitting one afternoon, in his little ten by twelve office, intently engaged in speculating upon the probable ruin and eventual destruction of his country provided Gen. Taylor was elected, (Sam was a democrat,) he was startled by the abrupt entrance of Mr. Detinue, one of the three lawyers who enjoyed the extensive and lucrative practice of the village of M.

"Got a writ for you, Sam," said Mr. D., in a very business like and therefore unusual tone and manner. "Must be served right off—not a moment to be lost. It's on Will Smith, and he you know has gone east so you will have to leave the copy with his wife. Don't make any mistake Sam." With these remarks, the professional gentleman bustled out of the office, and hurried along the streets as if he had two or three judges and any quantity of clients waiting on his movements.

In a few moments Sam issued from his den, and after a short walk, arrived at the door of Mr. William Smith's dwelling. In answer to his official knock, a remarkable red-headed young lady, with one eye that looked up the street, and with another that looked down, asked him to walk in.

"Is Mrs. Smith at home?" asked Sam, as he sat down on the edge of a chair.

"Certain, sir, I'll tell her you've come, and away went this specimen of 'lovely woman'."

"Tell her I've come," mentally ejaculated Sam. "I wonder how she found out who I am. She's another Venus di Medici. She's seen me before, certain, but I never saw her, and what's more—"

What the more was, remains a mystery, for the door opened; and Sam was asked to "walk up stairs."

"But can't Mrs. Smith come down; asked Sam, 'I only want to see her a minute.'"

"Come down!" said the Venus, in astonishment. "why Missis couldn't think of it."

"Well, your Missis is confounded stiff, I'm thinking, muttered Sam, as he arose from his seat and followed the servant up stairs."

"This way, sir," said the servant, as Sam stopped at the head of the stairs—that's the sitting room, sir; this is Missis' sleeping chamber."

"The d—! it is!" muttered Sam, "I wonder if I'd better go in—I'll bet I'll get in some scrape as usual."

No time was left for deliberation, however, for the door was already opened, and in a moment he was in the room, and the door quickly closed.

The chamber was quite dark, the blinds being closed, and the curtains drawn.

"Mrs. Smith is not here," said Sam, as he strove to distinguish objects in the partial obscurity.

"Oh, yes! she's in bed, you know. Sam didn't know any thing about it."

"She ain't sick, is she? he asked."

"Oh, yes! You don't think," asked the girl, in a half hesitating half confidential tone, as how there's much danger, Doctor, do you? Missis thinks it taint twins this time."

Had a thunder bolt fallen at his feet, Sam could not have been more astonished, as the light suddenly broke upon him.

Some confounded mistake—I ain't—a doctor! he stammered as he retreated backwards. Stumbling over a chair, he finally gained the door and rushed down stairs, overturning in his course a worthy disciple of Galen who had just arrived.

"Hello! why what's the matter Sam!" cried the man of physic, as he gathered himself slowly up, at the foot of the stairs.

"I'll be hang'd if I know," was the reply, "how should I? I ain't a doctor!"

The girls look slyly at each other, and smile demurely, whenever Sam's name is mentioned with the title of doctor prolixed.—St Louis Revue.

TO FEED HORSES. Horses should be fed with cut hay among their oats. Never let horses' feed get sour, nor feed musty hay. The beast should be fed like his rider.

STOVES.

All experience has demonstrated their debilitating influence upon the nervous system; and nothing is more true than that the mind sympathizes with the body in all its derangements. Our old men remember when the aggregate of good health was far above its present standard; when men and women could endure twice the fatigue that they can now; and when consumption, the present scourge of the north, New England in particular, was almost unknown or existed only as a slow disease, that had to outlive with life for many years before its strong victim succumbed to its power. It has been thought that the bad health and constitution of our farming population, particularly the female portion of farming families, are owing to the change of diet. There is no truth in the idea. Farmers live as judiciously now as they did fifty years ago. In our mountain towns, among the primitive hills and pure air of Vermont, all over New England in fact, the population are better fed and better clothed, are subjected to less injurious exposure, and are called to bear less prostrating fatigue, than in those "good old times, a hundred years ago." Yet, where the pure air roves freshest, where the dark wings of miasm never come, all along the beautiful green mountain ridge, through Vermont and Massachusetts, do we find consumption doing its deadliest work, and an aggregate of female invalids that can hardly be equalled in any miasmatic valley in the far south-west.

It is in vain to look for the cause of all these evils in anything but the atmosphere of the dwelling. The food is wholesome, the air as pure as any in the world, and the water as good. The simple statement of the case is, the houses are made too close, the rooms are kept too hot, and the grand ventilator—the chimney—is closed. The evil is insidious, and in the manner of its approach should be a warning. A reference to experience will show, that when the stove was first introduced, the heat was intolerable. Afterwards it became agreeable; then it was found necessary; still further, on the heat was raised, until at last, the weakened and relaxed skin shrank with dread from a breath of cold air, and all stirring from the room was forbidden on penalty of a cold.

The difference between the atmosphere out and in doors made the transition always attended with danger. Every physiologist, and every common observer, understands the intimate sympathy that exists between the skin and the lungs; and here, at this point, is where consumption and other similar and dissimilar evils step in, and find prepared for them a house, swept and garnished. Here lies the secret of mountain diseases the erysipelas, slow fever, rheumatism, &c., &c.

We by no means propose the abolition of stoves. They form a prominent part of family economy. The poor cannot do without them, nor will the rich. The fire and the damper should in all be controlled by the thermometer. This little instrument should be in every house. Again, free ventilation, that shall secure to every room good pure air, is absolutely indispensable; and still further, a proper amount of cold bathing and friction, to enable the skin to retain its tone, should be observed by every individual who spends the winter in doors.—Springfield Republican.

A WOMEN'S OPINION.

As a general rule, we know that men have, by nature, a superiority in strength which enables them to go through labors and dangers, mental as well as bodily, from which females should be exempt; and that, by education, they are qualified for exercising the several trades or professions by which they are to maintain their families. On the other hand, women are endowed (besides all the graces and amiabilities of the sex) with a superiority of quickness, tact, and delicate discernment in all the every-day affairs of life. In all these therefore, the husband should be guided by his wife. And this shows the wisdom of our ancestors in making the husband "endow with all his worldly goods" the wife he has chosen. The wife is dependant on the husband, and clings to him for support, just as hop plant clings on its pole, and the sweet pea on the sticks to support it, and as the vine in Italy was, according to the language of the poets, "married to the elm." But if you could conceive a hop-pole, or a pea-stick, or an elm, imagining that those plants were put there on purpose for its adornment, you would tell them that this was quite a mistake—that the climbers were cultivated for the flowers or fruit—and that the stakes are placed there merely for their sake, and must not claim any superior dignity or worth over the plants they support. Now just such is the office of the husband; and this state of things is what people approach to more in proportion as they advance in civilization. Among mere savages the wife is made to yield to brute force, and is a mere drudge; in barbarian countries women are shut up; in more civilized countries, they are left free, and have more control.—A Malron's advice to a Young Married Lady.

"REPENTANCE." The only perceptible change in the moral conduct of many people is on their deathbeds, when the chance can be of no use to the world. It is then for the first time that the begin "to prepare," (as they call it) for death, talk of repentance and amendment and the precious blood of Christ, and under the guidance of their spiritual advisers, die saints and go straight to heaven; though their course of conduct while they were in active life, if thoroughly examined, one would be puzzled to discover in what their great virtues consisted.

THE BLOOM OF AGE. A good woman never grows old. Years may pass over her head, but if benevolence and virtue dwell in her heart, she is as cheerful as when the spring of life first opened to her view. When we look upon a good woman we never think of her age; she looks as charming as when the rose of youth bloomed on her cheek. That rose had not faded yet; it will never fade. In her family she is the life and delight. In her neighborhood she is the friend and benefactor. In the church the devout worshipper and the exemplary christian. Who does not respect and love the woman who has passed her days in acts of kindness and mercy, who has been the friend of man and God; whose life has been a scene of kindness and devotion to truth and religion. We repeat, such a woman cannot grow old. She will always be fresh and buoyant in spirits and active in humble deeds of mercy and benevolence. If the young lady desires to retain the bloom and beauty of youth, let her love truth and virtue; and to the close of life she will retain those feelings which now make life appear a garden of sweets ever fresh and ever new.

SNEEZING. The subjoined "pinch" from a paper full of snuff, in Leigh Hunt's "Commonplaces refreshed," will have the effect, we hope, to prevent mornen lovers from becoming snuff takers: "Turtledoves don't take snuff. A Kiss is surely a thing not to be 'sneezed at.' Fancy two lovers in the time of Queen Anne or Louis the Fifteenth each with snuff box, who have just come to an explanation, and who have unthinkingly taken a pinch, just at the instant when the gentleman is going to salute the lips of his mistress. He does so finds his honest love as frankly returned, and is in the act of bringing out the words, 'charming creature,' when a sneeze overtakes him. 'Cha Cha-Cha-Charming creature!' What a situation! A sneeze! O Venus, where is such a thing in thy list! The lady on her side, is under the like malapropos influence, and is obliged to divide one of the sweetest of all bashful and loving speeches, with the shock of the sneeze respondent! 'Oh Richard! Sho-Sho-Sho-Should you think ill of me for this!'"

RHAPSODY UPON BUCKWHEAT CAKES. "The buckwheat flour, so long delayed, has arrived in town in small parcels, and already on a few griddles the cakes are doing brown. What a slice of life would be gone were this, the choicest flour of our existence, to be taken from us. Now, while we write, the vision of the welcome winter breakfast smokes before us; and, instead of dipping the quill in the inkstand, we have sucked it dry with the fancy that it was a fork. But the vision remains. The little wheel, with its corrugated rim, lies daintily on the plate. Over its light brown surface is traced a lace-work, as light and frail as 'finest gossamer.' One delicate lump of butter, yellow and half-melted, wastes in its unctuousness in the centre while the golden cone juice falls in the midst, makes a ring for itself, which spreads slowly, towards the edge, until the admiring and tantalized gourmand cannot stand it any longer, but sticks his fork into it, folds it up with his knife, and bolts it at a mouthful. 'Waiter, hurry up the cakes!'"

CARE OF THE EYES. Looking in the fire is very injurious to the eyes, particularly a coal fire. The stimulus of light and heat united soon destroy the eyes. Looking at molten iron will soon destroy the sight. Reading or sewing with a side light injures the eyes as both eyes should be exposed to an equal degree of light. The reason is the sympathy between the eyes is so great, that if the pupil of one is dilated by being kept partially in the shade, the one that is the most exposed cannot contract itself sufficient for protection, and will ultimately be injured. Those who wish to preserve their general health by correct habits, give their eyes just work enough with a due degree of light.

"BY THE SKIN OF ONE'S TEETH." When a man has made a narrow escape from any dilemma, it is a common remark to say, that he has saved himself by the skin of his teeth." To put the matter forever at rest, so far as the propriety of the phrase is concerned, we quote a passage from the most splendid of all compositions. In the book of Job, chap. XIX, verse 20, it is thus written, "My bone cleaveth to the skin and my flesh, I am escaped with the skin of my teeth."—Eliza Cook's Journal.

PROGRESS. Progress is the touchstone of revolutions but it does not accomplish itself in a day, nor dart forth as the lightning, which illuminates space. Nations gain freedom by degrees. Liberty widens, and the base of power extends in proportion to the spread of intelligence. Every evolution of humanity brings on a new idea, and consecrates new rights; each has its destiny to fulfill. The laws ought neither to rush in advance nor pass abreast of manners, for then they would be chimeras or assails.—Leon Faucher.

HAPPINESS. The happiness of some depends on the good opinion of others; and their peace of mind, or rather their self-approval is regulated by the nods and winks and smiles, not only of those who are directly interested in their welfare, but of all with whom they happen to come in contact.

TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION.

The meeting was opened by a lecture from Mr. Joshua Bates of Boston, who chose for his subject "The enactment of a law to prevent truancy and irregular attendance." He evidently had given much thought and attention to his subject as was manifest by the able manner in which he discussed it. He pointed out the extent of absences, from our public schools, by reference to the authenticated statistics, as collected by the late Secretary of the Board of Education. 2d. He showed in a clear manner the evils of non-attendance. 3d. He spoke of the public sentiment as not being right, and of the unsuccessful labors of teachers and others to remedy these evils. 4th. He urged the necessity of a law, requiring children to attend a fixed period of time as the only true remedy. 5th. He gave us a plan of the proposed law. 6th. He argued that the law would be just. 7th. That it would be practicable. 8th. That the law would result in good; that the benefits would be of great utility to the State, even when considered in a pecuniary point of view.

This is a great subject, one worthy of the attention of every friend to the cause of education, and it was presented in an able and eloquent manner by the lecturer. It was something a little out of the usual topics discussed at such meetings, and, as a natural consequence, attracted universal attention. All admired it, and were ready to acknowledge the truth of the evils complained of, but as to the practicability of the means devised to remedy them there was much difference of opinion. Consequently a warm and animated debate followed which resulted in the adoption of the following resolution:

Resolved—That a committee of seven be appointed to petition the General Court to enact a law upon the subject of Truancy.

This, it will be perceived, has no reference to irregularity of attendance, but only to such cases as entire neglect on the part of parents or guardians to send their children to school. The utility of such a law, it would seem that no one could doubt. The necessity of it is equally plain. The number of vagrant children in our cities and large towns is not a few. Would it not be wisdom on the part of the State, to have them educated? Would it not be policy to have them brought into the school room, instead of strolling through our streets and about our wharves and in our shops? Ye lovers of good order and good society, think of these things and encourage the enactment of a proper and just law.

Mr. Bowers, of Springfield, delivered a lecture on the Common School System of New England. This lecture contained many good thoughts, though, as a whole, it lacked point, being too general in his remarks.

Mr. Northend, of Salem, gave a very useful and interesting lecture on "The teacher's field of labor and the kind of labors required to work in it." The lecture of Dr. Saxe, the present Secretary of the Board of Education, was an able and instructive address. His subject was, "The best mode of professional improvement as teachers." It was well conceived and eloquently delivered. All spoke of it in the language of praise and admiration.

Among the resolutions passed was the following: Resolved—That it is the duty of teachers to direct the public mind to the relations of the Common School System to our social and civil organization, by means of the public press.

In accordance with the designs of this resolution, a large committee was chosen, consisting of two or three gentlemen from each county, to whom was assigned the following duties:

1st. They are to confer with the editors of the various newspapers in their respective counties, as to securing a place in the columns of their papers.

2d. They shall be expected to publish as often as once in a month, and whenever it is possible, an article of such length as shall be assigned them, upon such subjects as in their opinion shall contribute most to the completion of the design of the resolution under which they are appointed.

3d. In case any communications shall be received by them, they shall at their discretion, secure their publication.

4th. They shall report to this Association at its next annual meeting.

Prof. Agassiz, of Harvard University, was present and addressed the Convention in a brief but eloquent address, advocating the importance of the study of Nature in our Common Schools, and the importance of sympathy between our professors in Colleges and teachers of the public schools. He also spoke in favorable terms, we might say in high praise, of the Massachusetts system, and expressed a warm sympathy in behalf of the objects of the meeting. His remarks were well received and duly appreciated, as the subsequent resolution will show. It passed unanimously.

Resolved—That this Association heartily concur in the views expressed by Prof. Agassiz, in relation to the cooperation of instructors of Colleges, with those engaged in Public Schools.

On the whole, Mr. Editor, the convention was one of the best of the kind we have ever attended, and no doubt if its members are but faithful to their trust, more especially to whom particular duties have been assigned, it will result in more than the usual good to the community.

THEOLOGY AND OLD FELLOWSHIP.

The Presbyterian Synod of Cincinnati, (Old School) which recently met at Springfield, Ohio, were occupied most of the time with the discussion of the merits and demerits of secret societies in general, and of Odd Fellowship in particular. The subject came up in the shape of an appeal from a member of the Presbyterian Church, from Greenfield, Highland County, Ohio, who was suspended because of his adherence to the Order of Odd Fellows. The final vote was for sustaining the appeal, 49: for sustaining the Session and Presbytery, 15. So Mr. Roan, the suspended member, was restored to his religious rights.—Exchange.

We are not about to volunteer a defence of the Order of Odd Fellows—they require none at our hands—their deeds are their best defence, but on reading the above paragraph, we could not avoid noticing the change that has come over the religious community in regard to this institution, within a short time. A few years since it was almost a heinous crime to be an Odd Fellow—now the Order boasts of many of the proudest pillars of the Church, even clergymen, those who lead the flock, and who are looked up to as beacon-lights to guide the famishing soul to the rivers of life and peace.

We may safely infer that this ingratiation of Odd Fellowship is the result of its beneficial qualities—its Christian qualities. The church had seen members of the fraternity cling to the bedside of a dying brother, with Christian love, fulfilling the sacred injunction, "Do unto others as ye would that they should do unto you." They had seen them performing the last sad offices of a brother, and with these distinct deeds of Christian charity directly before their eyes, it is not strange that the liberal portion of the religious community should look with favor and patronage upon the Order of Odd Fellowship.

True, many there are now, who look upon Odd Fellowship with a sneer, and taunt it with being "infidel," "dangerous," etc, but these are too often those who cannot tolerate a conflicting sentiment in a fellow being—all must believe as they believe to claim a place in the human family. Soon will this spirit of intolerance that remains to tarnish the otherwise fair escutcheon of American society, bend before the progress of our free institutions, and to possess an independent thought will be to be a noble man.

Odd Fellowship does not seek to pull down other institutions upon which to rear its fabric, but with a spirit of toleration, which an institution claiming divine origin might emulate with profit, it stands upon its own basis, firm in the consciousness that its principles are correct, and that the structure is beyond even ultimate demolition. It does not seek to disparage other institutions, but is willing that all should stand or fall upon their own merits; and we are gratified to see the church gradually, but firmly, yielding to its benign march. Odd Fellows have faults as well as other men, but a wise estimate of their principles would seem to yield the verdict that they are correct, if they are sometimes abused. Such abuses cannot alter their principles, no more than the dereliction of a member of the Christian church can alter the holy religion of Him who "spoke as never man spoke," and who said—"Do unto others even as ye would that they should do unto you."

Many will say, after reading the above, that we are an Odd Fellow, but we assure all such, that we are not, nor never have been. We have never seen "the goat"—not even his "tail."—New London Democrat.

QUINCY CHARITABLE SOCIETY.

An adjourned meeting of the Quincy Charitable Society, at the house of Lyander Richards Esq., on Wednesday evening, December 5th, the following officers were chosen for the year ensuing:

President—Israel W. Munroe.
Vice President—Lloyd G. Horton.
Secretary—Miss Ann E. Faxon.

Treasurer—Mrs. Cliff Rodgers.
Trustees—Charles A. Cummings, James M. Wade, Mrs. Benjamin Curtis, Miss Ann Bates, Miss Ann Curtis, Mrs. Elijah Baxter, Mrs. Charles A. Cummings, Mrs. Liezer Frederick, Mrs. John Faxon.

The meeting was adjourned to meet at the Lyceum Room, on SATURDAY EVENING, the 22d instant, at seven o'clock, where a full attendance of the members is desired, as business of importance remains to be done. The Trustees are requested to collect the assessments previous to the meeting, it being necessary to make appropriations at that time. Applications for assistance may be made to either of the officers of the Society.

SUSAN S. MARSH, Secretary pro tem.

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, DEC. 8, 1849.

THE BOSTON TRAGEDY. We mentioned in our last paper the mysterious disappearance of Dr. George Parkman of Boston. Very large rewards were offered for his discovery, and the strictest search was made and continued up to Friday of last week, when suspicious were excited against the Massachusetts Medical College in consequence of Dr. P. having been seen to enter that building, and was not seen to leave it. The College was searched and the mutilated remains, or what was supposed to be such, were found. Our readers have doubtless seen full reports of all the circumstances in the daily papers. The most intense excitement prevailed, and the subject has been the all-engrossing topic of conversation. Suspensions of the strongest kind were aroused against Prof. John W. Webster, under whose room the body was found, and he was arrested, and now awaits the action of the grand jury.

It is understood that important discoveries have been made among the papers of Professor Webster, Hon. Franklin Dexter, B. R. Curtis and E. D. Saffier, Esqs., have been retained as his counsel. The Jury of Inquest have not returned a verdict. They hold their deliberations with closed doors. The friends of Dr. Parkman being fully satisfied of the identity of the remains, had them interred with appropriate solemnities on Thursday.

Dr. Parkman was about sixty years of age, and was a man of great wealth. We have seen it stated that he was rather penurious, and had no particular compassion for poor people or those who happened to be his debtors; generally insisting upon the payment of the last farthing, and that without delay. He was son of the late Samuel Parkman of Boston, who died about twenty five years ago, leaving about one million of dollars to a family of eight children.

Prof. Webster is a son of the late Redford Webster, a wealthy and philanthropic citizen. He has been Professor of Chemistry in Harvard University for over twenty five years. He is probably sixty years of age, although his manners and appearance are those of a much younger man. He is a man of varied accomplishments and of elegant tastes. With a mild, kind and unassuming disposition, he had not an enemy; and his character was far from any stain. But with expensive habits and a love of luxury, he had no skill in the management of pecuniary affairs; consequently was generally in a state of great embarrassment.

Strike the cymbal, roll the tymbail,
Shout the Minors name aloud.

We have received a lively, spicy little sheet from Bath, (Me.) called the "Weekly Mirror," published by Messrs. Haines & Wing. It is exceedingly neat in typographical appearance, and its contents, both original and selected, evince talents of a high order and taste that would do credit to—ourselves. We see that our old friend "Lem" figures some in its columns, and every body knows he is "some pumpkins." We cordially extend our MASSACHUSETTS TEACHERS' ASSOCIATION. A meeting of this Association was held at Worcester on Monday and Tuesday of last week. It was well attended, by three hundred or more teachers, and from what we learn of the published accounts, we should say that more than the usual interest was manifested. The lectures and discussions were of high order and of a practical character, and, of course, well calculated to do good. Thomas Sherwin was chosen President, and among the several Vice Presidents, we notice the name of one of the teachers of this town.—George Newcomb, Esq., who has kindly furnished us with a summary account of its proceedings, which will be found in another column.

THE PHRENOLOGICAL JOURNAL. The December number contains a likeness of Amariah Brigham, M. D., late superintendent of the New York State Lunatic Asylum; also, a likeness of Sir John Franklin, with descriptions of character. This is the only Phrenological Journal in the country, and deserves the widest circulation. It is a work of great merit. A new volume commences in January, terms, one dollar per year. Address (p. p.) Fowles & Wells, Clinton Hall, Nos. 129 and 131 Nassau St., New York.

SHIPWRECK. A schooner belonging to Wiscasset, (Me.), with a cargo of bricks, went on shore on Plum Island last Monday night, and went to pieces. Female apparel, furniture, bedding, etc., drifted ashore; all hands are supposed to be lost.

CONGRESS. Both Houses of Congress met on Monday, a quorum of members being present. The Senate adjourned without transacting any business. The House balloted several times for Speaker, without effecting a choice, and then adjourned. The regular candidates were Mr. Winthrop, (Whig) of this State, and Mr. Cobb, (dem.) of Georgia. Mr. Winthrop was supported by the free-soil members. On Tuesday, four ballotings for Speaker were had, without making a choice.

No Speaker had been chosen at the last accounts, although fifteen ballotings had taken place.

FLORIDA. Official intelligence has been received at the seat of Government, announcing that it is highly probable that the Indians in Florida have concluded to accept the offers of our government, and emigrate to the West side of the Mississippi.

FASHIONABLE TAILORING ESTABLISHMENT. We would advise those in want of a well and fashionable made garment to call on Dinegan. He keeps a very large and carefully selected stock of Goods, and the best of workmen to make them up, and sells his garments cheaper than can be bought in the city. Call and see for yourselves.

ATTEMPTED ASSASSINATION OF MR. CLAY. A despatch from Washington, on the 6th inst., states that a man named Robertson, of Baltimore, who is supposed to be insane, attempted to make the life of Hon. Henry Clay, in the Senate Chamber. The man was arrested, and committed to jail.

LATER FROM CALIFORNIA. Steamer Crescent City, from Chagres, arrived at New York yesterday. She brings one million dollars in specie. The health of the miners is reported to be unusually good. The placer continues to yield gold in fair quantities. The average of each man is estimated at about ten dollars a day. The arrival of emigrants from Great Britain had been very large. There were a hundred British vessels in the harbor of San Francisco.

FIRE. On Thursday night last, a barn and several buildings belonging to Mr. R. Gleason of Dorchester were destroyed by fire. Several horses perished in the flames.

A barn at Jamaica Plains, owned by Charles A. White Esq., with its contents, was totally consumed on the same evening. It was no doubt the work of an incendiary.

JAMES M. WADE, Sec. of the Board.

[From the Boston Chronicle, Oct. 1, 1847.]

Consumption is the greatest curse of our northern latitudes. It is the blight of domestic felicity and the despoiler of beauty. It robs the cheek of its healthy bloom, the mind of its serenity, and the eye of its brilliancy. It wastes the form, dims the intellect, and plunges the victim into an early grave. The young and the old, the serious and the gay, the city belle, the country lass are alike its prey and its victims. Blessings on the man, then, whose genius and research furnished us weapons to bid defiance to this "Devil-dog" of the household! He merits the applause and gratitude of ages; he shall have ours, at least.

One of the most important discoveries of modern science, for the cure of pulmonary affections, is the BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, and the credit of its discovery is due to the celebrated Dr. Wistar. This valuable compound has restored thousands of sufferers to health. It is expectorant, tonic and demulcent, and is said to be a purely vegetable preparation. Under its magic influence the most obstinate coughs, colds and bronchial irritations disappear. We have used it and can recommend it, particularly at this season, when the great cause of disease, east winds, are so prevalent.

IR CORBETT'S HIGHLY

Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla.

It is an undeniable fact that no medicine ever bro't before the public, has proved so beneficial in cases of Disordered Blood, Liver Obstructions, Scrofulous Taint, Consumptive Habit, and all cutaneous affections, as that of Dr. Corbett's! The distinguished Professor Hayes says—"It ought to have a preference, as the formula exhibits the union of some of the best of our native medicinal roots and plants with substances of the highest repute as remedial agents, and does not include any metallic compound."

[But read what Druggists say, whose well known characters give full assent to its virtues.] "The Compound Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla, made by the United Society at Canterbury, is prepared with great care, and the increasing demand for it is positive proof of its good effects. It is now prescribed by most of the Physicians in the town and elsewhere, which is the best evidence that they give it a preference over any other preparation of Sarsaparilla offered to the public."

Since its introduction, its reputation has been constantly increasing, and its popularity extending in every direction, being recommended by most distinguished physicians. (See list of names.) J. C. AYER, Lowell. J. KIDDER, Co., Boston. S. L. GREENE, Weymouth. J. ALLEN & GALT, Concord. G. H. CARLETON & Co., Lowell.

DIED.

In this town 2d inst., of whooping cough, Lucia Anna, daughter of Mr. Rufus K. and Mrs. Ruth R. Trott, aged 3 months.

On the 6th inst., Miss Sarah Jane Rowell, aged 20 years and 2 months.

In Milton, 22d ult., of typhoid fever, Miss Elizabeth M., daughter of R. M. Todd, Esq., aged 16 years and 7 months.

The following lines of N. P. Willis, on the death of a young girl, are not inappropriate. Her presence, like the shadow of a wing That is just lessening in the upper sky, Lingers upon us—We can hear her voice—And for her step we listen—and the eye looks for her wonted coming—with a strange, Forgetful earnestness. We cannot feel That she will no more come—that from her cheek The delicate blush has faded, and the light Dead in her soft dark eyes, and on her lip, That was so exquisitely pure, the dew Of the damp grave has fallen! Who so loved Is left among the living? Who hath walked The world with such a winning loveliness, And on his brief journey gathered up Such treasures of affection? She was loved Only as idols are. She was the pride Of her familiar sphere—the daily joy Of all who on her gracefulness might gaze, And in the light and music of her way, Have a companion's portion. Who could feel, While looking upon beauty such as hers, Only as idols are. She was the pride The melting of a star into the sky While you are gazing on it, or a dream In its ravishing sweetness rudely broken.

A FRIEND.

LINES

Written on the death of Mr. Asa Colburn, who departed this life Nov. 25th, 1849.

Farewell, dear father! thou art gone,
Thy spirit now has fled;
Thy dust to the ground is laid,
And numbered with the dead.
But O, how solemn was the hour
When we watched thy parting breath,
And saw thy last last struggle,
And closed thine eyes in death.
Thou art in yonder graveyard laid,
But thy spirit is not there;
No, that has gone to God above,
Where saints and angels are.
Alas! how vacant is the place
Once occupied by thee;
And O how lonely are the hours,
Since thy face was no more seen.
Sleep on, sleep on, and take thy rest,
For nothing shall disturb thee now;
There's no disease upon thy frame,
No cold sweat on thy brow.
O may we meet again,
On Canaan's peaceful happy shore;
Where sickness and pain are never felt,
Where friends united part no more.

Revolution in Periodical Literature. HOLDEN'S Illustrated Dollar Magazine.

SINCE the death of the proprietor of this popular Magazine, the property has passed into the hands of the subscriber, who will continue to publish it at the Publication Office, No. 109, Nassau St., New York. THE NEW VOLUME. To be commenced on the 1st of January, 1850, will comprise many important improvements, which, it is believed, will render the Magazine one of the best Periodicals published in the country, as it certainly is the cheapest. Among these improvements will be new and beautiful type, fine colored paper, a higher order of illustrations than those heretofore given, and contributions from some of the ablest writers in America. It is the aim of the proprietor to publish a Popular Magazine, adapted to the wants of all classes of reading people in the Republic, which shall be both instructive and amusing; and free alike from the grossness which characterizes much of the cheap literature of the day, and from the rapidity of the so-called "Ladies' Magazines." The illustrations will consist of Original Drawings, engraved on wood by the best Artists, PORTRAITS OF REMARKABLE PERSONS AND VIEWS OF REMARKABLE PLACES, illustrated by pen and pencil. A strict revision will be exercised on every literary article, or word, shall never be admitted, so that it may be safely taken by persons of the utmost refinement, and read at the fireside for the amusement or instruction of the family circle. From the business and literary connections already established, the best assistance that the country can afford will be secured for completing the plans of the publisher, and nothing will be wanting that ample pecuniary resources and watchful industry can obtain to make the Magazine the Leading Literary Periodical of America. The extremely low rate at which it is published precludes the hope of profit, except from a circulation greater than that which any literary periodical has ever yet attained; but, with the new avenue daily opening for the circulation of works of merit; the constantly increasing population of the country; the cheapness of the Magazine, and the superiority of its literary and artistic attractions to those of any other work now issued; the proprietor fearlessly engages in an enterprise which will be sure to benefit the public if it should not enrich himself. The Magazine will be under the Editorial charge and supervision of CHARLES F. BRIGGS, who has been connected with it from the beginning. The "Pulpit Portraits," a series of Biographical Sketches, accompanied by well engraved Portraits of Eminent Divines of the American Churches, which have formed a conspicuous feature of "Holden's," will be continued in the succeeding Volumes of the Magazine, and will render it of peculiar value to religious people of every denomination.

THE FIFTH VOLUME will commence on the 1st of January next, but will be issued on the 15th of December. Each number will consist of 64 Pages, and Numerous Engravings. The Terms are

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR, in Advance; the Magazine will be plainly and carefully directed and sent by mail at the risk of the subscriber. As each number will be stereotyped, missing or lost numbers can be at any time supplied when ordered, but will be deducted from the time for which payment was received. Remittances may be sent at the risk of the Proprietor, provided a description of the bills are taken, and enclosed in the presence of the Post Master as evidence of the fact.

Five copies will be furnished for $4 and 20 copies for $15. Nos for the year 1849, excepting the month of January, will be furnished at 4 cents each, and Bound Volumes in cloth, with gilt edge, from July to December inclusive, at $1 each. Letters must be addressed to "Holden's Dollar Magazine, No. 109 Nassau Street, New York," and post paid in all cases. Wm. H. DIETZ, Proprietor. Dec. 1. 4w

QUINCY PATRIOT.

J. A. Holden, School St., Quincy, WOULD inform the inhabitants of Quincy and Brantree, that he has just received, and will be constantly receiving,

New and Suitable Goods for the Coming Season, his intention being to have always on hand A VARIETY OF FASHIONABLE GOODS, among which are to be found, a good assortment of German, French, English and American

BROADCLOTHS, of various Shades and Prices, suitable for DRESS, FROCK AND OVER COATS.

FOR SACKS AND OVRECOATS, Pilot, Devonshire Kersey, Tweeds, Codington and Castor Coths, suitable for men's or boys' clothes.

FOR PANTALOONS, New DOESKIN FABRICS, and other denominations of FANCY WEAVINGS, which he offers as particularly acceptable

He would also call attention to his AMPLE ASSORTMENT of

VESTINGS, of the most RICH and BEAUTIFUL STYLES, both as regards quality and pattern.

FURNISHING GOODS, Consisting of Caps, Stocks, Cravats, Bosoms, Collars, Flannel Shirts and Drawers. Also, READY MADE CLOTHING, at very low prices

It will be found that he has adopted the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, a mode which is considered as a guarantee against the fraudulent devices of disreputable dealers, as also against the sometimes interminable process of making a bargain. Should there be any who desire such a system, they may, by calling at his establishment, find reasons to alter their opinion. Customers are allowed to return every article which on trial is found to have been misrepresented. But we doubt if they will find occasion to do so.

He DOES HIS OWN CUTTING, which he flatters himself he has no need to boast of, inasmuch as it is now too well known to need any man's praise, and least of all his own. He invites the attention of such as expect

Punctuality and Good Workmanship, FOR CASH, such being his rule of business,—the REDUCED RATES at which he sells rendering any other mode impracticable. All who thus employ him, he is confident, will have good reason to be satisfied. Quincy, Oct. 13. 4f

POETRY.

SONG OF THE TOBACCO WORM.

With earlocks soapy and long,
With whiskers frizzled and red,
A loafer sat with a cud in his mouth,
A spitting and muttering, said—
Work—work—work—
These hands shall never pursue,
While I can obtain a long nine to smoke,
Or a plug of tobacco to chew.

And he spits—spits—spits,
When the moon is breaking bright,
Spits—spits—spits—
When Sol has climbed his height,
Spits—spits—spits—
With day's expiring gleam,
And supperless, falling asleep on a bench,
Keeps spitting away in his dream.

For in his dream he dreams,
It is by fate decreed,
That he is a great tobacco worm,
To extirpate the weed!
And so he works away
To make his conquest sure;
A free and enlightened citizen,
A snuffer, a smoker and chewer.

At market, church, or mill,
In business or in prayer—
Single coaches, cars and barber's shops,
Bar-rooms and every where—
He spits—spits—spits—
Evening, noon, and morn,
And snuffs, and pulls, and blows his nose,
As a fisherman blows his horn!

Sweethearts and wives, look here!
Is this the man for you,
Whose nose is only fit to snuff,
His mouth to smoke and chew,
Spit—spit—spit—
O, 'tis a nasty trick!
Enough to turn any lady fair,
Unless she be able to stomach a bear,
Or a loafer enveloped in whiskers and hair,
Abominably sick!

Ye dames who mean to wed,
Come listen to my lay—
Your charms from all tobacco worms
Forever turn away—
But if you wear the yoke,
With resignation wear it—
Nor sulk, nor scold, nor get the blues;
But if he snuffs, and smokes and chews,
Till pig-tail quids are over shoes—
Dear madam, grin and bear it!

MORAL COSMETICS.
Ye who would save features florid,
Lithe limbs, bright eyes, un wrinkled forehead,
From age's devastation horrid,
Adopt this plan—
'Twill make, in climate cold or torrid,
A hale old man.

Avoid in youth, luxurious diet;
Restrain the passions' lawless riot;
Devoted to domestic quiet,
Be wisely gay;
So shall ye, spite of age's fiat,
Resist decay.

Seek not in Mammon's worship pleasure,
But find your richest, dearest treasure,
In books, friends, music, polish'd leisure;
The mind, not sense,
Make the sole scale by which ye measure
Your opulence.

This is the science—this the science,
Life's purest, sweetest, best reliance,
That disappoints not man's ambition,
Whate'er his state;
But challenge, with a calm defiance,
Time, fortune, fate.

ANECDOTES.

A sailor was wounded in action and an Irish man-mate was ordered to hoist him on his back below. As he was bearing the man along in the smoke, Pat asked, "Where are you hit, honey?" "Lost my leg," was the reply—and no sooner uttered than another ball whipped off the wounded man's head. When Pat brought his burden into the cockpit, the surgeon swore at him for bothering him with a headless, lifeless trunk. Pat gazed astounded, and at last said, "Faith, then, what a fool I was to believe him; he told me 'twas his leg he lost, and not his head; but he was dead or alive, always the biggest liar that breathed."

Two nephews of the old Emperor of Austria, Ferdinand, were disputing upon a certain occasion in presence of their uncle who was considered as not possessing an over quantity of sense, and one of them growing angry, said to the other, "You are the greatest fool in all Vienna." "Young gentlemen," observed the sapient Emperor, "you seem to have forgotten my presence."

Sam—lived on the bank of the Delaware, and was a mighty hunter and a no less mighty fisher. He was plagued with a degenerate son, who manifested no predilection for his father's interesting pursuits. One day Sam's patience gave out entirely, and he exclaimed in the bitterness of his mortification—"Darn me, Tom, if you are not gettin' perfectly worthless; you'll neither hunt nor fish; I'll be hanged if I don't send you to school!"

A schoolmaster who was as fond of the use of his grog as of the use of his globe, was asked the difference between gravity and gravitation. "When I've drunk five glasses of grog," replied the pedagogue, "my gravity vanishes, and my gravitation begins to operate."

The freshmen at a College made themselves merry by the following conundrum—Why is the sophomore class, studying trigonometry, like the seniores and pherisers of old? Because it is a wicked generation seeking after a sine, etc. The sopho retorted by the following—Why is the freshman recitation room like that remarkable tree whose leaves quiver in the light breeze?—because it is an ass pen—(aspens.)

MISCELLANY.

UNFADING FLOWERS.

Thirty years ago, a small barefooted boy,
passed to admire the flowers in a well cultivated garden. The child was an orphan, and had already felt how hard the orphan's lot. The owner of the garden, who was trimming a border, noticed the lad, and spoke to him kindly.
"Do you love flowers?" said he.
The boy replied, "Oh yes. We used to have beautiful flowers in our garden."

The man laid down his knife, and gathering
a few flowers, took them to the fence, through the panels of which the boy was looking, and handing them to him said as he did so.
"Here's a nice little bunch for you."

A flush went over the child's face as he took the flowers. He did not make any reply, but in his large eyes as he lifted them to the face of the man, was an expression of thankfulness
to be read as plainly as words in a book.

The act on the part of the man, was one of spontaneous kindness, and scarcely thought of again; but by the child it was never forgotten.
Years went by, and through toil, privation,
suffering, both in body and mind, the boy grew up to manhood. From orphans like this come forth our most effective men. If kept from vicious associates, the lad of feeling and mental activity becomes ambitious, and rises above the common level. So it proved in the case of this orphan boy. He had few advantages of education, but as offered were well improved. It happened that his lot was cast in a printing office; and the young compositor soon became interested in his work. He did not set the type as a mere mechanic, but went beyond the duties of his calling, entering into the ideas to which he was giving verbal expression, and making them his own. At thirty-five he was the conductor of a widely circulated and profitable newspaper, and as a man, respected and esteemed by all who knew him.

During the earnest struggle that all men enter into who are ambitious to rise in the world,
the thoughts do not often go back and rest, meditatively, upon the earlier time of life. But after success has crowned each well directed effort, and the gaining of a desired position no longer remains a subject of doubt, the mind
brings up from the far off past most vivid reollections of incidents and impressions that were painful or pleasurable at the time, and which are now seem to have an influence, more or less decided, upon the whole after life. In this state of reflection sat one day the man we have introduced. After musing for a long time, deeply abstracted, he took up his pen and wrote
hastily—and these were the sentences he traced
upon the paper that lay before him;

"How indelibly does a little act of kindness performed at the right moment, impress itself upon the mind. We meet, as we pass through the world so much of rude selfishness, that we guard ourselves against it, and scarcely feel its effects. But spontaneous kindness comes so rarely, that we are surprised when it appears,
and delighted and refreshed as by the perfume of flowers in the dreary winter. When we were a small boy, an orphan and with the memory of home forever lost too vivid in our young heart, a man, into whose beautiful garden we stood looking, pulled a few flowers and handed them through the fence, speaking a kind word
as he did so. He did not know and perhaps never will know, how deeply we were touched by this act. From a little boy we loved the flowers and ere that heaviest affliction a child ever knows, the loss of parents—came upon us,
we almost lived among them. But death separated between us and all those tender associations and affections that to the hearts of children are like dew to the tender grass. We entered the dwelling of a stranger, and were treated thenceforth as if we had, no right
to have, no feelings, no hopes, no weakness,

The harsh command came daily and almost hourly, to our ears; and not even for work well done, or faithful services were we cheered by words of commendation.

"One day—we were not more than eleven years old—something turned our thoughts back upon the earlier and happier time when we had a true home; and was loved and cared for.
We were once more in the garden and among the sweet blossoms, as of old, and the mother on whose bosom we had slept, sat under the grape arbor while we filled her lap with flowers,
was re-forming itself in our young imagination,
that the incident to which we have alluded occurred. We can never forget the grateful perfume of those flowers, nor the strength and comfort which the kind words and manner of the giver imparted to our fainting spirit. We took them home, and kept them fresh as long as water would preserve their beauty; and when they faded and the leaves fell, pale and withered, upon the ground, we grieved for their loss, as if a real friend had been taken away."

"It is a long, long time since that incident occurred; but the flowers which there sprung up in our bosom are fresh and beautiful still.
They have neither faded nor withered—they cannot, for they are unfading flowers. We never looked upon the man who gave them to us, that our heart did not grow warm towards him. We knew not whether he be living or dead. Twenty years ago we lost sight of him;
but, if still among the dwellers of the earth, and in need of a friend, we would divide with him
our last morsel."

An old man, with hair whitened by the snows of many winters, was sitting in a room that was poorly supplied with furniture, his head bowed down, and gaze cast dreamily upon the floor.
A pale young girl came in while he thus sat
musing. Lifting his eyes to her face he said, while he tried to look cheerful.

"Ellen dear, you must not go out to-day."

"I feel a great deal better grandpa," returned the girl, forcing a smile. "I am able to go to work again."

"No, child, you are not," said the old man firmly; and you must not think of such a thing.

"Don't be too positive, grandpa." And as she uttered this little sentence in a half playful voice, she laid her hand among the thin gray
locks on the old man's head, and smoothed them caressingly. "You know that I must not be idle."

"Wait child until your strength returns."

"Our wants will not wait, grandpa." As she said this her face became sober. The old man's eyes again fell to the floor, and a heavy sigh came forth from his bosom.

"I will be very careful and not overwork myself again," resumed Ellen, after a pause.

"You must not go to-day," said the old man arousing himself. It is murder. Wait at least until to-morrow. You will be stronger then."

"If I do not go to-day I may lose my place.
You know I have been home for three days."

"You were sick,"

"Work will not wait. The last time I was kept away by sickness, a customer was disappointed, and there was a good deal of trouble
about it."

Another sigh came heavily from the old man's heart.

"I will go," said the girl. "Perhaps they will let me off for a day longer. If so, I will come back. But I must not lose my place."

No further resistance was made by the old man. In a little while he was alone. Hours went by, but Ellen did not return. She had gone to work. Her employer would not let her go away, feeble as she was, without a forfeiture of her place.

About mid-day, finding that Ellen did not return, the old man after taking some food went out. The pressure of seventy winters was upon him, and his steps were slow and carefully taken.

"I must get something to do. I can work still," he muttered to himself as he moved along the streets. "The dear child is killing herself,
and all for me."

But what could he do? Who wanted the services of an old man like him, whose mind
had lost its clearness, whose step faltered, and whose hand was no longer steady? In vain he made application for employment. Younger and more vigorous men filled all the places, and he was pushed aside. Discouraged and drooping in spirit, he went back to his home, and there awaited the fall of evening, which was to bring the return of the only being left on earth to love him. At night-fall Ellen came in.
Her face, so pale in the morning, was now slightly flushed; and her eyes were brighter than when she went out. The grandfather was not deceived by this; he knew it as the sign of disease. He took her hand—it was hot; and when he bent to kiss her lips, he found them burning with fever.

"Ellen, my child, why did you go to work to-day? I knew it would make you sick," the old man said, in a voice of anguish.
Ellen tried to smile and to appear not so very ill; but nature was too much oppressed.
"I brought home some work, and will not go out to-morrow," she remarked. "I think the walk fatigued me more than anything else. I will feel better in the morning after a good night's sleep."

But the girl's hope failed in this. The morning found her so weak that she could not rise from bed; and when her grandfather came into her room to learn how she had passed the night, he found her weeping on her pillow.
She had endeavored to get up but her head,

which was aching terribly, grew dizzy, and she fell back under a dispiriting consciousness that her strength was gone.

The day passed, but Ellen did not grow better. The fever still kept her body prostrate.
Once or twice, when her grandfather was out of the room, she took the work she had brought home and tried to do some of it while sitting up in bed. But ere a minute had passed, she became faint, while all grew dark around her.
She was no better when night came. If her mind could have rested—if she had been free
from anxious and distressing thoughts, nature would have had some power to react, but as it was, the pressure upon her was too great. She could not forget that they had scarcely so much as a dollar left, and that her old grandfather was too feeble to work. Upon her rested all the burden of their support, and she was now helpless.

On the next morning Ellen was better. She could set up without feeling dizzy, though her head still ached, and the fever had only slightly abated. But the old man would not permit her to leave the bed, though she begged him earnestly to let her do so.

The bundle of work that Ellen had brought home, was wrapped in a newspaper, and this her grandfather took up to read sometime during the day.

"This is Mr. T—'s newspaper," said he,
as he opened it, and saw the title "I knew
T— when he was a poor little orphan boy.
But of course he don't remember me. He's prospered wonderfully."

And then his eyes went along the column of the paper, and he read aloud to Ellen such things as he thought would interest her. Among others was a reminiscence by the editor
—the same we have just given, the old man's voice faltered as he read. The little incident, so feelingly described, had long since been hidden in his memory under the gathering dust of time. But now the dust was swept away, and he saw his own beautiful garden. He was in it and among the flowers; and wishfully looking through the fence stood the orphan boy. He remembered having felt pity for him, and he remembered now as distinctly as if it were but yesterday, though thirty years had intervened,
the light that went over the child's face as he handed him a few flowers that were to die and wither in a day.

Yes the old man's voice faltered as he read;
and when he came to the last sentence, the paper dropped upon the floor and clasping his hands together, he lifted his dim eyes upward, while his lips moved in whispered words of thankfulness.

"What ails you, grandpa?" asked Ellen in surprise. But the old man did not seem to hear her voice.

"Dear grandpa," repeated the girl, "why do you look so strangely?" She had risen in the bed, and was bending towards him.

"Ellen, child, said the old man, a light breaking over his countenance, as though a sunbeam had suddenly come into the room. "It was your old grandfather who gave the flowers to that poor little boy. Did you hear what he said?—he would divide his last morsel."

The old man moved above the room with his unsteady steps, talking in a wandering way, so overjoyed at the prospect of relief for his child, that he was nearly beside himself. But there yet lingered some embers of pride in his heart;
and from these the ashes were blown away, and they became bright and glowing. The thought of asking a favor as a return for the little act, which was to him, at the time, a pleasure, came with a feeling of reluctance. But when he looked at the pale young girl who lay with her eyes closed and her face half buried in the pillow, he murmured to himself. "It is for you—for you!" And taking up his staff, he went tottering forth into the open air.

The editor was sitting in his office, writing,
when he heard the door open and turning, he saw before him an old man with bent form and snowy head. Something in the visitor's countenance struck him as familiar? But he did not recognize him as one whom he had seen before.

"Is Mr. T— in?" inquired the old man.
"My name is T—," replied the editor.

"You?" There was a slight expression of surprise in the old man's voice.

"Yes, I am T—, my friend," was kindly said.

"Can I do anything for you? Take this chair."

The offered seat was accepted; and as the old man sank into it, his countenance and manner betrayed his emotion.

"I have come," said he, and his voice was unsteady, "to do what I could not do for myself alone. But I cannot see my poor, sick grandchild wear out and die under the weight of burdens that are too heavy to be borne. For her sake I have conquered my own pride."

There was a pause.

"Go on," said T—, who was looking at the old man earnestly, and endeavoring to fix
his identity in his mind.

"You don't know me?"

"Your face is not entirely strange," said
T— "It must have been a long time since we met."

"Long? Oh yes! It is a long, long time.
You were a boy, and I unbent by age."

"Markland!" exclaimed T—, with sudden energy, springing to his feet as the truth dashed upon him, "say is it so?"

"My name is Markland."

"And do we meet again thus?" said T—,
with emotion, as he grasped the old man's hand. "Ah, sir, I have never forgotten you.

When a sad-hearted boy, you spoke to me kindly, and the words comforted when I had no other comfort. The bunch of flowers you gave me—
you remember it, no doubt—are still fresh in my heart. Not a leaf has faded. They are as bright and green, and full of perfume as when I first hid them there; and there they will bloom forever—the unfading flowers of gratitude. I am glad you have come, though grieved that your declining years are made heavier by misfortune. Heaven has smiled on my efforts in the world, I have enough and to spare."

"I have not come for charity," returned Markland. "I have hands, and they would not be idle, though it is not much that they can accomplish."

"Be not troubled on that account, my friend,"
was kindly answered. "I will find something for you to do. But first tell me all about yourself."

Thus encouraged the old man told his story.
It was the common history of loss of property and friends, and the approach of want with declining years. T— saw that pride and native independence was still strong in Markland's bosom, feeble as he was, and really unable to enter upon any serious employment; and his first impulse was to save his feelings at the same time that he extended to him entire and permanent relief. This he found no difficulty in doing, and the old man was soon after placed in a situation where but little application
was necessary, while the income was all-sufficient for the comfortable support of himself and grandchild.

The flowers offered with a purely humane feeling, proved to be fadeless flowers; and their beauty and perfume came back to the senses of the giver when all other flowers were dead or dying on his dark and dreary way.

NEW YORK FASHIONS.

White brocade, silk and satins are at present
in great demand, this being the season for weddings, for May and November, we observe, are the months generally selected in this city for such events; the flirtations and courtships for the winter season, and the watering-place campaign, usually terminating in matrimony in the last month of Spring and Autumn. The fashionable material for bridal dresses now, seems to be silk, embroidered or brocade, (we saw a splendid robe for eighty dollars the other day
at Stewart's which we can recommend; grace silk, with flounces richly embroidered.) The veil and berthe, of course, is of point lace, and
the pocket handkerchief, also nearly all of lace, should not cost less than fifty dollars. The mode of wearing the veil now is very beautiful entirely covering the hair and confined by a wreath, with pendant buds and blossoms on each side of the head, mostly shading the face beneath. Jewelry is not worn by brides we observe, but is displayed on a table in her bondair. The elegant presents she has received, of diamonds, pearls, gems, sets of silver, work
boxes, shells, vases, &c., &c., are all ostentatiously displayed, with the names of the donors attached to each gift, at the grand "reception"
for the inspection of the public. Weddings are conducted very sensibly in this city of Gotham,
and like other business transactions here a vast deal is done in a short time.

In other places that we know of, when people agree to be married, become "engaged," it is kept a secret in the family, and perhaps is not positively known until the invitations for "the ball" are issued. Then, those who are asked to go to the party, which is usually on a Thursday evening, and for the next ten days the bride receives the visits of her friends, at home,
where she was married, surrounded by the bride's maids and relations, and dressed as richly
as she can afford, each day in different costume.
For a week or more there are eating and drinking and dancing in the bride's mansion, and then the bride's maids give parties to her and for a month perhaps she is somebody, and is caressed and fêted, and feels sure of being "the observed of all observers." But here there is time for such doings.

The bride of New York does not "Queen it"
for a month but for three hours and thereabouts.
An "engagement" here, is announced in fifteen or twenty minutes after it has taken place. It is known in an hour from Union Square to the Battery. The overjoyed mamma flies around to exult over all other less fortunate mammas whose daughters are still on hand, telling the news and how "entirely satisfactory," the affair is. Then the young couple are overwhelmed with congratulations whenever and wherever they appear, and a great parade is made of buying the trousseau, furnishing the house, &c.
As soon as possible everything is ready and the cards of mamma "at home from two to five,"
with those of the bride and the groom, and sent to every one whose acquaintance they desire, the visiting list of both parties being consulted.

On the appointed day, a band of music is stationed in the hall, a dejeuner arranged in the back parlor, and a man in attendance to receive the carriages, and assist the ladies to alight. A man with pen and paper registers the names as they enter, the groomsmen hand
the guests to the bride, who stands with her lord and master at her right, at the head of the drawing room; bows are exchanged, ices and pate's are devoured, and the people retire with boxes of wedding cake in each hand.

The bride changes her dress, hurries to a Steamboat, and is off for a fortnight on a tour, forgotten until she chooses to re-appear to the world, be it in a month or year. —N. Y. Express.

HINTS TO WOMEN.

This is properly styled a utilitarian age, for the inquiry, "What profit?" meets us everywhere. It has even entered the temples of learning, and attempted to thrust out important subjects, because their immediate connection with hard money profits cannot be demonstrated. There is one spot, however, into which it has not so generally intruded itself—the last refuge of the fine arts and fine follies. Thirty young ladies are frequently sent, merely to learn how to dress tastefully, walk gracefully, play upon the piano, write French, and make waxen plums and silken spiders—all prettily surely; but why not inquire "What profit-
it?"

But I take my pen in hand, not to utter dissertation on female education, but to insist that young ladies be taught chemistry. They will thereby be better qualified to superintend domestic affairs, guard against many accidents to which households are subject, and perhaps be instrumental in saving life. We illustrate the last remark by reference merely to toxicology:

The strong acids, such as nitric, muriatic and sulphuric, are virulent poisons, yet frequently used in medicine and the mechanic arts. Suppose a child, in his rambles among the neighbors, enters a cabinet shop, and finds a saucer
of aqua fortis (ultric acid) upon the work bench,
and in his sport suddenly seizes and drinks a portion of it. He is conveyed home in great agony; the physician is sent for, but ere he arrives, the child is a corpse. Now, as the mother presses the cold clay to her breast and lips for the last time, how will her anguish be aggravated to know that in her medicine drawer was some calcined magnesite, which if timely administered, would have surely saved her lovely child, perchance her first and only boy! Oh!
what are all the bouquets and fine dresses in the world to her compared with such knowledge!

Take another case: A husband returning home, one summer afternoon, desires some accidulous drink. Opening a cupboard, he sees a small box labelled "salts of lemon," and making a solution of this, he drinks it freely.
Presently he feels distress, sends for his wife,
and ascertains that he has drunk a solution of oxalic acid, which she has procured to take stains from linen. The physician is sent for,
but the unavoidable delay attending his arrival is fatal to the patient. The doctor arrives, and perhaps sees upon the very table on which the weeping widow bows her head, a piece of chalk, which, if given in time certainly have prevented any mischief from the poison.

Corrosive sublimate is an article generally used by domestics to destroy the vermin which sometimes infest our couches. A solution of it is left on the chamber floor in a tea-cup, when the domestics go to dinner, leaving the children at play—the infant crawls to the tea-cup and drinks. Now what do you think would be the mother's joy, if having studied chemistry, she instantly called to recollection the well ascertained fact that there is in the hens nest, an antidote to this poison! She sends for some eggs, and breaking them administers the white (albumen). Her child recovers and she weeps for joy. Talk not to her of novels—no little book of natural science has been worth, to her,
more than all the novels in the world.

Physicians in the country rarely carry scales with them to weigh their prescriptions. They administer medicine by guess, from a tea-spoon or the point of a knife. Suppose a common case: A physician in a hurry, leaves an overdose of tartar emetic, (generally the first prescription in cases of bilious fever), and pursues
his way to see another patient ten miles distant.
The medicine is duly administered, and the man is poisoned. When the case becomes alarming, one messenger is despatched for the doctor, and another to call in the neighbors to see the sufferer die. Now there is in the canes-ter of your cupboard, and on the tree that grows
by the door, a remedy for this distress and alarm—a sure means of saving the sick man from threatened death. A strong decoction of young hyacinth, oak bark, or any astringent vegetable, will change tartar emetic into an innocent compound.

TO YOUNG LADIES.

Mrs. Kirkland insisting upon the duty of females to improve their minds while young, quite pertinently asks:—

Who are the women that sow dissension in society—the tale bearers—the whisperers of scandal? The really well informed and accomplished? Those who enjoy the best books, love to read aloud to their friends, luxuriant in high toned poetry—covert the conversation of instructed people, and are able to bare part in it themselves? It is not necessary to answer this question. It is undeniable, that even sincere piety encounters a most formidable obstacle in the emptiness which has led to a habit of gossip and detraction, while an utter distaste to whatever is low and false, protects even the mere woman of the world from this class of faults. On whom does this life of care and trial fall soonest? On her who has made its every day frivolities her object, or on the student of nature, of character of books, whose thoughts have something on which to rest, little dependent on fortune, and not at all on fashion? Who torments us by a petty, prying curiosity which has never been exercised upon objects of real interest? Who that knows how to value books, will be likely to run mad after dress and vulgar show?

It is a mean thing to subscribe for a newspaper
and never pay for it.

THE SHORTEST AFTERNOON. From the 1st to 14th of December, the sun sets in our latitude at 23 minutes after 4, or the earliest in the year. On the 15th of December it will set one minute and on the 31st 9 minutes later; but the shortest morning in the year is about the 5th of January when the Sun will rise 20 minutes later than the first. The shortest day—or the shortest interval between sunrise and sunset—occurs on the 21st of December.—Boston Traveller.

THE SKIN. No part of the human body is neglected so much as the skin. We keep trying to reach the inside parts with physic, at a considerable expense, and upon the outside, the skin, we are not willing to expend so much as a bowl of water. If you want to be well and lively, wash every part of your skin, and give it a good rubbing, once every day.

THE NATIONAL WASHINGTON MONUMENT. At Washington City. The obelisk of this monument is now forty-eight feet high above the surface of the earth. It is fifty-five feet square, cased with marble, with walls fifteen feet thick, leaving a cavity of twenty-five feet. The following states have, in compliance with the invitation of the Board of Managers, offered blocks of stone to be deposited inside of the monument, as a lining to the stair case; Maine, (this has been received, and is a noble piece of granite, with the name of the state in raised letters.) Delaware, New Jersey, Pennsylvania, New York, Vermont, Michigan, (a block of copper), New Hampshire, Virginia, South Carolina, North Carolina, Georgia, Alabama, Louisiana, Tennessee, Mississippi, Illinois, and territory of Minnesota—(this is what is called Eau-à-choc, or red stone, the famous pipe clay of the Indians. The undertaking seems to be exciting a deeper interest in proportion as the work goes on, and the agents in different parts of the country, are increased as fast as possible; though it is somewhat difficult to get good men to act as agents and give the necessary bonds.

A PRICE UPON EVERY MAN'S HEAD. I do not say that every man has his price, actually in pounds, shillings and pence, but I think we can scarcely confute the assertion taken in a wider significance. I do not think we find many men who can resist temptation if it assail them in their weak point, wherever that may happen to be. Most of the instances of known virtue concerning which society are eloquent seem to me to resolve themselves into this,—that man was tried where he happened to be strong, and so withstood the trial easily enough. A generous man is tempted to do a mean action—tempted that is by some arrangement of external circumstances which makes such an action easy and profitable. He does not do it, simply because he does not feel the slightest inclination to do it, and the world cries out in admiration. But let the same man be tempted and fly into a passion, and then to one he yields to the impulse without a struggle. The tempter has only to pay his price and he wins his prey immediately. Truly it is written "it is not in man that walketh to direct his steps."

QUINCY PATRIOT.

SATURDAY, DEC. 15, 1849.

THE LYCEUM.

The eighth lecture was given before the Lyceum by Henry D. Rogers, Esq. of Boston. His subject was "earthquakes and volcanoes."

Commencing with a pleasant allusion to the present political connections of the world, the lecturer proceeded at once to elucidate the principles upon which depend the terrific eruptions, throes and conflagrations of "terra firma."

Upon this subject, he seemed perfectly "at home." Facts were presented with peculiar truthfulness, and conclusions deduced from them with trustfulness and power. The lecture was eminently useful and scientific. Illustrated by painting, it was also entertaining and impressive. A more copious flow of language and a less embarrassed manner of speaking, would doubtless have added somewhat to the beauty of the lecture in the consideration of many. Its absolute value, however, would not have been augmented by a more polished and fluent diction, for scientific facts lose none of their value by a plain and summary narration.

THE STATE PRISON. There are now about four hundred convicts in the Massachusetts State Prison, being more than the prison will accommodate. The cells of the old prison are put in requisition to secure this unequalled increase of criminals.

MELANCHOLY. On Sunday last, as some boys were playing on the ice on a Pond in East Braintree, the ice gave way. Mr. James T. Loring hastened to the assistance of the boys, taking with him a coil of rope, but the ice gave way under him and he lost his own life in his humane efforts to save others. He was a highly esteemed citizen. A lad named John Hill was also drowned.

UNITED STATES MINT. Over $3,200,000 worth of California gold has been received at the Philadelphia Mint for coinage during the year. The estimated expenses of the fiscal year are $80,000; and deducting the profit on copper, $10,000, and deductions from deposits, $14,000, will leave $56,000 necessary to be asked for at the end of the year.

CONGRESS. More than forty ballotings have taken place for a Speaker, and no choice has yet been effected. Much excitement prevails and threats of disunion have been made. At present there is no prospect of an organization of the House.

BURGLARY. The boot and shoe shop of John D. Wheeler of this town, was broken open on the night of the 13th inst., and robbed of six pairs of boots.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK. We invite the attention of readers to the prospectus of this beautiful monthly Periodical published in another column.

CONNECTION WITH NEW YORK. There are "half a dozen" (a Yankee saying) or more communications between Boston and the city of New York. Each of these several routes presents their peculiar claims to the support of the travelling public. We have bound our way to Gotham over the several routes, at various seasons of the year, and under favorable circumstances to form an opinion.

The line by the Fall River Railroad exceeds a trifle over fifty miles, thus enabling passengers to get on board of the steamer, secure their state-room if desired, take supper, and have an hour or more for recreation, before the good New England custom of retiring to bed at nine o'clock arrives.

Early to bed will make you
Healthy, wealthy and wise.

You also arrive at New York about the same time of the boats of other lines, and in season for the different communications towards the South and West.

With reference to the steamers of the Fall River line, all who have knowledge will agree that they exceed in strength, safety and elegance any of the boats that ever plied between the two cities. The commanders of each of the boats on this line are experienced and well understood their calling. In this particular, we may mention Capt. J. J. Comstock of the Empire State, not only a sailor in the good homely phrase, but a gentleman in every acceptance of the term, equally popular and doubtless more so, with the late Captains Bunker and Thayer. There too is Capt. William Brown, of the Bay State—he knows every rope in a ship, and aims not to be excelled, while the courteous Capt. Jewett of the "State of Maine," though last to be mentioned by the established order of the boats, ranks high in the several particulars as a commander and is warmly complimented by all who take passage with him.

Before leaving the Fall River route mention must be made of Mr. Chase, the Clerk, and Mr. Hinman, the Steward, of the Empire State, both of which gentlemen in their several pursuits far exceed the expectations of the passengers—each in their appropriate sphere of duty, being "perfect masters," and you might search "during time" to find their equals. The Fall River route at the City of New York in addition, has secured as agent (Caleb A. Townsend, Esq.) to manage their affairs, who is extensively known, not from outward show or ephemeral honors but from the unassuming yet courteous treatment you receive at his hands, ever ready to give information, when asked, prompt, faithful and efficient in his station, and take him all in all, "An honest man, the noblest work of God."

We shall review the other routes in a few weeks.

ACKNOWLEDGEMENTS. Samuel Curtis Esq. of this town, has sent us a generous donation of Venison for which he, and his associates will accept our warmest thanks. We understand that a party of five, viz—Messrs. Samuel Curtis, Nathaniel White, George Curtis, Samuel V. Hardwick and Luke Rideout, spent a week in the vicinity of Sandwich on a gunning excursion, and during the time S. Curtis killed this deer, which weighed two hundred and ten pounds. They journeyed with Solomon Antiquin, an Indian of the Mashpee tribe, and speak in very high terms of the kind treatment and excellent fare they received.

We must also return our kindest acknowledgements to Adam Curtis Esq., for a liberal portion of pork (spare-ribs) from his great hog recently slaughtered, and of which mention was made. Such acts bespeak more than words can express and are duly appreciated by the recipient.

Our thanks are also due to Hon. M. P. Wilder for a copy of his address before the Norfolk Agricultural Society to which more particular reference will be made hereafter.

"THE FLAG OF OUR UNION." This splendid paper, published by F. Gleason, Esq., Boston, commences a new volume on the first of January, when it will appear in an entire new dress, with newly engraved and improved head and emblematical designs. With the new volume will commence an original and brilliant Novellette, from the pen of Lieutenant Murray, entitled, "The Turkish Slave; or the Mohammedan and his Harem." The "Flag" has the reputation of being the handsomest and best paper issued from the press, devoted to light literature; and we are certain that in the number and character of original novellettes published in its columns it is equalled by few and surpassed by none. The publisher designs to make the coming volume evince an improvement upon its predecessors. The editorial department is under the charge of Martin M. Ballou, Esq.—a gentleman and a scholar and withal a poet—a person eminently qualified to conduct a brilliant and popular paper.

The terms are, two dollars per year invariably in advance. Send in your orders immediately if you would secure all the numbers of the story.

THE VERDICT. The Jury of Inquest over the remains supposed to be those of Dr. Parkman, have rendered a verdict in which they say that these remains have been identified and proved to be parts of the dead body and limbs of Doctor George Parkman; that he was killed in the college building by blows or wounds inflicted by some instrument or weapon, and by means, not known; and that Dr. John W. Webster is the person by whom he was killed. The evidence which led the Jury to this verdict is withheld from the public.

CALL ACCEPTED. Rev. Nelson Clark, of Charlton, (Mass.) has received and accepted an unanimous call from the Evangelical Congregational Church and Society of this town, to be their Pastor. His installation may be expected to take place at an early day.

FIRES. On Monday evening, a two story house formerly owned by Judge Nathan Cushing, deceased, in South Scituate, was destroyed by fire. It was unoccupied, and was no doubt set on fire. No insurance.

A building in Hingham, owned by Messrs. C. & L. Hunt, was considerably damaged by fire on Wednesday morning, and was only saved by the spirited exertions of the citizens. The stock in the store was some damaged. The second story was occupied by the Odd Fellows, who lost most of their furniture.

About half past ten o'clock, Thursday evening, a fire occurred in Hingham, consuming a barn, forty tons of hay and three cows. The fire was seen and caused an alarm in this town.

PACIFIC. A woman in Rochester gave birth to three boys recently. About a year previous she bore three boys, and the whole six are alive and doing well.

BOSTON MUNICIPAL ELECTION. On Monday, John P. Bigelow was re-elected Mayor without any material opposition, and the whig candidates for Aldermen were elected. They also elected the other city officers in ten out of the twelve wards.

RAILWAY GUIDES. The "Pathfinder Railway Guide" for December, published by Snow & Wilder is on our table. Of its usefulness there can be no doubt, and its time tables and other railroad information are "by authority."

"Holbrook's New England Railroad Guide," is another little work of the same sort; very cheap and very useful.

OUTRAGE. Last Saturday morning, as the Dorchester and Milton train of cars was passing near Granite Bridge, some rascal threw a stone through one of the windows; striking the vizor of a gentleman's cap and inflicting a slight wound on his forehead.

FOREIGN. The Europa, which arrived at Boston on Sunday, brings Liverpool dates to the 24th of November. The news is of no great importance.

Mr. Jacob Hays, now in his eightieth year, was recently sworn for the forty-ninth time as high constable of New York city.

Judge Hart of Cincinnati, lately caused the criminal box to be taken out of court, on the ground that no man need be disgraced before he is found guilty of crime.

[From the Boston Chronicle, Oct. 1, 1847.]

Consumption is the greatest curse of our northern latitudes. It is the blight of domestic felicity and the despair of beauty. It robs the cheek of its beautiful bloom, the mind of its serenity, and the eye of its brilliancy. It wastes the form, dims the intellect, and plunges its victim into an early grave. The young and the old, the serene and the gay, the city belle, the country lass, are alike its prey and its victims. Blessings on the man, then, whose genius and research furnished us weapons to bid defiance to this "Devil of the household." He merits the applause and gratitude of ages; he shall have ours, at least.

One of the most important discoveries of modern science, for the cure of pulmonary affections, is the BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY, and the credit of its discovery is due to the celebrated Dr. Wistar.

This valuable compound has restored thousands of lives. It is a expectorant, tonic and demulcent, and is said to be a purely vegetable preparation. Under its magic influence the most obstinate coughs, colds and bronchial irritations disappear.

We have used it and can recommend it, particularly at this season, when the great cause of disease, east winds, are so prevalent.

None genuine, unless signed I. BUTTS on wrapper. Agents—Mrs. E. HAYDEN, Quincy; Oliver Perkins, Braintree.

DR CORBETT'S HIGHLY

Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla.

It is an undeniable fact that no medicine ever brought so much good, so beneficial in cases of Disordered Blood, Liver Obstructions, Scrofulous Taint, Consumptive Habit, and all cutaneous affections, as that of Dr. Corbett's. The distinguished Professor Hayes says: "It ought to have a preference, as the formula exhibits the union of some of the best of our native medicinal roots, and plants with substances of the highest repute as remedial agents, and does not include any metallic compound."

[But read what Druggists say, whose well known characters give full assurity to its virtues.] "The Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla, made by the United Society at Canterbury, is prepared with great care, and the increasing demand for it is positive proof of its good effects. It is now prescribed by most of the Physicians in Boston and elsewhere, which is the best evidence that they give it a preference over any other preparation of Sarsaparilla offered to the public."

Since its introduction, its reputation has been constantly increasing, and its popularity extending in every direction, being recommended by most distinguished physicians.

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

ON THE DEATH OF A PARENT.

In a pleasant home there is gloom to-day,
For a star in its glory has passed away;
A father has fled from the wintry hours
And wended his way with the birds and flowers.

O, weep not, bereaved ones, though chilly and cold
Your father sleeps in the shroud's pure fold;
'Tis a beautiful rest 'neath the dark, damp sod,
For it opens a path to the garden of God.

He has gone, he has gone, Death has broken in twain
A glorious link in love's flowery chain;
Yet ye may not mourn, for the beautiful gem
Is doomed for our Saviour's diadem.

Then make him a grave where the sunbeams play
With the waving grass the living day;
Where the bright streams flow and the glad birds sing,
And the wild flowers bloom in the glorious spring.

For they bear sweet hope in their pleasant bloom
Of a home whose gate is a sunless tomb;
Of a peaceful slumber beyond the grave,
In the arms of him who died to save.

For the Quincy Patriot.

HOPE.

All glorious hope, in shining gear
Of angels from above,
The God of all terrestrial cheer,
You dwell with man in love.

Dark and dreary this world would be Without your brightening ray;
Man, tossed upon life's troubled sea,
Dismal would be his day.

The old and young, the rich and poor,
Alike your bounty share;
Though oft with bubbles you allure
Yet hope is always there.

The earthly pilgrim speeds his way
Through desert's drear and blind;
Enchanted onward day by day,
By dreams and visions wild.

Though thorns do oft obstruct his track,
He presses on his way,
And scorns to falter or turn back,
Looks for a brighter day.

As he draws near the vale of death
His star of hope shines bright,
And dazzles while he gasps for breath,
Till lost in endless light.

ANECDOTES.

"Mother," said Jimmie Oxy, to her venerable maternal relative, "Sam Flint wants to come a courting me to night." "Well, you jade, what did you tell him?" said she. "Oh, I told him he might come. I wanted to see how the fool would act."

Theodore Hook once told an alderman who had already surfeited him, and yet pressed him to partake of still another course—"I thank you, but if it's the same to you, I'll take the rest in money."

"I do declare, Sal, you do look pretty enuf to eat," said Solomon, as he sat eating as fast as he could, replied Sal, with her mouth full.

On board a New Orleans steamerboat, a passenger at the dinner table inquired—"Waiter, have you any tropical delicacies?" "I don't understand French, sir, but I'll speak to the steward." The steward brought a supply of hot potatoes.

"Sir," said Bill's father, "you should have a place for everything." "I have sir," replied the junior, "I have a great many places for everything."

A wag in New York, seeing a man driving a tack into a cord, through the letter F of the word "Boston" printed on it, seized the latter and exclaimed—"Why what are you about? Don't you know that laying tax on tea in Boston once raised a thundering mass there?"

An Irishman seeing one of Van Amburgh's elephants engaged in picking up straw with his proboscis, exclaimed, "He's there!" and what sort of a baste is that eating hay with his tail?"

Revolution in Periodical Literature.
HOLDEN'S
Illustrated Dollar Magazine.

SINCE the death of the proprietor of this popular Magazine, the property has passed into the hands of the subscriber, who will continue to publish it at the Publication Office, No. 109, Nassau St., New York.

THE NEW VOLUME.

To be commenced on the 1st of January, 1850, will comprise many important improvements, which, it is believed, will render the Magazine one of the best Periodicals published in the country, as it certainly is the cheapest. Among these improvements will be new and beautiful type, fine calendered paper, a higher order of illustrations than those heretofore given, and contributions from some of the ablest writers in America. It is the aim of the proprietor to publish a Popular Magazine, adapted to the wants of all classes of reading people in the Republic, which shall be both instructive and amusing; and free alike from the grossness which characterizes much of the cheap literature of the day, and from the vanity of the so-called "Ladies' Magazines." The illustrations will consist of Original Drawings engraved on wood by the best Artists; PORTRAITS OF REMARKABLE PERSONS AND VIEWS OF REMARKABLE PLACES, illustrated by pen and pencil. A strict revision will be exercised that no improper article, or word, shall ever be admitted, so that it may be safely taken by persons of the utmost refinement, and read at the fireside for the amusement or instruction of the family circle.

The Review department of the Magazine will contain brief critical notices of all the new publications of the day, and will form a complete chronicle of current literature.

From the business and literary connections already established, the best assistance that the country can afford will be secured for completing the plans of the publisher, and nothing will be wanting that simple pecuniary resources and watchful industry can obtain to make the Magazine the

Leading Literary Periodical of America.

The extremely low rate at which it is published precludes the hope of profit, except from a circulation greater than that which any literary periodical has ever yet attained; but, with the new avenues daily opening for the circulation of works of merit; the continually increasing population of the country; the cheapness of the Magazine, and the superiority of its literary and artistic attractions to those of any other work now issued; the proprietor fearlessly engages in an enterprise which will be sure to benefit the public if it should not enrich himself.

The Magazine will be under the Editorial charge and supervision of CHARLES F. HOLDEN, who has been connected with it from the beginning.

The "Pulpit Portraits," a series of Biographical Sketches, accompanied by well engraved Portraits of Eminent Divines of the American Churches, which have formed a conspicuous feature of "Holden," will be continued in the succeeding Volumes of the Magazine, and will render it of peculiar value to religious people of every denomination.

THE FIFTH VOLUME

will commence on the 1st of January next, but will be issued on the 15th of December. Each number will consist of 64 Pages, and Numerous Engravings.

The Terms are

ONE DOLLAR A YEAR,

in Advance; the Magazine will be plainly and carefully directed and sent by mail at the risk of the subscriber. As each number will be stereotyped missing or lost numbers can be at any time supplied when ordered, but will be deducted from the time for which payment was received. Remittances may be sent at the risk of the Proprietor, provided a description of the bills are taken, and enclosed in the presence of the Post Master as evidence of the fact.

Five copies will be furnished for $4 and 20 copies for $15. Nos for the year 1849, excepting the month of January, will be furnished at 4 cents each, and Bound Volumes in cloth with gilt edge, from July to December inclusive, at $1 each.

Letters must be addressed to: "Holden's Dollar Magazine, No. 109 Nassau Street, New York," and post paid in all cases. Wm. H. DIETZ, Proprietor.

Cold Weather is Coming!!
GET A STOVE!!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE!" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish, on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook,—as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

New England Air-Tight Cooking Stove,

both by myself and many of my friends, for the past two years, I can, with the greatest confidence recommend it to my numerous customers, with the full assurance that they will find in its use every thing they could desire, and I agree that if any use this and do not find full satisfaction, I will take them back and refund the purchase money. I would invite all who are about purchasing this desirable article to call on the subscriber, (who is sole agent for this town,) and examine the above mentioned Stoves; where will also be found a GREAT VARIETY of other Stoves, both

COOK, PARLOR, OFFICE &amp; SHOP STOVES,

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler heats so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boiler from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,

it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS

is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air-Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.

A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

"OUGHT QUINCY TO HAVE A HIGH SCHOOL?"

Yes. And the following is one of the many arguments which may be adduced in its favor. It may be affirmed as a general principle, that, as the common people of a nation are ignorant and vicious, in that proportion are they subjected to the power of aristocracy, monarchy, and despotism; are they oppressed and degraded; and the women are more miserable than the stronger sex. And on the contrary, in proportion as the common people of a nation are well educated, intelligent and virtuous, are the sentiments of that nation liberal, their institutions benevolent and useful, their government Republican, the common people elevated, and the character of women more highly respected.

I will now give a few examples to illustrate these general propositions. In some of the most ignorant tribes of Africa, we find the people controlled by petty despotic chiefs. The common people of China are generally uneducated, and the government is despotic. The Emperor is styled the Sacred Son of Heaven, sole Ruler of the Universe and father of his people. His highest officers prostrate themselves before him, and when he appears in public, the common people close their shops and flee to their dwellings, for should they be found in the way they would be exposed to instant death. There are nine grades of officers under the Emperor, vested with absolute power over all under their control, even to take life. The common people are taught from their infancy to be obedient to their superiors in rank and to think insignificantly of themselves; and this servility must be done with smiling face and sprightly step. Is it surprising that they should become dishonest, deceitful, cunning and intriguing, and as they are cheated and robbed by their superiors, they should in turn cheat and rob them in false weights, disguising their goods, etc., as they are accused of doing? Are they to be blamed in manifesting an absolute sovereignty over their wives, by yoking them with their teams to drag the plough?

In the despotic government of Turkey, likewise, we have the same coincidence of ignorance, dishonesty and intrigue amongst the common people. Disorder and weakness exist in the different branches of the administration, oppression and recklessness in the provinces, the highways overrun with robbers and insurgents in every quarter.

The common people of Russia are in a deplorable condition of slavery to the nobles, who reckon their property, not by their acres of land but by the number of their slaves. These slaves, who are the great majority of the people, are grossly ignorant, rude in manner, filthy in habits, and much addicted to intoxication. The government is an absolute monarchy.

The common people of Austria are also uneducated and the government is an absolute monarchy.

The common people of Spain are more ignorant still; and before 1847 the government was the most despotic government in Europe, at which time it was limited by a constitution which allowed the liberty of the press and some other privileges.

The monarchy of Portugal was limited by a constitution in 1838. The common people are still ignorant like those of Spain.

As the common people become better educated we find the governments more liberal or Republican. Those in the limited monarchy of Great Britain, perhaps half the common people can read and write, though they are oppressed by an overwhelming aristocracy.

So, also, in Holland, Belgium, Bavaria, and Scotland, the latter a province of England, the governments are limited monarchy, the people better educated, and approaching as rapidly to independence as they are improving in intelligence and virtue.

The common people of Prussia are well educated, and their desire and preparation for independence were strongly manifested a few months since, in their bloody struggle to change their government of absolute monarchy to a republic.

The common people of Switzerland are intelligent and virtuous, brave, industrious, prosperous and happy. Their twenty two Cantons or Districts have long been united into one federal republic over three hundred years, though it has several times been disturbed by different powers.

The only fears we entertain for the Republic of France, is the ignorance and vice of the common people, not half of whom, probably, can read and write.

The independent governments of South America, who caught the fire of freedom from the high altar of our Republic, are establishing their governments by educating their people.

The common people of this Republic are doubtless better educated than those of any other country, and, as a coincidence, their institutions are liberal (if we except the peculiar institution) and the government, with all its faults, the most glorious in the world.

In view of the abject and servile relations of the ignorant and poor to the learned and rich, of all nations, let us ask ourselves the important question, whether our common people are enjoying their full share of the privileges of this Republic? Are they fairly represented in all important offices of trust, honor and profit, in our halls of learning and legislation, courts of justice, and the useful professions, or are these stations supplied from the learned and rich of the higher classes? If so, is it not plain why there is so little sympathy manifested on the part of some of these public servants, towards the three millions of the oppressed, towards as many unfortunate slaves to appetite, and trouble that number of suffering wives and children, towards the thousands of poor widows and respectable young seamstresses who can hardly support themselves properly by laboring sixteen hours a day, and the vast multitude of ragged orphans growing up in ignorance and vice, and that there is so much partiality used in our courts and in all public transactions towards the learned and rich? The remedy can and must be found in having all classes of the people fairly represented, in all departments of society, by persons taken from their own ranks, who can sympathize with and advocate the cause of their suffering brethren before the public tribunal.

But in order to have them there, and to be successful, they must be liberally educated, and to be so educated they must be favored with free public schools of the highest order which can be instituted by a free, patriotic people.

To conclude, let us inquire more directly, why it is that where the common people are ignorant they are oppressed under the crushing power of despotism; and where they are intelligent and virtuous they are independent and happy? The reason is obvious. "Knowledge is power," and in connection with virtue, it is liberty and honor, usefulness and wealth, prosperity and happiness. While ignorance is weakness and slavery, with all its concomitant evils. I appeal therefore to the common sense of the common people whether it is not for the interest of the common people throughout the world, and for all classes, especially of the poor, to have free public schools, to afford not only a common but a liberal education to all classes of the people whose talents and circumstances will justify them in devoting their time to acquire such an education. Most certainly, therefore, must it be the interest of the common people of Quincy to have, not only a High School, but the highest free public school they can justly obtain.

SATURDAY, DEC. 22, 1849.

THE LYCEUM.

E. P. Whipple, Esq., of Boston, delivered the ninth lecture before the Lyceum, upon "character." The Town Hall was completely filled with an intelligent and discriminating audience, and the entertainment was splendid.

We expected much from Mr. Whipple and our expectations were realized. Our literary appetite having been recently sharpened by a perusal of his little volume of lectures, this address was relished with peculiar zest. As a piece of composition it was au fait. Original and rigid in conception, elegant and exuberant in diction, symmetrical in arrangement and pungent in criticism, it riveted attention and extorted involuntary expressions of admiration. A wonderful familiarity with the great ocean of English literature characterize the productions of this young American Macaulay. Incessant application has furnished him with the key of intellectual wealth, and memory retains it with a culture's grasp.

From beginning to end this address upon character was one incessant blaze of intellectual brilliancy and beauty. Like a kaleidoscope, turn it which way you will this lecture presented new arrangements of ideas. It was a perfect mental pyrotechnic. The flashing rockets of Wit and Rhetoric, kept the mental vision continually upon the firmament of Eloquence, and the soul was uplifted and borne upon a path which "the culture's eye hath not seen."

We thought Mr. W's view of the literary efforts of Gen. Winfield Scott was deficient in justice. He exaggerated on the wrong side. In our humble opinion, Gen. Scott does not merit such unqualified disparagement in regard to his "writing English." We have considered this splendid martial Taciturn capable of understanding Syntax, and are still inclined to that belief, Mr. Whipple to the contrary notwithstanding. We think that "hasty plate of soup" has long since been digested although it may not yet have become assimilated to the literary organism of this modern Aristarchus. A man could not have graduated at West Point who was so unskillful in marshalling grammatical principles as to allow his "verbs to go shrieking after their nouns and his pronouns after their relatives."

We are fond of just criticism. We do not consider Gen. Scott an Addison nor a Macaulay but indulge the belief that he can write his vernacular language with propriety, and think the view of Mr. Whipple savors rather more of smartness than of truth.

CHRISTMAS PRESENTS. We have been much gratified in looking over the good collection of Gift Books, Juveniles and Fancy Goods offered for sale at the Quincy Bookstore. We congratulate old Santa Claus upon having such a valuable auxiliary in this part of his dominions. We can seem to see the merry twinkle of his eye as he takes a glance around and thinks of the children large and small who will be supplied from so good an assortment, and we think he will bestow his broadest smile and blessing, in the shape of plenty of good purchasers, when he beholds the honor done him at this establishment by the beautiful Christmas decorations there exhibited, the proprietors taking the lead in this new feature as in all things else which tend to increase the attractions of stores where Presents are sold.

We profess to have some knowledge of Books, their beauty, style, and prices, and we can truly say that in the way of beautiful Annuals and Gift Books we never saw a finer collection or sold at more reasonable prices. We know of no place where these could be purchased at so good advantage, and their collection of Juveniles and Toy Books cannot be surpassed. We sincerely believe it will be for the interest of all buyers to visit this establishment and we hope the highest wishes of the indefatigable proprietors will be more than realized.

VOCAL MUSIC. We wish to call attention to this beautiful and useful though too-much-neglected science. For this purpose we would inform the people in our vicinity that Mr. John Newell, of Boston, a practical and scientific musician, proposes to give a series of lectures upon "Musical Education," in Quincy. He comes highly recommended by one of the best professors of music in our metropolis, and we hope he will meet with that sympathy and support which a competent instructor of this divine art may claim. The first lecture of the series will be given gratuitously, in the Town Hall, next Saturday evening, 19th inst.

NEWSPAPER GOSIP. The big Christmas Brother Jonathan this year is a grand affair, and no mistake; yet we did not suppose its appearance would create so much newspaper talk. Almost every one of our exchanges has something to say about this great holiday Pictorial. The latest report is that over eighty thousand copies were sold during November. Well, it would not surprise us if twice that number were circulated before Christmas, at twelve cents per copy—for it is by far the best thing of the kind ever issued. Wilson & Co., New York, are the publishers.

A place of business is no place for idlers. If you have any business to transact, do it, and go about your business.

SOCIAL ASSEMBLIES. Dancing, or in other words, the poetry of motion, is a delightful and healthy exercise, and one to which the charms and attractions of life itself—the LADIES—are particularly partial. What can equal sweet and enchanting music, a lively, social contra dance, or the elegant gliding in a quadrille or a cotillon, and to crown all a lovely and fascinating partner? The gentlemen of this town have made arrangements for a series of Assemblies to be held at the Hancock House, the present winter, the first of which, as will be seen by the Managers' card in another column, takes place on the evening of the 31st inst. Good music has been provided, and our citizens, married and single, anticipate having a happy and joyous time in dancing "the old year out and the new year in."

A meeting for the purpose of making proper arrangements for these Assemblies was held at the Hancock House, a few evenings since, at which a goodly number of our townsmen were present, and were received by Maj. French with his accustomed urbanity, and also received a more tangible welcome in the shape of comforts for the inner man.

OLD COLONY HOUSE. The hospitable proprietor of this house gave a sumptuous entertainment to his friends, on the evening of the 6th inst. The tables groined under the many good things furnished by the worthy host. There is a hall attached to the Old Colony, which is fitted up in beautiful style, and which was christened EMERY HALL on the occasion. The house has been recently fitted up and travellers may rely upon being hospitably entertained while sojourning at the Old Colony.

We cordially endorse the above statement of our friend of the Boston Pilot. We were present on the above named occasion, and can testify to the bounteous supply and choice quality of the good cheer provided, and also to the good taste displayed in the general arrangements of the house. We noticed among the guests, several of our Quincy friends, who were endeavoring, with epicurean delight, to do justice to the "good things." Mr. P. Holly, the proprietor, is a prince of good fellows, and we recommend him to the patronage of all our friends who may visit the city.

NERVOUS DISEASES OF WOMEN. We have received from Messrs. Fowlers & Wells, of New York, a volume entitled "Chronic Diseases, Especially the Nervous Diseases of Women," from the German of D. Rosch. This is a work in which may be found the causes of matrimonial discord and premature decay, and should be read with thoughtfulness by all, the newly married especially, as it contains truths which probably few have considered. The nervous diseases of women, with their causes, are familiarly treated. The subject is a delicate one to discuss, and of course exceptions may be taken to portions of the work, but 'tis the pure, all things are pure.

SOUTH SHORE RAILROAD. The following gentlemen have been elected directors for the ensuing year:—Alfred C. Hersey, George T. Bigelow, William Humphrey, Boston; John W. Loud, Joseph Loud, Jr., Weymouth; Elliot L. White, Braintree; Joseph C. Donne, Laban Souther, Cohasset. Alfred C. Hersey, Esq., was subsequently re-elected President.

PLYMPTON BRANCH RAILROAD COMPANY. This Company was incorporated to build a road from the town of Plympton, to connect with the Old Colony at Kingston. David Dyer, Esq. has been chosen President for the year ensuing, and Benjamin French, Treasurer.

SHAWLS. A public sale of costly India camel's hair shawls took place in New York, recently. One, a white one, brought eight hundred and seventy dollars; another brought four hundred and seventy five dollars. A large number were sold at prices ranging from one hundred to three hundred dollars, while some went as low as fifteen dollars.

IMPORTANT QUESTION. There are two cases before the Supreme Court at Washington, involving the question whether a State can tax the property of the United States within its limits. The city of Portland insists on levying taxes on the Custom House, and Philadelphia on the Mint.

ANOTHER BURGLARY. The shop of Mr. John D. Wheeler, of this town, was again entered on Monday night last and robbed of a case of boots, valued at thirty dollars.

RESIGNATION. Major General Appleton Howe, of the first division of Massachusetts Volunteer Militia, has resigned, and his discharge has been granted by the Governor and Council.

CONGRESS. No Speaker had been chosen at the last accounts from Washington, although there were hopes that a choice would be effected on the 21st. The Senate has been engaged in forming the Standing Committees.

"THE AMBER WITCH." H. Long & Brother of New York, have sent us a copy of a neat work of nearly two hundred pages, bearing the above title. It purports to be a translation from the German, and according to the London Quarterly Review, "is one of the very few works of fiction, of late years, which bears about it the unmistakable marks of classicality." From a cursory glance at the work we should judge it was one of excessive interest. Price twenty five cents.

FEMALE VOTERS. Garrison, of the Boston Liberator, is advocating the right of woman to exercise the elective franchise. To refuse it, he says, is "an act of folly, injustice, usurpation and tyranny, which ought no longer to be persisted in." A petition to the Legislature, in accordance with the above views, is in circulation.

RIGHTS OF MARRIED WOMEN. The Supreme Court of Pennsylvania has decided recently, that a husband has no claim to the possession of any property owned by his wife previous to marriage, or which may accrue to her after marriage; and that even the consent of the wife, that her husband should have possession of her property, is of no avail while the wife is a minor. This decision is based on the law of 1848, which has wrought a radical change in the condition of married females.

THE NEW YORK EXPRESS. This paper is published in the city of New York by James & Ernest Brooks. The spirit of the "Express" is Whig,—but it is an independent Whig paper, under no obligation but to serve the right, and to condemn the wrong. The proprietors strive to make a newspaper which shall fairly represent the spirit, the character, and patriotic views of the Union, and the whole Union. It is intended to be both a family and a business Newspaper. The terms are $7 for the daily, $4 for the semi-weekly, $2 for weekly.

FOURTH DISTRICT. Monday, the 21st of January, is appointed for another trial for member of Congress in the 4th district of this State.

ANTI-SLAVERY BAZAAR. The ladies' annual "Bazaar" for the sale of a varied and beautiful collection of useful and fancy articles, will open at Faneuil Hall, Boston on Monday next, at 10 o'clock A. M. A notice was sent us for insertion, but was accidentally mislaid until our form was made up.

NOTICES.

Christmas!

There will be appropriate religious services in the Universal Church in this village, on CHRISTMAS EVE, Dec. 24th, commencing at half past 6 o'clock.

The members of the Quincy Charitable Society are reminded that their annual meeting stands adjourned to meet at the Lyceum Room, THIS EVENING, 22d inst., at seven o'clock.

Appropriations for the relief of the needy will then be made. All who feel an interest in the object of the Society are requested to attend.

There will be a lecture before the Lyceum, next THURSDAY EVENING, Dec. 27, at the Town Hall, commencing at seven o'clock.

The question for discussion will be—"Ought Quincy to have a High School?"

WILLIAM B. BURGEE, Sec.

Christmas Evening.

The Sunday School of the Rev. Mr. Lunt's Society, will have a social gathering at the Town Hall, on CHRISTMAS EVENING, at 6 o'clock. The hall will be appropriately decorated, and a

CHRISTMAS TREE arranged for the pleasure and benefit of the children. Suitable exercises, consisting of addresses by friends, singing by the children, glee by a select club, &c. will be performed.

Presents will be distributed to the pupils, who will close the evening, at an early hour, with a dance to the music of a piano-forte.

Refreshments for the tables, consisting of Cakes, Pies and Fruits, will be gratefully received, at the Lyceum Room, on Christmas day, from 9 o'clock A. M. to 2 o'clock P. M., by a Committee appointed for that purpose.

Persons interested in the School or the objects of the occasion, are respectfully invited to contribute.

Tickets, at 25 cts each, may be had of the Teachers or Officers of the School, by making an early application.

Members of the School will assemble at the Lyceum Room, at 5 1/2 o'clock, and receive their tickets, free.

G. F. THAYER, Superintendent.

CONSUMPTION PREVENTED.

That consumption, when once firmly fixed and seated, can be cured, we much doubt; but that it can be prevented, if the proper remedies are applied in season, we firmly believe. A slight cold, a gentle cough, a general derangement of the nervous system, which renders the individual sick or well—these are the symptoms which herald the approach of the fatal destroyer. If these be attended to in season all may be well; but neglect them, and they will be sure to gain the mastery, and what was at first only troublesome and annoying, at last becomes alarming, and often fatal. For incipient consumption, we know of no better remedy than WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY. It is soothing and healing in its nature, and is admirably adapted to allay and dissipate that annoying and distressing irritation which so much prevails at this season of the year, caused by colds, coughs, and chills, brought on by frequent and sudden changes in the weather. We know of several cases which have been radically cured by the use of this Balsam. Some two years since a friend of ours was suffering under what was thought to be confirmed consumption—a severe cough, loss of appetite, night sweats, &c. By the use of this Balsam, he dispelled these alarming encroachments, and is now in the enjoyment of comparative good health.—New England, Washingtonian, Nov. 1847.

FURTHER EVIDENCE

As to the Cures effected by Dr. Corbett's Concentrated Syrup of Sarsaparilla.

Perhaps not in the records of time, has any preparation of remedial agents been brought before the world, which has proved such a blessing to suffering humanity, and saved so many thousands from the grave, as has Dr. CORBETT'S CONCENTRATED SYRUP OF SARSAPARILLA.

Introduced into the system in minute quantities, it occasions no offence as do the drenching Sarsaparilla mixtures of the day. It corrects all disorders of the Stomach, as Dyspepsia, &c., and their attendant evils—Constipation of the Bowels. It dispels acidity, removes all obstructions of the Liver, subdues cutaneous derangement, and goes back to the first great cause of disease, by CLEANING THE IMPURE FOUNTAINS OF THE BLOOD.

It is recommended by the ablest Physicians in the country, and used in their practice.

Read the testimony of one relieved by this medicine, as presented by the able and distinguished Dr. William Prescott.

This may certify, that I have for several years been troubled with Dyspepsia, Scrofulous Affections, General Debility, &c., even from infancy. By the recommendation of my father, Dr. William Prescott, formerly of Lynn, Mass., and now of Concord, N. H., I was induced to make trial of Corbett's Shakers Sarsaparilla Syrup. I have taken two or three bottles, from which I have found great relief. My health and strength have very much improved, and I recommend all who are troubled with similar complaints, to try this valuable medicine. I am still taking this syrup, and feel confident it will ultimately effect a cure. I know of others who are taking this syrup, and are receiving great benefit from its cleansing and healing qualities. LAURA M. PRESCOTT.

DIED.

In Lynn, 10th inst., Mrs. Lucy Jane, wife of Mr. David Atwood, aged 23 years.

OBITUARY.

Died in this town, 6th inst., Miss SARAH JANE ROWELL, aged 29 years and 2 months.

With sentiments of an extremely melancholy character do we notice the decease of this young lady, after an illness of little more than a year, by that fell destroyer—consumption.

"To dwell on the memory of departed worth is softly pleasing though it saddens the soul." The most prominent feature in the character of our much lamented young friend was that amiability, that innocent hilarity and even tenor of temper, which elicited the esteem and affection of friends and acquaintances. She possessed a heart free from all morbidness, and a simplicity without the loss of that delicate enthusiasm which brightens the soul of man. Much do we sympathize with her surviving friends under this irreparable bereavement—but think that the afflative impressions left upon their minds should be much mollified by the recollection of her shining virtues, and the consolatory assurance that while affection and truth shall fill the records of years with her merits and not all excellence, the lapse of time will find her young and lovely image still glittering on memory's dial.

To those who are inhaling the blushing morn of existence, her early demise speaks in the sepulchral tones of Death's appeal, "Thou votary of pleasure! Thou juvenile dreamer! What is life?" Death discriminates not in his victims.

Yes! thou art gone Sarah! gone at last To meet thy loved father, in the skies: Each doubt removed,—the fearful ordeal past—

With Holy Hope, in every feature gleaming,— And Faith triumphs from thy dim eye beaming.

Thy soul has won the ineffable prize: Thy star, on earth has set,—in heaven to rise.

So sinks the sun to rest, at close of day: So calm, so clear, so beautifully bright.

Though gathering clouds obscure his downward way, From out those sombre clouds, his form, emerging, As, to the horizon's brink, he fast is verging, One moment—trembling,—glance he on the night, And gladdens nature, with his glorious light.

Oh, for a hope—Oh, for a faith like thine: To mark life's closing scene,—thou sainted one! Be ours, like thee, to leave at virtue's shrine.

Be ours, at last, like thine, the assurance given, The glorious promise of a home in Heaven,— Like thee to whisper, as life's last sands run, "Father in heaven! Thy will, not mine be done."

CONSUMPTION PREVENTED.

That consumption, when once firmly fixed and seated, can be cured, we much doubt; but that it can be prevented, if the proper remedies are applied in season, we firmly believe. A slight cold, a gentle cough, a general derangement of the nervous system, which renders the individual sick or well—these are the symptoms which herald the approach of the fall disease. If these be attended to in season all may be well; but neglect them, and they will be sure to gain the mastery, and what was at first only troublesome and annoying, at last becomes alarming, and often fatal. For consumptive consumption, we know of no better remedy than Dr. CURET'S CONCENTRATED SYRUP OF SASSAPARILLA. It is soothing and healing in its nature, and is admirably adapted to allay and dissipate that annoying and distressing irritation which so much prevails at this season of the year, caused by colds, coughs, and chills, brought on by frequent and sudden changes in the weather. We know of several persons whose cases which have been radically cured by the use of this Balsam. Some two years since a friend of mine suffering under what was thought to be confirmed consumption, severe cough, loss of appetite, night sweats, etc. By the use of this Balsam, he dispelled these alarming encroachments, and is now in the enjoyment of comparative good health.—New England Washington, Nov. 1887.

New and Suitable Goods for the Coming Season, his intention being to have always on hand A VARIETY OF FASHIONABLE GOODS, among which are to be found, a good assortment of German, French, English and American

BROADCLOTHS, of various Shades and Prices, suitable for DRESS, FROCK AND OVER COATS.

FOR SACKS AND OVRECOATS, Pilot, Devonshire Kersey, Tweeds, Cordington and Castor Cloths, suitable for men's or boys' clothes.

FOR PANTALOONS, New DOESKIN FABRICS, and other denominations of FANCY WEAVINGS, which he offers as particularly acceptable

FOR FALL AND WINTER WEAR. He would also call attention to his AMPLE ASSORTMENT of

VESTINGS, of the most RICH and BEAUTIFUL STYLES, both as regards quality and pattern.

FURNISHING GOODS, Consisting of Caps, Stocks, Cravats, Bosoms, Collars, Flannel Shirts and Drawers. Also, READY MADE CLOTHING, at very low prices.

It will be found that he has adopted the ONE PRICE SYSTEM, a mode which is considered as guarantee against the fraudulent devices of disreputable dealers, as also against the sometimes interminable process of making a bargain. Should there be any who disfavor such a system, they may, by calling at his establishment, find reasons to alter their opinion. Customers are allowed to return every article which on trial is found to have been misrepresented. But we doubt if they will find occasion to do so.

He DOES HIS OWN CUTTING, which he flatters himself he has no need to boast of, inasmuch as it is now too well known to need any man's praise, and least of all his own. He invites the attention of such as expect

Punctuality and Good Workmanship, FOR CASH, such being his rule of business—the REDUCED RATES at which he sells rendering any other mode impracticable. All who thus employ him, he is confident, will have good reason to be satisfied.

The Circassian Oil.

THIS OIL has now obtained a celebrity worthy its high intrinsic merits. The sales have been steadily increased and in public estimation it supercedes all other preparations for the HAIR. The proprietor is constantly receiving testimonials of its great efficacy in restoring the hair in cases of baldness, and it has also been signally successful in curing the various scrupulous affections to which the head and hair is subject. Parents will find the Circassian Oil an article of incalculable benefit to children, in laying the foundation of a

POETRY.

For the Quincy Patriot.

TO THE QUINCY BELLES.

I wouldn't, would you?
I wouldn't give much for a dandy who goes
In buckram and starch from his crown to his shoe—
To marry a man for the sake of his clothes
I wouldn't, would you?

I wouldn't give much for a hairy-mouth loon,
Who has such a cess pool always in view—
To be tied all my life to such a baboon,
I wouldn't, would you?

I wouldn't give much for a rake, old or young,
Who always is changing and never is true;
To have such a subject to wear out my tongue,
I wouldn't, would you?

But if a smart fellow should come the right way,
Whose looks are quite good and his failings are few,
What faint hearted dandy would say to him nay,
I wouldn't, would you? ADDA.

THE PILGRIM MOTHERS.

Exotic blossoms! brought to grace Old Plymouth's rocky glen;
Proud mothers of a noble race
Of stern and stalwart men;
Strong was the trust with which ye braved
The dangers of the sea,
And strong the unseen Power that saved
The mothers of the free?

When swiftly o'er the smiling deep,
The fragile May-flower flew,
While stars their solemn watch would keep
On yonder fields of blue;
Full oft your forms, as slight and fair
As any flower of spring,
Were meekly bowed in trusting prayer,
To Heaven's exalted King.

Cold was your greeting from your shore,
That seemed in dreams so fair;
The wintry tempest's sudden roar
Sung ye a welcome there;
The Indian peered above the hill,
With wonder in his eye,
The noisy sea-birds answered shrill
The tempest spirit's cry.

Oh, Pilgrim Mothers! few the lyres
Your praises to prolong;
Though fame embalm the pilgrim fires,
And trumpets them in song;
Yet ye were to those hearts of oak
The secret of their might;
Ye nursed the arm that buried the stroke
In labor or in fight.

The fire of freedom warmed each breast,
Through many a weary day,
Where pillowed soft in dreamy rest
Our infant fathers lay!
Ye taught them when their simple prayers
Were breathed beside the knee,
The lessons that in after years
Were bulwarks for the free.

Ye taught to spurn the tyrant's claim,
And bow to God alone!
Ye kindled in their breasts the flame
That tremble in your own!
In after years flowed purple gore,
And fields were strewn with dead—
Firm hands the stony banner bore,— Aggression trembling fled!

Oh! Pilgrim Mothers! though ye lie
Perchance in graves unknown,
A memory that cannot die
Hath claimed ye for its own;
A sacredness to that bleak shore,
Your dust shall awe impart;
Your requiem—the ocean's roar,
Your shrine—a nation's heart!

ANECDOTES.

A lad from the 'Green Isle,' whose occupation was that of blacking stoves, etc., bearing in his hand the implements of his trade, addressed a denizen of the city, who was standing at his door, with 'Hav your honor any stoves to polish this morning? I'm the boy for that business.' The person addressed, not being of a courteous manner, gruffly answered, 'Go about your business.' Pat moved a few steps off, to be out of the reach of a kick, and replied with a knowing wink, 'Your honor would not be the worse for a little polishing yourself, I'm thinking.'

A witty young lady was listening, not long ago, to a very original and eloquent orator. A gentleman remarked of a particular passage that it was 'exceedingly rare.' 'Nay, indeed,' said the lady, 'I think it uncommonly well done.'

'Little boy, how many kinds of fire are there?'
'Four Ma'am.'
'What are they called?'
'Wood fire, coal fire, cam fire, and fire away like fury.'
'That will do, you may go to the head.'

'Pray, Mrs. Zibriska, why do you whip your children so often?' 'La, Mr. Worthy, I do it for their enlightenment. I never whipped one of them in my life, that they did not acknowledge it made them smart.'

Voltaire once praised another writer very heartily to a third person. 'It is very strange,' was the reply, 'that you speak so well of him, for he says that you are a charlatan.' 'O!' replied Voltaire, 'I think it very likely that both of us may be mistaken.'

A young gentleman was discoursing very dogmatically about the appropriate sphere of woman. 'And pray, sir,' screamed out an old lady, 'what is the appropriate sphere of woman?' 'A celestial sphere, madam!'

A gentleman having occasion to call upon a physician, stopped at the door and rang the bell. The summons was answered by a servant girl, of whom he inquired if the Doctor was in. 'No,' 'Was his lady in?' 'Yes.' 'Was she engaged?' The girl looked at him a moment, while a serious expression settled on her features, as she replied: 'Why no, she is already married.' The gentleman smiled.

Revolution in Periodical Literature.
HOLDEN'S
Illustrated Dollar Magazine.

SINCE the death of the proprietor of this popular Magazine, the property has passed into the hands of the subscriber, who will continue to publish it at the Publication Office, No. 109, Nassau St., New York.

THE NEW VOLUME,

To be commenced on the 1st of January, 1850, will comprise many important improvements, which, it is believed, will render the Magazine one of the best Periodicals published in the country, as it certainly is the cheapest. Among these improvements will be new and beautiful type, fine colored paper, a higher order of illustrations than those heretofore given, and contributions from some of the ablest writers in America. It is the aim of the proprietor to publish a Popular Magazine, adapted to the wants of all classes of reading people in the Republic, which shall be both instructive and amusing; and free alike from the grossness which characterizes much of the cheap literature of the day, and from the vagrancy of the so-called 'Ladies Magazines.' The illustrations will consist of Original Drawings engraved on wood by the best Artists; PORTRAITS OF REMARKABLE PERSONS AND VIEWS OF REMARKABLE PLACES, illustrated by pen and pencil. A strict revision will be exercised, that no improper article, or word, shall ever be admitted, so that it may be safely taken by persons of the utmost refinement, and read at the fireside for the amusement or instruction of the family circle.

The Review department of the Magazine will contain brief critical notices of all the new publications of the day, and will form a complete chronicle of current literature.

From the business and literary connections already established, the best assistance that the country can afford will be secured for completing the plans of the publisher, and nothing will be wanting that ample pecuniary resources and watchful industry can obtain to make the Magazine the

Leading Literary Periodical of America.

The extremely low rate at which it is published precludes the hope of profit, except from a circulation greater than that which any literary periodical has ever yet attained; but, with the new avenues daily opening for the circulation of works of merit; the constantly increasing population of the country; the cheapness of the Magazine, and the superiority of its literary and artistic attractions to those of any other work now issued; the proprietor fearlessly engages in an enterprise which will be sure to benefit the public if it should not enrich himself.

The Magazine will be under the Editorial charge and supervision of CHARLES F. BRIGGS, who has been connected with it from the beginning.

The 'Pulpit Portraits,' a series of Biographical Sketches, accompanied by well engraved Portraits of Eminent Divines of the American Churches, which have formed a conspicuous feature of 'Holden's,' will be continued in the succeeding Volumes of the Magazine, and will render it of peculiar value to religious people of every denomination.

THE FIFTH VOLUME

will commence on the 1st of January next, but will be issued on the 15th of December. Each number will consist of 64 Pages, and Numerous Engravings.

The Terms are

in Advance; the Magazine will be plainly and carefully directed and sent by mail at the risk of the subscriber. As each number will be stereotyped missing or lost numbers can be at any time supplied when ordered, but will be delivered at the time for which payment was received. Remittances may be sent in the risk of the Proprietor, provided a description of the bills are taken, and enclosed in the presence of the Post Master as evidence of the fact.

Five copies will be furnished for $4 and 20 copies for $15. Nos for the year 1840, excepting the month of January, will be furnished at 4 cents each, and Bound Volumes in cloth with gilt edge, from July to December inclusive, at $1 each.

Letters must be addressed to 'Holden's Dollar Magazine, No. 109 Nassau Street, New York,' and post paid in all cases. Wm. H. DIETZ, Proprietor. Dec. 1.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR
Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven, gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE.

It is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 8, 10 or 20 persons with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS

is attached to the front, affording, of itself, ample convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air-Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.

A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

These Stoves of the different sizes may be examined at the

Cold Weather is Coming!! GET A STOVE!!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook—as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

CHRISTMAS HYMN.

By Rev. Wm. P. Lunt.

Sung at the Celebration of the Sabbath School connected with the Unitarian Society in Quincy.

CHILDREN.

1. The Christmas Tree! The Christmas Tree!
Twas planted long ago;
The angels sang their Hymn above,
As we sing ours below;
Of auld lang syne we sing,
Of Christmas long ago;
The angels sang their Hymn above,
As we sing ours below.

2. The Tree by holy hands was set
In days of auld lang syne;
Its boughs with heavenly dew were wet,
And hung with fruit divine.
Of auld lang syne we sing, &c.

3. Thousands have met around the Tree
In days of auld lang syne;
Have plucked the fruit, and thankfully Enjoy'd the food divine.
Of auld lang syne we sing, &c.

4. The Tree with gifts has loaded been
From days of auld lang syne;
And still through leaves of living green
The Saviour's presents shine.
Of auld lang syne we sing, &c.

TEACHERS.

5. Come, children, take the gifts you see,
And to your minds recall
The fruit upon the heavenly Tree
That grows and blooms for all.
Of auld lang syne we sing,
Of Christmas long ago;
The angels sang their Hymn above,
As we sing ours below.

MASSACHUSETTS.

By J. G. WHITTIER.

The south-land hath its fields of cane,
The Prairie boasts its heavy grain,
And sunset's radiant gates unfold
On crowded marts and sands of gold.

Rough, bleak, and cold, our little State
Is hard of soil, of limits straight;
Her yellow sands are sands alone;
Her only mines are ice and stone.

From Autumn frost to April rain,
Too long her winter woods complain;
From budding flower to falling leaf,
Her summer time is all too brief.

But on her rocks, and on her sands,
And stormy hills, the school house stands;
And what her rugged soil denies,
The harvest of the mind supplies.

The treasures of the Commonwealth
Are free, strong minds, and hearts of wealth;
And more to her than gold or grain,
Are cunning hand and cultured brain.

For well she keeps her ancient stock,
The stubborn strength of Plymouth rock;
And still maintains, with milder laws
And clearer light, the Good Old Cause!

Nor heed the skeptic's puny hands,
While near her School the Church-spire
stands;
Nor fears the blinded bigot's rule,
While near her Church-spire stands the School.

ANECDOTES.

An illustrious minister down south, was speaking of the entry of Christ into Jerusalem, when the multitudes cast their garments in the way, and cut down branches and strewed them in the way. He had somehow taken up the idea that this was done with malicious intent. "Ah, my friends," said he, "these wicked Jews were determined to prevent the entrance of our Saviour into Jerusalem! They threw their garments in the way; they even went and cut down trees and put 'em in the road; they made all sorts of opposition and hindrance; but, blessed be God, they could not stop that col!"

A traveller stepped into a village bank, and immediately pulled off his hat, coat, and cravat; this done, he cast a look at the cashier, who was seated in a corner, and with a commanding shake of the head, said, "Hadn't you better be getting that water heated?" The teller informed him he was in the wrong "shop." "You are in a bank, sir, not a barber's shop!" "A bank, eh?" ejaculated the stranger; "why, they told me it was a shaving shop!"

Dr. — was walking down the street the other day, when he saw two boys on the sidewalk apparently searching for something. One of the boys remarked, just as he reached them, "Well, five dollars is worth hunting after." So the Dr. stopped and searched awhile. Finally he got tired, and said to the boys, "Have you lost a five dollar bill?" "No, sir," said they, "but we didn't know but what we could find one." The Dr. sloped.

Jeems asked a friend to go with him to church. "No," said the gentleman, "I'll send my wife; I never go to church except by proxy." "Ah," said Jeems, "I am afraid that people who worship God by proxy must expect to go to heaven the same way!"

Two prim ladies entered complaint against a neighbor for bathing in a stream five hundred yards from their door; and when asked how they could recognize him at that distance, replied "Oh, we used a spy-glass."

Cold Weather is Coming!!
GET A STOVE!!!

"I WANT to buy the best COOKING STOVE" is a remark often made, but few succeed in accomplishing this wish, on account of the great variety of patterns to be found in the market. There is no article of domestic use of so much consequence as a good Stove. A poor one that will not draw, will fill the room with smoke, injure the furniture and make every one about it cross; but with one which draws well, burns Coal or Wood well, and BAKES well and quick, it is a pleasure to cook,—as all will bear me witness. Having thoroughly tried the

New England Air-Tight Cooking Stove,

both by myself and many of my friends, for the past two years, I can with the greatest confidence recommend it to my numerous customers, with the full assurance that they will find in its use every thing they could desire, and I agree that if any use this and do not find full satisfaction, I will take them back and refund the purchase money. I would invite all who are about purchasing this desirable article to call on the subscriber, (who is sole agent for this town,) and examine the above mentioned Stoves; where will also be found a GREAT VARIETY of other Stoves, both

COOK, PARLOR, OFFICE &amp; SHOP STOVES,

among which is a new and elegant

Parlor Stove, for Wood or Coal, with or without Ovens.

Also—FURNACES, BAKERS, BRITANIA & JAPANNED WARE; TIN AND SHEET IRON WORK Made to Order,

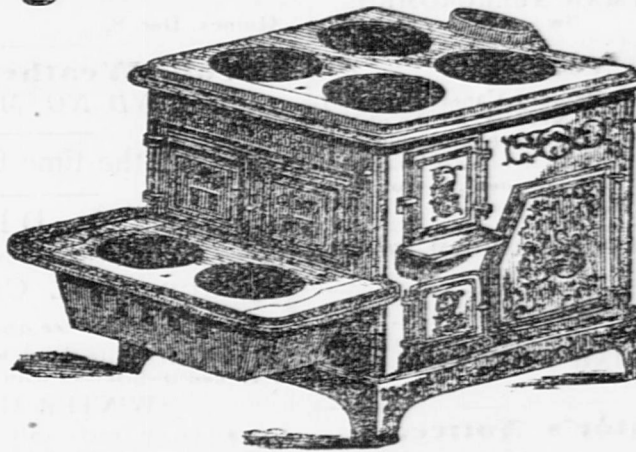

As good as the Best.

CHARLES HOLMES.

Quincy, Sept. 15.

P. LOW'S UNION HOT AIR

Cooking Stove and Fuel Saver.

THIS is a most beautiful and extraordinary Cooking Stove. The even and regular application of the heat to the Oven gives this Stove all the advantages of a brick Oven—while at the same time the boiler holes are so constructed that the heat is immediately applied to the boilers from the fire pit, which makes this stove the most complete and finished Air Tight Cook Stove in America.

AS A COAL COOKING STOVE,

it is just suited for the use of families in cities and villages, and will perform the cooking of a family of from 2 to 5, 10 or 20 persons, with certainty and despatch. The fire-chamber is constructed of a size, form and depth, to burn coal with the greatest freedom and economy. WOOD may be used with equal advantage by simply dispensing with the brick lining of the fire-chamber.

A SUMMER APPARATUS

is attached to the front, affording, of itself, simple convenience for light summer work, without the unpleasant effects and expense of heating up the main body of the stove; it may also be used at the same time that the rest of the stove is occupied, greatly adding to its value, and rendering it altogether the most efficient Cooking Stove for the class of families for whom it is expressly designed, ever yet invented.

Any person who will give this stove a fair trial, will be convinced of its superiority for Economy, Convenience and DURABILITY, over any other Air Tight Cooking Stove.

Its price brings it within the means of all families who want a good stove.
A pamphlet containing a description and directions for fitting up and using this Stove is furnished, gratis, to every purchaser.

Tin and Sheet Iron Manufactory

E. S. FELLOWS, Agent for the above Stove, has also for sale at his Store, the REGULATOR, ECONOMIST'S, and various other patterns of Cook Stove, as well as PARLOR, OFFICE, and CYLINDER.

SHEET IRON, TIN AND COPPER WORK done to order,

Of the best Materials, and in a workmanlike manner.

MISCELLANEOUS. DOMESTIC TROUBLE. Mrs. Harry Monteth sat in her room in her hand. A large fire blazed in the four corners of the room, glowing etian blinds, and deepening the rose of the young wife. She was waiting her husband from his counting house, wondering at his absence, so unusual. He had often said that those ever green spots in his life; and she felt a whole day's separation to have his side. What could detain him?

The door-bell rang. She started, only a messenger, telling her not to his "new goods" had arrived, and packing them.

"Then he will not be here for a moment, as she resumed her seat with a sigh. "Oh, I wish Harry were here!" The beautiful volume of day's present from him, an elegant "Wife's Own Book"—had suddenly appeared; even Washington Irving's sketch of the misadventures of his life, the heroic devotion of the noble interest her. She opened her plate that usually mingled with her tea, and perceived, sweet words of praise, were she had lost its power to amuse; she thought, to while away the hours, would cross to the mansion of an mother's. So leaving a message to low her, if he should not return in set out.

It was but a few steps, and when the door she dismissed the servant, pined her, charging him to deliver Mr. Monteth without fail. Mrs. Russell, to see her dear Agnes, and after inquiries concerning her domestic they gradually began to discuss the important duties of married life—She particularly on the obligations of her husband, as the lord and master and heart. Agnes disliked this language, and after a little while replied, "But, my dear madam, we are in a situation when we marry, such as the his owner. Ours is the bondage of my experience, I pronounce it an is more energetic, more firm and he should hold the reins, and if a woman is softer, milder, and more gentle submissive, I am certain he exact any thing from me that I can. This was uttered with a confidence Russell shook her head and sighed replied.

"My poor girl, you have been a month, and the 'honey moon' is so Wait until the end of the present. You do not agree with you do; but now enough in my family to know he boast of my domestic peace. Youriage is."

"But, Mrs. Russell," exclaimed Harry, my husband, is not—"sister" "Is not what mine is," said "Why do you hesitate? I saw you your countenance. That is very yet what John Russell is, but he is Wait until the rose fades on your light dims in your eye."

"Oh!" exclaimed the young wife always but just as well as he do content. I am not too exacting best affections, and I rely confidently. I will not court mine the days to come, when my beauty expires like a flower, and I am left a wreck for those who may need his services in the DENTAL ART. My facilities for the manufacture of Teeth, of new and superior style, and perfectly life-like in appearance, will enable me to excel.
